Douglas Asks Presidential Help to Balance Budget, Halt Outlay, Insure Credit

Director's Estimate Sets 1935 Expenditures at 2½ Billion.

Solution Is Seen To 'Sound Money'

Recommendations Seek Surplus of Billion in Fiscal Year.

By Elliott Thurston.

By the end of this week President Roosevelt must make decisions on the budget which Director of the Budget Lewis Douglas believes will go far to resolve the question of "sound money," and pave the way for stabilization of the dollar, possibly by next spring.

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Douglas laid recommendations before the President yesterday which call for a definite stand now against further large Federal outlays or commitments.

These recommendations are represented as tantamout to an assurance to the country that Federal credit is secure and that there will be no need to resort to "greenbacks" or to the "printing presses" to pay the government's bills. On the basis of the budget director's calculations, a resolute stand now against new or continued heavy expenditures will make possible a surplus of well over a billion dollars in the fiscal year 1935, sufficient in his judgment to cover all present or prudent Federal obligations.

Must Refuse Demands.

This means, however, that the President would set his face against rising demands in Congress for all sorts of new spending, including another $3,300,000,000 or more for public works outlays, against continuation of R. F. C. operations after next March, or of the so-called civil works benefits to the unemployed after mid-February, and against a wide variety of schemes to have the government pay off farm mortgages, &c.

If this, or possibly a close compromise, is adopted the Administration can about solve its monetary difficulties the Budget director believes. Until then the persistently recurring rumors of impending stabilization appear to be premature.

Morgenthau, Acting Secretary of State Phillips and other officials were kept busy again yesterday denying the latest stabilization rumor, which appears to be deduced

Liquor Levy Slash Asked Of Conferees By President

Congress Group Warned That Bootleg Trade Must Be Ended.

$2.20 Per Gallon Rate Is Suggested

Huge Amount of Illegal Rum Still Remains, Parker Asserts.

By Leon Dure, jr.

Under President Roosevelt's injunction to keep paramount the purpose of eliminating the bootlegger, congressional leaders departed a long conference at the White House late yesterday to formulate liquor taxes substantially lower than have been proposed.

To Congress the President left the question of how much to exact from the revived industry, but members of the Senate and House fiscal committees were clearly given to understand that, above everything else, the President wants prices sufficiently low to abolish the liquor racketeer.

Despite tempting revenue possibilities, "the President thinks to stop bootlegging is more important than raising a few more dollars," said Senator Pat Harrison, Democratic chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

This view of the tax problem, which was taken as clear indication the Administration believes the proposed $2.60 a gallon rate is too high, will be taken before a joint hearing of the Senate group and the House Ways and Means Committee today by James H. Choate, jr., chairman of the new Federal Alcohol Control Administration, and Edward G. Lowry, member of the F. A. C. A.

Earlier in the day the two committees heard L. H. Parker, congressional tax expert, place at 50,000,000 gallons the estimated amount of illegal liquor now in this country, which will be absorbed, he pointed out, at cut-rate prices. His testimony followed expressions of annoyance by Republican members over failure of Administration leaders to appear.

To go over the whole situation, and established the Administrator's attitude, President Roosevelt summoned Senator Harrison, Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House committee and six other members of the two groups for a conference. Also attending were Mr. Choate, Mr. Lowry and Harris Willingham, also a member of the F. A. C. A.

Mercury Due To Hit 16 Here

Cold Grips Entire Nation; 6 Dead, Property Loss Above Million.

A maximum temperature of 16 degrees above zero was predicted for Washington before dawn today, as a cold wave gripped the entire Nation.

Yesterday's highest recording was 42 degrees at 10 a. m. A bright sun did little toward warming things up, and by 10:30 o'clock last night a 20-degree drop was registered. Tomorrow's forecast calls for snow or rain.

Meanwhile, blizzards, floods and below-zero temperatures left the Nation's toll at six persons dead, one missing, hundreds homeless and upward of a million dollars in property damage.

The country's coldest point was Owl's Head, N. Y. The mercury hit 24 degrees below zero, setting a December record. Several midwestern States also reported below-zero temperatures.

Warnings of "severe cold" were sounded from Chicago to Boston last night. While the Nation sought fireside comforts, weather statisticians declared present temperatures were "far below normal."

Brunt of the cold wave was felt in the Pacific Northwest. Storm and flood deaths were reported. Baltimore, Philadelhia, and Delaware reported deaths from the cold. In western Pennsylvania two mail planes crashed with ice-crusted wings. The pilots escaped injury.

Some relief from frigid temperatures is promised in many sections of the East today.

Wynekoop, Freed, To Aid His Mother

Chicago, Dec. 11 (AP).—Shortly after Earle Wynekoop, 27, was released today from State charges in connection with the strange operating death of his young wife, Rheta, he visited his accused mother and promised to devote himself to efforts to obtain her vindication of the slaying.

With his brother, Walker, the young widower rushed to the county jail after the State freed him by a surprise nolle prosse to a charge of being an accessory to the mysterious death. The prosecution said it was unable to connect Earle with the death.

7 Escape Fire Trap 100 Feet Under River

Men Imprisoned Hour and Half as Flames Destroy Scant Air Supply in Bridge Caisson; Faced Drowning.

Kansas City, Dec. 11 (AP).—Seven men, pier workers in a bridge-building caisson, lay imprisoned by fire on the bottom of the Missouri River today while deadly smoke rolled within 12 inches of them before they were saved.

The "sandhogs," gasping for the scant fresh air remaining in the tank 100 feet beneath the surface of the river, had thought death inevitable as belching flames sent even thicker rolls of gaseous smoke down to them. One hour and 30 minutes after the fire, of unknown origin, broke out 70 feet above them, two barrels of water were dumped from a crane, extinguishing the blaze.

"We thought we were goners," one of the men said. "If we had stayed down there ten minutes more we would have all been dead."

They had confronted the danger of fire cutting off the air pressure, which keeps water from flooding the tank.

The men, all of whom made their way to the surface unassisted, were: J. J. Murphy, foreman; Jack Wright, James and Erwin Bradley, brothers; Jack Smith, John Lacey and Robert O'Dell.

They were working on one of the piers which will support a bridge across the Missouri River near the Fairfax industrial district of Kansas City, Kans. The pier has been a troublemaker, having slipped out of position on a previous occasson.

An eighth workman, James Martin, narrowly escaped the ordeal, emerging from the tank just as the fire was discovered by Ray Neier, superintendent of the pneumatic pressure pump.

The dense wall of smoke forced the seven imprisoned men from a standing to a kneeling position as they sought to find the little lifegiving oxygen remaining. Finally they lay prone.

Above, surface men labored frantically. The Kansas City, Kans., fire department brought gas masks, but even with them rescuers were unable to remain in the smoke-filled shaft long enough to battle the flames. It was then that the huge crane was brought into successful use.

NRA Board Of 7 Resigns In Bay State

Letter to Johnson Decries Lack of Cooperation and Assistance.

Lowell, Mass., Dec. 11 (AP).—The entire membership of the Lowell compliance board of the NRA today resigned in a letter to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, National Recovery Administrator, decrying lack of cooperation and assistance.

The seven board members informed Gen. Johnson that they had been "forced to conclude that effective and prompt action in the enforcement of the NRA is not desired either by the State recovery board or by authorities at Washington."

P. A. O'Connell, Boston merchant and prominent member of the State board, said he knew of no dispute between his board and the Lowell group.

"We cooperate with everybody and Washington says we have the best board in the country," said O'Connell.

In Conflict With Barbers.

Locally the board was known to have been engaged in controversy with barbers who insisted that the board, contrary to its own views, take over jurisdiction of prices and hours of labor of that business.

Richard B. Walsh U. S. commissioner for this district and chairman of the board, declined to amplify contents of the letter to Gen. Johnson. Other members referred to Walsh as their spokesman.

The board members' letter to Johnson said:

"We hereby tender our resignations as members of the Lowell NRA Compliance Board. We take this action not because we begrudge the time and effort necessary to accomplish the work required. We gladly have given our time and would continue to do so, but we have been forced to conclude that effective and prompt action in the enforcement of the NRA is not desired either by the State Recovery Board or by authorities at Washington. We repeatedly have requested cooperation and assistance which has not been afforded us. We have been obliged to perform our work in an atmosphere of criticism, which has been annoying and embarrassing. Consequently we believe that the interests of everyone concerned will be better served by our retirement."

11 Nuns Escape Death In Summit, Ill., Blaze

Chicago, Dec. 11 (AP).—Eleven nuns were trapped by fire on the second story of the St. Blaze School and Convent in Summit, Ill., today by flames that swept the basement and first floor.

Four women were carried out by firemen, overcome by the smoke. The others were assisted to safety. Damage was estimated at $5,000.

Cleaners Win In First Clash On NRA Rule

New Price Minimum Study Assured After Stormy 7-Hour Hearing.

Cleaners and dyers opposing prices fixed by NRA for their industry won the first skirmish of their battle yesterday when they obtained a promise from the Recovery Administration that the prices would be restudied.

The promise was made by Arthur D. Whiteside, deputy administrator, after a public hearing lasting several hours. He said that if possible a decision would be reached by Friday, but he did not indicate the nature of the changes to be considered.

A parade of cleaning shop owners from throughout the country entered the hearing to defy the Government's right to enforce 65 to 95 cents as the minimum retail prices they could charge for cleaning a suit of clothes.

Few Now To Be Prosecuted.

The hearing ended with the promise of a reconsideration of price demands, an indication that few if any of the present violators would be prosecuted, and a definite warning that whatever levels finally are agreed upon would be enforced.

Amid an atmosphere of tenseness, and a storm of booes, applause and hisses, the witnesses asserted the prices set up under authority of the cleaning and dyeing code are wrecking cash-and-carry cleaners, victimizing consumers who can not afford the code minimums, and causing unemployment by reducing trade as much as 60 per cent. Worker layoffs have been as high as 23 per cent, it was said.

Brought to Washington to explain why they had dared to disregard the minimum prices, the alleged violators defended themselves so vigorously that it freely was predicted after the hearing that many of the price schedules would be revised.

Scathing Attack on Rates.

Maryland and Virginia cleaners were in the van of leaders who attacked the minimum, but it was the Morningside Laundry, of Silver Spring, Md., which stole the show with a scathing attack on the 95-cent minimum of the Washington trade era after countless cash-and-carry cleaners had insisted they could make a profit by charging from 40 to 75 cents for cleaning, and a Philadelphia, a Richmond man and a Roanoker had recited stories of code hardships.

The first day resolved itself into a discussion of the prices because Hampstead, England, Dec. 11 (AP). An operation was performed today upon George Lansbury, British Labor leader, who fractured his thigh in a fall Saturday night.

American Dance Team Draws Applause of Britain's Rulers

London, Dec. 11 (AP).—The American musical comedy stars, Fred Astaire and Claire Luce, drew applause from King George and Queen Mary with a dance from "The Gay Divorce" in a command performance today.

The king and queen leaned forward in their seats to watch the artists. The crowd cheered their arrival at the Drury Lane Theater for the performance, funds of which went to King George's pension fund for actors and actresses.

After a week's shooting at Sandringham, the king and queen and the Duke and Duchess of York returned today to London for seven days before entering on the Christmas holidays in Norfolk.

The King and Queen of Denmark have also arrived for Christmas shopping. They were met at the station last evening by the Prince of Wales and members of the Danish Legation, but otherwise their visit will be entirely private.

Something of an innovation in royal custom occurred yesterday when King George and Queen Mary paid a royal visit on a Sunday. They inspected a mammoth new hotel, near the Marble Arch, which opens this week, remaining nearly an hour.

Soon after entering, the queen recognized former Inspector Bridden, for several years her personal police attendant, now superannuated and appointed enquiry officer for the new hotel.

In the kitchen the head chef, a Frenchman, was presented to their majesties, who conversed with him in French. The king was interested to learn he was well acquainted with the head chef at Buckingham Palace.

Paris Opens Arms Talks With Hitler

Direct Negotiations Start as Envoys Meet in Two Capitals.

Understanding Is Sought to Salvage Wrecked Geneva Parley.

Paris, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—The long-awaited direct disarmament negotiations between France and Germany were launched simultaneously in Berlin and Paris today.

Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour received the German Ambassador, Roland Koester, at the Quai d'Orsay, while in Berlin Chancellor Hitler conferred with the French Envoy, Andre Francois-Poncet.

Paul-Boncour instructed Francois-Poncet to inform Chancellor Hitler that the preliminary direct arms discussions, however, would prove useless if Germany insists on fulfillment of Hitler's demands of November 23, asking that the Reich be permitted to build up its army to 300,000 men.

Inasmuch as Hitler indicated he intended to stick by that demand, the negotiations got under way to a bad start.

The United Press learned that both at Paris and Berlin the statesmen centered on the procedure of future conversation, in which it was hoped an understanding would be reached salvaging the wrecked Geneva arms parley.

Budget Estimates Passed.

The opening of negotiations directly with the Nazi regime coincided with passage of the government's 1934 budget estimates by the Chamber of Deputies after a dramatic all-night session.

The government hesitated to venture into delicate international negotiations with Hitler until assured of a solid parliamentary majority. Premier Chautemps, however, now feels his cabinet is sufficiently strong to deal directly with Germany as well as to meet Italy's maneuver to reorganize the League of Nations.

Fresh instructions were sent to Ambassador Francois-Poncet prior to his audience with Hitler, it was revealed. The envoy was aked to request enlightment on certain points in his program for these direct negotiations.

It was understood that French demands concern the Nazi program for military organizations. Hitler recently demanded that the Reichswehr be increased 300,000 men, to give Germany a professional army of 400,000, while conserving Hitler's militia.

Clue to Future Attitude.

The fact that the French did not begin by definitely rejecting the German plan for rearmament was considered highly significant. However, the Reich's attitude toward Nazi storm troopers and their part in the arms program possibly will dictate France's future attitude.

Meanwhile, return of the British Ambassador, Lord Tyrell, tomorrow from London was awaited in French official circles. He was expected to bring the reply of Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, to the French demand for precise definition of Britain's reported favorable attitude toward Germany's rearmament.

Berlin, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—Chancellor Hitler and Foreign Minister von Neurath discussed direct arms negotiations between France and Germany with the French Ambassador.

No Gag, Officers—Just a Toothache!

Woman's Search for Ease Starts Wild Police Chase.

A car bearing Florida tags drew up in front of the University of Maryland Dairy yesterday and two men alighted.

On the back seat, declared student dairy clerks, Charles Bittinger and Morris Sinsheimer, was a woman—gagged!

She tried to alight, but was pushed back as the car drove off northward. State police at the Laurel substation were notified by the clerks, who gave chase in another car.

At Laurel, State police, with guns drawn, halted the car. The men were overpowered. The woman, wan and sickly and still gagged, was taken into the station. The gag was removed. Weakly she explained—she had a toothache!

General Strike Call Put Up to A. F. of L.

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—The executive council of the United Textile Workers of America announced today it had adopted a resolution urging the American Federation of Labor to call a special convention to consider the advisability of a general strike to enforce the 6-hour day and 30-hour week with no reduction in weekly income.

Gen. Hugh Johnson, NRA Administrator, will be asked by the institute to allow it representation on all textile code committees.

The institute charged that in all sections of the country violations of the code are threatening to disrupt the beneficial effects of the Recovery Act.

Peek Named To Find New U. S. Markets

Chester C. Davis, AAA Production Chief, Is Slated for Job.

Federal Agency Formed to Unite Foreign Trade Efforts.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

In an effort to end the quarrel which for several weeks has disturbed the A. A. A. President Roosevelt yesterday announced the selection of George N. Peek, agricultural administrator, to head an organization which will be formed to coordinate Government activities in the promotion of American foreign trade.

Mr. Peek will leave his post as agricultural administrator immediately to head as "special assistant to the President on American trade policy" a temporary committee which will recommend the permanent machinery for the promotion of export trade and the negotiation of reciprocal tariffs, barter and other international arrangements.

Davis Slated for Post.

The report of the committee is expected in about two weeks, when Mr. Peek will take charge of the new organization. Meanwhile it was reliably indicated that Chester C. Davis, now chief of the production division of the A. A. A., will succeed Mr. Peek as agricultural administrator.

The possibility exists that several other A. A. A. officials, who have been sympathetic with Mr. Peek during his controversy with the "young liberals" of the brain trust, may either follow him into the new export trade organization or leave the Government service.

Under the direction of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Mr. Davis, the A. A. A. now will proceed with a farm relief program that will emphasize curtailment of agricultural production, rather than marketing agreements and efforts to fix artificial price levels. Mr. Peek was an advocate of the latter method of farm relief, believing acreage reduction only a temporary solution.

Milk Code Revision Due.

Probably the first step toward reversing some of the policies prevailing under the Peek regime will be a revision of the score or so milk price agreements, which have not been as successful as expected. It was Secretary Wallace's criticism of these agreements in a press conference last week which brought the A.A.A. controversy into the open.

Disclosure of the President's plan to set up a special agency to coordinate Government activities behind promotion of foreign trade revived possibilities that Mr. Roosevelt will ask the next Congress to give him wide and blanket powers to negotiate reciprocal tariff agreements.

President Roosevelt wanted this power last spring, preparatory to the London Economic and Monetary Conference negotiations. He postponed asking for it, however, when it became apparent the conference was destined to fail and when it became certain that the special Congress session would be unduly prolonged if reciprocal tariff question were raised.

Decision Follows Conference.

The White House statement announcing Mr. Peek's new status, however, indicated President Roosevelt still is wedded to promoting American exports through reciprocal tariff agreements. Since he has no power to adjust tariff rates in exchange for similar concessions abroad, it was assumed he would seek the right in January.

Announcement that Mr. Peek would leave the A.A.A., forecast last week in The Post, was made after President Roosevelt conferred for

German Air Crash Kills 2 Americans

4 Others Die, 4 Hurt in Berlin-Hamburg Plane.

Hamburg, Dec. 11 (AP).—Six persons, including two New Yorkers, were killed today in a crash of a Lufthansa passenger plane of the Berlin-to-Hamburg route near Hamburg.

The Americans were Emma Amalia Armstrong, Astoria, Long Island, and Frank Barber, of New York. Barber, 65, was a native of England and a naturalized American. The woman was born in Sweden and was naturalized.

Two other victims, the Prussian State Counselor, Gustav Wagemann, and Pilot Grutzbach were killed outright. Radio Operator Wien and another passenger died later in a hospital. Four other passengers were badly hurt.

Insull Prosecutor Waits New U. S. Move

Athens, Dec. 11 (AP).—There were strong indications today that the United States has not abandoned efforts to get Samuel J. Insull, sr., of Chicago, back to America to stand trial on charges of embezzlement.

Forest A. Harness, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, is here, reported awaiting more documents from Washington.

Farmers Hail Federal Aid; Pledge Faith

Optimistic Message From Roosevelt Answered With Praise.

Chicago, Dec. 11 (AP).—The American Farm Bureau Federation today received a message of agricultural optimism from President Roosevelt, and responded with expressions of stanch support of its leaders for the President's program of farm recovery.

Although declaring "we seem to be on our way," the President's message admonished that full support and complete cooperation from the farmers were essential to final success.

Even before the Presidential message was read to the assemblage of 1,000 farmers by their leader, Edward A. O'Neal, Alabama cotton farmer and head of the federation, the convention was reported as firmly in support of Roosevelt and his policies.

Silver Resolution Drawn.

The resolutions committee was reported to have drafted a resolution expressing such sentiment and calling upon the President to continue his program without deviation. Another resolution was reported to ask that Congress consider seriously the possibility of remonetization of silver, which O'Neal advocated in his opening address.

President Roosevelt's message said that the Administration's farm program under the agricultural adjustment act already had done some good for farmers, but said that more time was needed.

"The members of the Farm Bureau know, as I do," he said, "that the maladjustment between supply and demand has been years in the making, and that it can not be corrected overnight. Nevertheless, in a few short months the whole complexion of the agricultural outlook has been changed."

"Not Yet Out of Woods."

The President recounted the steps already taken to aid the cotton, wheat, corn and hogs farmers by planned production, and said that those activities, combined with the NRA, had brought improvements to both city and farm.

"But in all candor," he continued, "I think a brief moment of gratification is enough. We seem to be on our way, but we are not yet out of the woods, and it is of the utmost importance that we guard against letting a rise in farm income tempt us to forget the realities of supply and demand."

O'Neal said, in calling for united support of the A. A. A., the NRA and the President's monetary views:

"Look back to the place we started from last February, when the whole

U. S. Seeking Stabilization, Paris Avers

American - British - French Dicker Reported Despite Washington Denial.

(Copyright, 1933, by the United Press.)

Paris, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—Despite denials from Washington, reports persisted in well-informed quarters here tonight that Federal Reserve bank officials have been in negotiations with the Bank of France and the Bank of England in an effort to effect the early stabilization of the dollar and pound sterling.

The United Press was informed in banking circles that the Federal Reserve Bank recently made overtures to officers of the Bank of England, suggesting joint stabilization of the pound and dollar—both off the gold standard in the near future.

The Bank of England then sounded out the Bank of France on the possible repercussions of such a stabilization plan on the gold franc, it was revealed reliably.

Roosevelt Offer Reported.

Statements from Washington to the contrary notwithstanding, the report persisted tonight in authoritative quarters that President Roosevelt promised the Bank of England and the Bank of France that he would not raise the price of gold offered by Washington above $34.50 an ounce, without first consulting them.

French bankers interpret this to mean that the President is almost satisfied with the dollar's present level and ready to try to stabilize it, possibly before Congress meets early in January.

Fear Loss of U. S. Capital.

The British were said to fear withdrawal of millions of dollars of capital sent to London by Americans when the United States abandoned the gold standard last spring. Similarly, the French fear that high interest rates and the speculative possibilities in New York may attract foreign capital at present seeking safe refuge in France, still on gold. This sum is estimated variously at between 12,000,000,000 francs (about $732,000,000 at today's exchange) and 25,000,000,000 francs ($1,525,000,000).

Finance Minister George S. Bonnet repeatedly has warned of the possibility of withdrawal of capital from France following the stabilization of the dollar and pound sterling, unless France's finances are put on a sound basis. Approval of the Government's 1934 budget estimates in the chamber of deputies early today was regarded as a vital step in that direction.

The 1934 budget estimates were discussed by the Finance Commission of the Senate tonight and approval appeared likely. The Bourse in Paris had a boom trading day as a result.

Al Smith's Alma Mater Burns; Heroic Cat Dies in Fish Fry

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Al Smith's alma mater caught fire today and Minnie the Moocher died a heroine.

The "school" is Fulton Fish Market—venerable, smelly, famous—where Smith says he was graduated with the F. F. M. degree.

Minnie was the house cat and a mother.

Two sections of the market were destroyed by flames. It was page 1 news here because Smith worked there as a young man when red herrings were fish and not political expressions.

Minnie was the only casualty. Employes of the market, who have kept the cat and her numerous progeny supplied with fish, took her from the burning loft, but she ran back to save four kittens.

More than 600 employes were driven into a snowstorm as the flames ate through the stalls.

James Roosevelt Goes To Hospital in Boston

Boston, Dec. 11 (AP).—James Roosevelt, son of President Roosevelt, was a patient tonight in the New England Baptist Hospital, suffering from a slight intestinal disorder.

Dr. Sara M. Jordan, Roosevelt's physician, said his condition was not serious but that he would be confined to the hospital for a week or 10 days.

Dern and Ickes Go to Hospitals

Interior Chief Cracks Rib in Fall; War Secretary Has Infected Eye.

Sick rooms of two Government hospitals yesterday became "head offices" for the War and Interior Departments.

For several days at least, functions of the two departments will be carried on from the Naval and Walter Reed Hospitals. Secretary of War George H. Dern is in the latter with an infected right eye. A fall on the ice sent Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes to Naval Hospital with a fractured rib.

No alarm was felt for either cabinet member, but several days of "rest and observation" were ordered.

Physicians warned Secretary Dern against continued use of his eye and prescribed hospital treatment and complete relaxation from office work. It is expected he will return to his desk by the end of the week.

Victim of a fall on ice glazed pavement in front of his home in Spring Valley, Secretary Ickes was reported "resting comfortably" last night. He suffered a broken right rib and muscular disarrangement.

The Secretary was en route to his office when the accident occurred. He fell heavily on the sidewalk, but insisted on continuing to the Interior Department.

During the morning pain increased and aids suggested an examination. X-rays disclosed the extent of his injuries and Capt. Ralph W. McDowell, senior surgeon at the Naval Hospital, ordered him to bed.

Welles to Leave Cuba Definitely Within Week

Is Optimistic on Chance for Coalition Before He Departs.

By Kendall Foss.

Sumner Welles, Ambassador to Cuba, will leave Havana for good some time this week, it was understood at the State Department yesterday.

Before he leaves, it is hoped a coalition government will come into being. Negotiations to this end are brisk, it is reported from Havana, and Welles is felt to be definitely optimistic. There is reason to believe that the next few days will witness the climax of these discussions, one way or the other.

Ambassador Welles is known to favor coalition as the solution of Cuban troubles and thought to be anxious to see such a government set up before he departs. He is believed to share the view frequently found among followers of Cuban affairs that the Grau San Martin government does not represent any substantial section of the population.

Grau Likely to Be "In."

Apparently the former goal of "coalition without Grau if possible, but coalition at any price" has been amended to read "coalition at any price." President Grau may resign his present office, but he and his followers are unlikely to be left entirely out in the cold in any coalitionary arrangement.

The two leading groups which must be included if a coalition is to have a future are the student A. B. C. and the Nationalists under Mendieta. There seems to be more willingness to cooperate with Grau on the part of these factions than was hitherto the case.

One reason for this is that Cuban irritation over Washington's delay in granting recognition found little sympathy at the Pan-American conference. Latin American states at Montevideo have been strangely unwilling to take part in the time-honored game of baiting Uncle Sam. In the case of the Cuban problem it may be due to the fact that several South American countries have rebellious student movements, likely to go revolutionary on short notice, and are therefore unwilling to do anything suggesting approval of student overthrows.

Move Speeded Up.

In any event, lack of anti-American support in Montevideo appears to have speeded up negotiations in Cuba looking toward a more stable government.

Nevertheless it is still felt to be touch and go as to whether Welles will be able to report the establishment of a promising coalition before surrendering his post. Should such a coalition come into being, it is believed American recognition would follow shortly.

Jefferson Caffery, hitherto Assistant Secretary of State and long slated to succeed Welles in Cuba, will proceed to Havana after Welles' departure. At present, he is vacationing at his home in Louisiana, whence he intends to go straight to his new post. He is scheduled to act representative until such time as as President Roosevelt's personal representative until such time as recognition permits terming him an ambassador.

Upon his arrival in Washington, Welles will confer with Acting Secretary Phillips on recent Cuban events and then take over his new duties as Assistant Secretary in Caffery's place. Undoubtedly, he will also discuss matters with the President.

London Keeps Eye on Dollar

British Short-Selling Halts as Price Stays Fixed; Leak Occurs Again.

London, Dec. 11 (AP).—Stock Exchange and financial circles were said today to be keeping close watch on the prospects of American currency stabilization and to be expecting such action eventually.

The key to the situation, these circles said, is held by President Roosevelt.

United States currency closed in the official market at $5.11¼ to the pound and continued to improve in late afternoon transactions today until it stood at $5.08¾, an appreciation of 6¾ cents to the pound from last week.

Announcement from Washington that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's price for gold would not be changed served to check short selling operations which at the opening drove the dollar down by 2 cents to the pound. The news accentuated the effects of moderate commercial buying and covering by some short traders.

The French franc also improved in relation to the pound during the day, as did other gold currencies, but after reaching a quotation of 3.15 to the pound it later fell off, to finish at 83.37.

In Paris, the United States dollar closed at 16.17 francs (6.19 centimes to the franc), 5 centimes lower than Saturday.

London, Dec. 1- (U.P.).—Private messages disclosing today's price of gold as announced at Washington once more reached London today ahead of the official press releases. Their source was not disclosed.

Artist's Suicide Laid To Hope of Early Fame

Chicago, Dec. 11 (AP).—A friend told a coroner's jury today he believed Richard M. Crisler, jr., striving young Texas artist, committed suicide in the hope that his paintings would become famous after his death.

"Richard often told me," testified John Wohlfrogh, "that artists never became famous until after they died. He wanted very badly to have his work recognized."

Senator Pat Harrison (left), chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Representative Robert L. Doughton, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, talk things over before the joint hearing on liquor tax problems.

Conferees Plan to Reduce Proposed Taxes on Liquor

Congress that the tax be not so high as to give the bootlegger security," Senator Harrison said as he emerged from the conference, "that we want to put it down to a minimum."

The discussion was general, the senator explained, adding that Mr. Roosevelt did not mention specific figures, since he intended to leave that to Congress. Opposition to the interdepartmental committee's $2.60 recommendation has become general among members of the Congressional groups, who favor a considerably lower rate.

$2.20 Rate Is Suggested.

Suggestion was made in the meeting, Senator Harrison said, that the tax be reduced to $2.20, which would raise $400,000,000 for the Administration's program—"a sweet morsel" in itself, despite the cut, he pointed out. No decision was reached, however, he emphasized. Twenty per cent of the revenue would go to States that did not impose gallonage taxes of their own, confining themselves to the occupational tax field.

Concerning this feature, Mr. Harrison remarked that some States are already assessing the volume tax. "That is to be regretted," he added, explaining the policy of reserving to the Government the gallonage tax, which would take the place of all other Federal revenue measures, was favored.

Also discussed with the President was the question of tariffs, which drew from the senator the statement: "It may be necessary to give the President the power, if he hasn't the power, to enter into reciprocal trade agreements." By this means the Administration proposes to negotiate favorable trade treaties with liquor and wine exporting countries.

Incidentally, the present $5-a-gallon tariff on spirits was considered "a little high," the senator said, which indicated a change might be effected. Wine was discussed generally, he added, with opinion prevailing taxes on this beverage should be much less in relation to spirits.

Reasonable Retail Price.

As Senator Harrison wedged his way from the White House Executive offices, Mr. Doughton explained his opinion of how the troublesome liquor tax should be determined. First, "a reasonable retail price" should be agreed upon, he said, from which should be subtracted the cost of the beverage. The difference would be the tax. A good price, the committee chairman thought, should be between $1.20 and $1.50 a quart.

Others attending the conference were Senators Walter L. George, William H. King, James Couzens, and David I. Walsh, of the Finance Commitee; Speaker Henry T. Rainey, Representatives Samuel B. Hill and Allen T. Treadway, of the Ways and Means Committee, and Mr. Parker, tax expert. Mr. Treadway and Senator Couzens were the only Republicans.

Besides the Administration's two delegates—Mr. Choate and Mr. Lowry—the committees today are scheduled to hear a lengthy list of representatives of distillers and other manufacturers affected by repeal. Tomorrow four representatives—John J. O'Connor, Theodore A. Peyser and Emanuel Cellar, all Democrats, New York, and Frank H. Buck, democrat, California—have asked to be heard.

Mr. Buck disclosed yesterday that California grape growers feel the proposed 16-cent a gallon tax on wines below 14 per cent alcoholic content is too high. Pointing out that 200 gallons would be tax free, he feared that wine-making might become general if the present 6-cent tax is raised too much.

Irked by the nonappearance of Treasury experts as the joint hearing got under way yesterday morning, Mr. Treadway criticized the delay and urged adjournment. After some argument and Senator Harrison's statement that the Treasury would be prepared by today, the committee members heard Mr. Parker.

Under questioning by Senator King, the expert estimated that between 40,000,000 and 50,000,000 gallons of illicit whisky are on hand. "It takes that much to carry on business," he said, adding that the amount would now compete with legalized spirits.

Consumption Is Estimated.

The expert said consumption for the first year would be about 140,000,000 gallons, about the same as before repeal, later estimating that imports would be between 20,000,000 and 25,000,000 gallons. Canada, he said, offered the principal source as it has on supply about that amount.

Answering questions by Representative Knutson, Mr. Parker estimated the legal supply of spirits in this country at 23,000,000 gallons. That would not necessarily mean heavy importations, he said, as "good liquor can be made in a short period."

While the witness expressed the view that if the liquqor tax is not kept below $2 a gallon, serious difficulties might be expected from bootlegging, Representative Crowther said that the Ways and Means Subcommittee studying taxes had determined that any price above $1.50 would be too high.

Many members of the two committees have been outspoken against the $2.60 tax proposal. Representative Thomas H. Cullen suggested in a talk with President Roosevelt during the morning that the present $1.10 tax be continued for a trial period. Low taxes also are favored by others, among them Representatives James V. McClintic and John W. Boehne, jr., the former urging the present rate, the United Press reported.

Meanwhile, Dr. James H. Doran, director of the Distilled Spirits Institute, said unofficial reports indicated the cost of liquor is dropping, according to the Associated Press. Any general decrease, however, might be delayed by demands of the coming holiday season.

Bank Cashier Kills Bandit

Second Robber Captured in West Virginia $1,300 Holdup.

Adrian, W. Va., Dec. 11 (Spl.). Within a half hour after two bandits held up the Bank of Adrian, 7 miles from Buckhannon, this afternoon, taking $1,300 one was dead and the other in jail at Buckhannon.

Confronting Hill Stump, cashier, and French See, assistant cashier, with guns the bandits grabbed the money, backed out and drove away. As they departed, one clubbed See with a revolver and Stump shot him as he ran.

The automobile was captured near Buckhannon with one bandit in it. The other was found fatally wounded along the road.

The prisoner said he was Lee Haskins, 30, of Detroit. An identification on the dead man gave the name of John Malik, also of Detroit. The stolen money was found in the men's pockets.

Pawtucket, R. I., Dec. 11 (AP). Six persons, including a woman and a police officer, were injured and an automobile burned in a strike riot near the gates of the Hamlet Manufacturing Co. here today.

Three of those injured were workers. They required hospital treatment. Roland Mercier, a newspaper reporter and State representative, suffered a fractured nose when hit with a rock.

He said he has been planning it since 1929.

Cleaners Gain In First Parley On NRA Ruling

New Price Minimum Study Assured After Stormy 7-Hour Hearing.

the NRA, due to protests of price cutting, advanced the date at which the temporary schedules were to be considered for revision. Violations will be taken up individually tomorrow.

One of the alleged violators is the Morningside Laundry.

It was Walter N. Russell, of this laundry, who sounded the keynote of the price opponents.

"We believe the established prices in the District trade territory (95 cents), were formulated without regard to the true cost of cleaning and pressing, and will result in such loss of business that widespread unemployment will result.

Customers Complain.

"We believe the prices were fixed without proper consumer representation. Many of our customers have told us the prices are unfair. Thus, 95 cents virtually would eliminate us from the business."

The prices charged by the laundry, he added, ranged from 65 cents foa a suit to $2 for some fancy gowns, and covered delivery and call.

"And they have given us a handsome profit of 20 cents on $1," he said.

Division Administrator Whiteside asked whether the Morningside Laundry was abiding by the minimum prices. Russell replied he was not; that he could not do so justly, since he already was paying more than code wages.

"To charge more would not be justified," he added. "It would shut out many wage earners who could not afford 95 cents. We would be forced to discharge many employes."

Some of the witnesses were verbally jostled by Whiteside. An earnest, middle-aged man from Warsaw, Ind., declared he was paying code wages and employing a man he did not need because he wanted to abide by the agreement as much as possible, but that it had been impossible for him to raise his price to the 95-cent code figure.

"The big cleaners from Fort Wayne came into our town and solicited business. We had to cut to keep it home. I built up my business on a 75-cent price. I couldn't raise it. The people in my district couldn't pay more."

"Aren't you just a little ashamed?" Whiteside admonished.

"No. Not at all," the witness replied evenly.

"Then I feel I shall have to write to the compliance board about you," Whiteside retorted.

Says He Was Bombed.

Bernard Shotkin, owner of a chain of 60 cash-and-carry shops in Philadelphia, walked down the aisle amid a storm of applause from the cleaners who want the minimums revised, only to run into a chorus of hisses from those who want the higher minimums retained to eliminate "cut-throat racketeering and copetition."

Whiteside, who was conducting the hearing with Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson and Administrative Assistant Frances M. Robinson sitting by, sharply rebuked the crowd for "this nonsense."

"It's the racketeers doing that," shouted Shotkin into the stage amplifier which carried his voice above the tumult. "Mr. Whiteside, I've had bombs thrown at my wife and baby. Acid thrown at my girls. My stores have been wrecked. Bombs have been thrown at my windows. I've been told I was going to be bumped off."

His voice was hoarse with emotion when he complained he had been forced to rase his price to 85 cents.

Whiteside wished he would speak a little more moderately.

"You wouldn't be able to speak moderately if you had seen your girls burned by acid, bombs thrown at your wife and baby, and your business ruined by these racketeers," Shotkin retorted.

Charges Packed Hearing.

Shotkin insisted he had made $20,000 last year with a price of 40 cents per suit and could continue to do so and pay union wages. But the crowd laughed.

"It's a packed meeting, Mr. Whiteside," he shouted. "Bus load after bus load came down here yesterday just to pack this meeting. But I'm going to tell the truth even if I get bumped off tomorrow."

That was a sample. The faction which wanted the code minimums retained was to have its day in court later, and through the first hearing they were represented only by Allan Hofheimer, of Norfolk, Va., who appeared in behalf of 115 cleaners in tidewater Virginia and the northeastern part of North Carolina.

All of the cash-and-carry men demanded either a low set minimum of from 40 to 65 cents, or a differential which would permit them to charge less. Their views were presented with especial feeling by S. L. Levman, of Richmond, who clashed with Whiteside.

"I can not see why it should be unjust for me to give a differential to a customer who performs part of the service by bringing his garments to my shop. Why should I have to charge as much as the cleaner who collects and delivers. You are going to live to regret it, and the public will not support you."

Whiteside interrupted to say, "Now you are speaking to the committee." The witness had been gesturing to the audience amid the usual booes and applause.

"I thought I was speaking loud enough for everybody to hear," Levman replied.

Others said their business had dropped from 40 to 60 per cent, that they had been forced to lay off employes. Hal Howard, representing the Howard cleaners of Washington, Baltimore, New York and Connecticut, declared 23 per cent of their 297 employes had been dropped because an attempt to abide by code prices had cut their receipts 46.8 per cent.

Socialists Aid Spain Fighting General Strike

Foreign Legion Reported Marching; Bombs Subdue Rebel Post; 93 Dead.

Madrid, Dec. 11 (AP).—The menace of a general strike today occupied Spain, already clouded by three days of revolt and bloodshed in 12 of its 50 provinces.

As acts of violence diminished following the capture by government troops of a rebel garrison in the Villanueva military barracks, the government turned its attention toward the strike threats.

At nightfall a Nation-wide official report said order was restored in practically all troubled areas and that the strike was decreasing in importance as Socialists ordered intimidated workers to return to their posts. Commerce and industry functioned almost as normal.

The cruiser squadron at Ferrol, a naval base, received orders to be ready to sail at a moment's notice in the event force was necessary in any port.

Socialists Oppose Strike.

(A dispatch from Gibraltar said it was rumored there a detachment of the Spanish Foreign Legion would be brought to Spain tonight. British tourists planning excursions into Spain abandoned them.)

Syndicalists (whose aim is general recognition of union labor) and anarchists, charged with stirring the insurrection because of dissatisfaction with the recent congressional election which swept the Rightists, or Conservatives, into dominance in the nation's Congress, made active efforts to extend the strikes.

But the Socialist party, by far Spain's largest, numerically, condemned the strike, the government said, and refused, with a few exceptions, to affiliate with the movement.

Food shops will remain open, government spokesmen said, as lines formed in Madrid today to purchase bread, fearing a shutdown. All Rightist organizations, including Fascists and Monarchists, were marshalled by the administration in an effort to crush the movement.

Troops Charge Barracks.

Principal syndicalist strikes were in the cities of Madrid, Barcelona, Saragossa, Granada, Ferroll, Oveido, Coruna, Logron, San Sebastian, Santander, Algeciras, Cadiz, Teruel and Huesca.

Reports said the countryside was quiet today except at Ovideo, where several arrests were made after an attempt to force the crew of the gunboat Pradura to revolt. A railway bridge was damaged by a bomb near Bilbao, but was repaired before a train passed.

The list of known dead was brought to 93 today when government troops, after hours of bombardment, charged the rebel barracks at Villaneuva and captured it. Eight rebels were killed.

Negro Civic Body Weighs Rum Plan

Executive Board Somewhat Confused by Activities.

Local option liquor control for the District and the present activity of citizens' associations presented a puzzling question to the executive board of the Federation of Civic Associations last night.

The federation comprises twenty-one colored civic organizations, which cover the entire District of Columbia. Unless action of white associations is correlated with that of colored associations, confusion was foreseen to ensue.

George W. Beasley, president of the colored federation, would not give an opinion last night, but it is believed that a satisfactory civic association agreement can be worked out so that liquor will not be forced into colored areas where it is not desirable.

New Quarters For Trade Unit Agitated Anew

Members of Commission to Confer With Fine Arts Chairman.

Agitation for a new home for the Federal Trade Commission which has been recurrent for years was renewed yesterday with the announcement that members of the trade unit will confer today with Dr. Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, on plans for new quarters.

Both the trade and arts groups, as well as the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and other governmental agencies, are scheduled to occupy the proposed Apex Building. Although its construction authorized by Congress two and a half years ago, an appropriation was never made because of economies.

Quarters Called Firetraps.

Erection of the Apex Building alone remains to complete the Triangle development bounded by Pennsylvania and Constitution avenues and Sixth and Fifteenth streets. It will be located, as its name implies, at the easternmost apex.

The Trade Commission's present quarters in a wartime temporary building at Twentieth street and Constitution avenue have been branded a firetrap and sweatbox. Its housing needs and the necessity of starting work promptly on the Apex Building are believed to have been discussed by President Roosevelt, Secretary Ickes and Dr. Moore at a White House conference last week.

For 14 years the Trade Commission has occupied the temporary building, which eventually will be razed in Constitution avenue's building development. It has 375 employes.

Bar Ends Next June.

It was said at the Treasury Department yesterday that the Apex Building has been delayed by retrenchments and Congress' provision, made subsequent to authorization, that no appropriation should be made during the 1934 fiscal year, which ends next June 30.

There is no bar, however, to the allocation of public works funds and officials are of the opinion that the President's favorable attitude toward an adequate housing program will hasten action by the P. W. A.

A design for the Apex Building is being drawn up by Bennett, Parsons & Frost, Chicago architectural firm. The supervising architect's office said yesterday the building will cost an estimated $2,000,000 to $2,500,000.

U. S. Employs 2,500 Artists Under Subsidy

Assured Livelihood, They Have Free Hand on Public Buildings.

Twenty-five hundred American artists were given the opportunity yesterday to pursue their work with assurance that while they are working the Government will keep the wolf from their doors. The plan is a part of the relief program and constitutes a Government subsidy of art on a grand scale.

The artists will actually be in the employ of the Government, engaged in decorating Federal buildings and working on other public projects. They will, however, be given a wide latitude as to their media, including mural painting, sculpture and any other type of art that can be considered of decorative or of historical value.

The Public Works Administration will supply the money to pay the artists under a plan instituted by L. W. Robert, jr., Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, who will supervise the work, assisted by the advisory committee to the Treasury on Fine Arts. Forbes Watson will be technical adviser. Headquarters will be in the Treasury Building.

14 Regional Units.

The work will be carried on throughout the United States by 14 regional committees which will select artists in their respective territories. All applications will be received by them direct. No applications will be considered by the central headquarters in Washington.

The advisory committee to the Treasury on fine arts includes: Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, chairman; Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture; Harry L. Hopkins, Civil Works Administrator; H. T. Hunt, general counsel for the Public Works Administration; Frederic A. Delano, director of the National Planning Commission, and Edward Bruce, secretary.

"In approving the public works of art project," Bruce said, "Mr. Hopkins has recognized that the artist, like the laborer, capitalist and the office worker, eats, drinks, has a family and pays rent, thus contradicting the old superstition that the painter and the sculptor live in attics and exist on inspiration.

Esthetic Stimulation.

"As a result, the American artist is now included in the 4,000,000 men to be put to work under the civil works program. The approximately 2,500 artists, now unemployed, are to be given employment in their own field under conditions calculated not to deflate their inspiration.

"The movement to bring the American artist within the compass of the employment plans of the Government is potentially more than an employment plan, not only because the work produced by the artists working for and paid by the Federal Government will become the Government's possessions, but also because the employment of approximately 2,500 artists by the Government can not fail to stimulate the creative efforts of American artists.

"This is the greatest opportunity that the artists of this or any other country ever have had to show their mettle. It is a call to them to make good and to prove that they have something worth while to say. It is an opportunity to sell themselves to the country, and I know they will answer the challenge."

Adorn Public Buildings.

The artists will work in Federal and other publicly-owned buildings throughout the country. These may include buildings which are supported wholely or in part by tax funds, such as Federal and State administrative buildings, buildings on Indian reservations, parks, public schools, hospitals, land-grant colleges, customs houses, courthouses, municipal libraries, museums, zoos and other public structures.

The artists also will be employed in making pictorial records of national activities, especially under the recovery program, and to improve the craftsmanship of furnishings of public buildings.

Watson emphasized the principle set down by Robert that the quest for merit in the work should be made with complete disregard for artistic partisanship, schools or cliques.

"Our artists, with the inspiring support of the Federal Government, and feeling, as they are certain to feel, that they are working with and for the Nation, will undoubtedly produce a lasting record of the life and activities of their country," he said.

First Lady Aids Program.

The program also has the support of Mrs. Roosevelt.

"I think the plan has tremendous possibilities for awakening the interest of the people as a whole in art and for developing artistic qualities which have not come to light in the past and for recognizing artists who already have made their names among their fellow artists but who have had little recognition from the public at large," she said. "The art of a country is a sign of its virility and strength."

"We should not be afraid to make a mistake," Dr. Tugwell said, "because unless there is the utmost freedom in producing a considerable number of works of art we are not going to have an opportunity to see the residue of worth-while things which we will get if we have that freedom. We may have to whitewash a lot of walls and take down a lot of statues when we get through, but what we want is to salvage the good things that are made."

Most of the regional committees have been named. Duncan Phillips, director of the Phillips Memorial Gallery, is chairman for the Washington region. C. Powell Minnigerode, director of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, is a member of the local regional committee. Others have not yet been named.

Christmas is coming, but don't let that worry you. The suggestions under "Holiday Hints" in the Classified Columns of The Post will help you make it a merry one!

Citizen Groups Ballot to Favor Liquor Option

Neighborhood Associations Apparently Solid for It—and Dry.

Citizens associations last night began to form an apparent unanimous front in favor of community option in the licensing of liquor dispensation.

Kalorama Road Citizens Association voted in favor of the neighborhood preference plan after hearing District Commissioner Allen outline that scheme.

Stanton Park and Park View groups both passed resolutions favoring the community option plan. The latter group expressed its disposition against sale of any type in the Park View area.

Commissioner Allen told the Kalorama citizens he hoped each neighborhood will set up polling places to determine whether the sale of liquor should be permitted. Commissioner Hazen was also present.

Park View members favored the old "one mile" limit with regard to sale of liquor in the vicinity of Soldiers' Home. Stanton Park members seemed generally to oppose sale of liquor in that neighborhood.

Hillcrest Citizens Association, after considerable discussion of liquor control, appointed a committee to report at the next meeting as to methods of supervision.

Housing Survey Fund Fattened

Allotment Boosted to Give Quick Jobs to 28,577 Workers.

An allotment of $3,500,000 of Federal funds for National survey to determine the recovery possibilities of a suggested $14,000,000,000 construction program has been increased $5,415,120 to broaden the survey and assure immediate reemployment of 28,577 white-collar workers.

The Commerce Department announced yesterday that Harry L. Hopkins, Civil Works Administrator, had raised the allotment, and the Bureau of the Census and Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce directed to supervise completion of the survey by the middle of February.

The survey was suggested by an NRA planning unit. It estimated that 2,225,000 could be put to work on construction and collateral activity for a number of years. The United Press revealed that construction of 800,000 houses annually was suggested by this unit as necessary to fill the country's indicated requirements.

Farmers Hail Federal Effort For Recovery

Word of Optimism From President Answered by Pledge of Faith.

Nation was tottering on the brink of ruin and despair and misery seized the people everywhere.

"Since then hope and confidence have been revived and there is renewed courage to forge ahead. The wave of foreclosure of homes and farms has been checked, although not altogether stopped.

"Farm prices have increased about 24 per cent. These prices are not satisfactory, but they are a lot better than we could have had if we had not gone ahead with the program. We have made a good start. Let us go ahead and finish the job."

After praising the agricultural and monetary policies of President Roosevelt, Acting Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, and Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, O'Neal said:

"The A. A. A. is the magna charta of American agriculture, its charter of freedom from the domination of predatory business interests, its guarantee of economic equality with other groups, its promise of a new day for American agriculture."

Reviewing the demands made by the federation at its 1932 convention, including economic equality for the farmer, restored farm buying power, production control, mortgage relief, and restoration of "the honest dollar," O'Neal said:

"It is truly remarkable the extent to which we have obtained action on our program."

Mr. Roosevelt's message said in part:

"I wish that I could have come to your meeting. I should have liked this opportunity of facing the members of the American Farm Bureau Federation and telling them, as man to man, how much I appreciate their warm support of the Administration program.

"The members of the Farm Bureau know, as I do, that the maladjustment between supply and demand has been years in the making, and that it can not be corrected overnight. Nevertheless, in a few short months the whole complexion of the agricultural outlook has been changed.

"Money is getting into the hands of the people who need it; it is coming from higher prices for the things farmers have to sell; it is coming in the form of Government checks for those cooperating producers who are willing to swap a hazardous present for immediate improvement and a stable future.

"This money is paying bills. It is putting men back to work in the cities producing the things that farmers buy, and enabling these men in turn to buy things that farmers produce. The process has already gone a long way in the South among cotton and tobacco growers; wheat growers are beginning to experience it now, and the farmers of the corn belt will soon be in a position to experience it from the corn hog adjustment campaign.

"But, in all candor, I think a brief moment of gratification is enough; we seem to be on our way, but we are not yet out of the woods, and it is of the utmost importance that we guard against letting a rise in farm income tempt us to forget the realities of supply and demand."

M'Adams Voted Bank President At Baltimore

Union Trust of Maryland Goes on Unrestricted Basis Dec. 18.

Baltimore, Dec. 11 (AP).—Thomas B. McAdams, a former president of the American Bankers Association and now executive manager of the State-Planters Bank & Trust Co., of Richmond, Va., today was elected president of the Union Trust Co. of Maryland, succeeding Benjamin H. Brewster, jr., who resigned, effective January 1.

It also was announced that the Union Trust Co., open since March on a restricted-withdrawal basis, would be open on an unrestricted basis December 18.

Depositors are to be credited with 20 per cent of the funds they had on deposit, to be available for use without restriction next Monday. Depositors will be given "certificates of deposit" for 40 per cent of their deposits and for the remainder will be given "certificates of beneficial interest."

Other officers named today, besides McAdams, were William H. Gibeon, vice president; Charles W. Hoff, jr., vice president, and C. B. Winchester, vice president; J. B. H. Dunn, secretary, and Walter D. Bahn, treasurer.

The offices of chairman of the board and vice chairman of the board were abolished. The president of the bank will serve as the chairman.

The entire new management of the trust company has been approved by the Federal Reserve Board in Washington, the retiring president said.

The Union Trust Co., one of the largest banks in Baltimore, which has been a State bank, is being admitted into the Federal Reserve System.

The new president is a native of Richmond and began his banking career with the Merchants National Bank there in 1898.

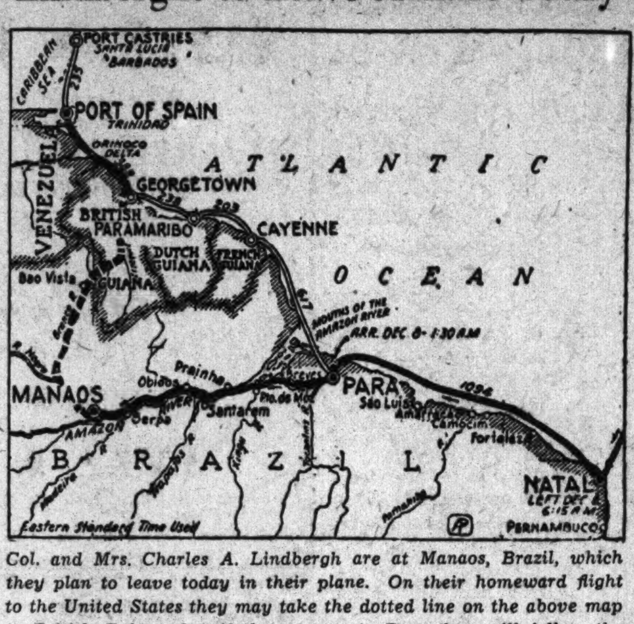
Lindberghs to Leave Manaos Today



Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh are at Manaos, Brazil, which they plan to leave today in their plane. On their homeward flight to the United States they may take the dotted line on the above map to British Guiana, but if they return to Para they will follow the route shown by the light line.

Dry Foes Here Disavow Chief's Inflation Fight

Plans by National Head of Crusaders Rejected by D. C. Group.

Efforts recently in New York by the National commander, Fred G. Clark, of the Crusaders, to enlist his organization against inflation were disavowed here yesterday by the Washington Chapter of the Antiprohibition Organization.

Rufus Lusk, Washington leader, declared "there have been numerous articles stating the Crusaders, through the National coommander have been sponsoring movements other than repeal of the eighteenth amendment, * * *.

"A year ago, Mr. Clark was campaigning to stop Governmental waste. Since then he had waged warfare against the gangster. Next he tried to help eliminate the kidnaper. About a month ago he announced the Crusaders would campaign against inflation.

"The Washington battalion was organized for prohibition repeal, for no other purpose, and therefore, Mr. Clark no longer speaks for the Washington Crusaders.

"Since the Crusaders in the Nation's Capital did more than any other chapter to make the organization and the cause for which it stood, it has become necessary for us to dissociate ourselves from Mr. Clark and his various movements."

Trinidad Goal Of Lindberghs

Flying Couple Plan to Start Next Leg of Trip From Brazil City Today.

Manaos, Brazil, Dec. 11 (AP).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, safe at this point 900 miles up the Amazon River planned to take off early tomorrow toward Trinidad, 900 miles away.

Three possible routes lie between them and their goal.

One route would be the safe way, back down the Amazon to the Atlantic and then north over the established route of the Pan-American Airways to Trinidad. That course lies along the coast and would carry them some 2,300 miles.

A second route leads still higher up the Amazon, over the headwaters to where Brazil, Peru, Ecuador and Colombia meet, thence across the Andes and north down the Great Magdalena River. Such a route would give them landing places for their big hyrdo-monoplane, but would be nearly as long as a return down the Amazon.

The third shortest, and relatively most dangerous route would be the direct line between here and Trinidad. It would be only 900 miles, but it would be flown over the jungles and mountains of northern Brazil, western British Guiana and Venezuela.

The Lindberghs planned to reach home for Christmas after completing an aerial survey for Pan-American Airways, of which the colonel is technical adviser.

Charles W. Baker, 21, of Charles Town, W. Va., was arrested yesterday at the Riggs National Bank branch at Fourteenth street and Park road northwest as he attempted to cash a check alleged to have been stolen over the week-end from the Roosevelt High School.

The teller engaged the youth in conversation while police were summoned.

Allen D. Davis, principal, said the thieves jimmied the lock to the room where the check book was kept.

They reported the Scout membership is growing and that the organization is closing the year without a deficit.

Peek Relieved To Coordinate Federal Trade

New Bureau Is Created to Find New Markets for Farmers.

almost an hour with officials of the Agriculture, State and Treasury Departments, the R.F.C. and the F.A.C.A.

Secretary Wallace and Mr. Peek conferred for a half hour with the President before the others arrived. These included Acting Secretary of State William Phillips, Assistant Secretaries of State R. Walton Moore and Francis B. Sayre, Acting Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the R.F.C.; William I. Westervelt, A.A.A. director of processing and marketing, and Joseph H. Choate, jr., chairman of the F.A.C.A The latter evidently was present because liquor import quotas are being used to bargain for concessions for American exports.

On leaving the White House Mr. Peek had a broad smile on his face. He said the President would make a statement later. Asked if he were happy, he replied "always." Mr. Peek was in a hurry to board a train for Chicago, where he will address the American Farm Bureau Federation today on a program with Secretary Wallace. A few minutes later Mr. Wallace rushed from the White House to catch the same train.

The White House statement, issued by Marvin H. McIntyre, assistant secretary to the President, made no mention of the controversy which has raged for weeks between Mr. Peek on one side and Secretary Wallace, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Rexford G. Tugwell and Jerome Frank, A.A.A. counsel, on the other.

"Organization Completed."

The statement explained that Mr. Peek, having completed the organization period of the A.A.A., was designated to head the committee to recommend permanent machinery to coordinate Government relations to American foreign trade. The committee, the statement added, will include members of the Interdepartmental Advisory Board on Reciprocal Treaties, the interdepartmental trade policy committee and "such other individuals as Mr. Peek may select."

Mr. Phillips is chairman of the commercial policy committee, which includes Walter J. Cummings, representing the Treasury; Assistant Secretary of Commerce John Dickinson and Dr. Willard L. Thorpe, chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, both representing the Commerce Department; Dr. Tugwell and Mr. Westervelt, representing A. A. A.; Oscar B. Rider, NRA, and Robert L. O'Brien and Thomas W. Page, Tariff Commission.

Charles M. Barnes, chief of the State Department's treaty division, is chairman of the reciprocal treaty board, and Melvin L. Leap, also of the treaty division, is secretary. It comprises ten other State Department officers and representatives of the Commerce, Agriculture and Treasury departments, NRA and the Tariff Commission.

Set-Up Long Discussed.

After delegating these two groups to work with Mr. Peek in formulating the proposed export organization, the McIntyre statement continued:

"As far back as last March, in his discussions of the agricultural policy, the President discussed with Mr. Peek the possibility and advisability of reopening foreign markets for agricultural surpluses. It was decided at that time that the immediate domestic supply should be restricted, in view of the fact that foreign markets were closed temporarily by tariffs, quotas, &c., so the immediate task was to restrict production until machinery for limitation of burdensome surpluses could be put in operation.

"Now the time has come to initiate the second part of the program and to correlate the two parts, the internal adjustment of production with such effective foreign purchasing power as may be developed by reciprocal tariffs, barter, and other international arrangements.

"Mr. Peek will head the new organization when it is created."

Form of Agency Undecided.

Whether the proposed foreign trade organization will be set up in the State Department, the Commerce Department, the R. F. C. or will be an independent agency responsible directly to the President has not been decided, but it was believed the latter is most probable in order that Mr. Peek may have a free hand to press his plans for developing markets for the farmer.

Among the A. A. A. officials mentioned as those who may leave that agency with Mr. Peek were Mr. Westervelt, who was loaned to the government by a large mail order house; Dr. Clyde King, chief of the dairy and milk division; Wayne Taylor, executive assistant to Mr. Peek; C. W. Dunning, assistant to Mr. Westervelt; J. D. Dole, chief of food products, processing and marketing division, and Guy C. Sheppard, chief of the hog-corn processing and marketing division.

Frederick P. Lee, unofficial counsel to Mr. Peek, also will leave the A. A. A. He has not been on the payroll, although he has had an office in the Agriculture Department. Mr. Peek, it is understood, turned his salary over to Mr. Lee.

Farley Reassures French of U.S. Aim

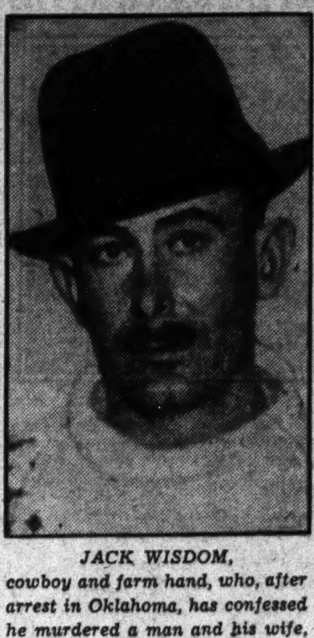
Tries to Dissipate Fear of Roosevelt Experiments.

Paris, Dec. 11 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley attempted to dissipate French fears that America is headed toward disaster today by telling Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour in a quarter-hour talk that the people were behind President Roosevelt, regardless of what the French press said.

The President's experiments, Farley said, "are leading to a good end, both for America and the world."

Boncour, who had invited Farley to talk with him, replied, "I already had such an impression."

Killer of Two



JACK WISDOM, cowboy and farm hand, who, after arrest in Oklahoma, has confessed he murdered a man and his wife, on whom he had passed a bad check.

Cowboy Admits Killing Wichita Man and Wife

Slew to Escape Check Charge, He Says; Denies Third Murder.

Hutchinson, Kans., Dec. 11 (AP).—Jack Wisdom, 26, a cowboy, signed a statement this afternoon, Assistant County Attorney Eli Eubanks announced, that he kidnaped and killed Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pritchard of Wichita, Kans.

The statement, obtained at the Kansas State Reformatory, where Wisdom is held for safe-keeping, did not mention "Buck" Smith, who Wisdom had stated earlier killed the couple while he looked on.

Wisdom, according to the statement, shot the couple to death and hid the bodies in Oklahoma because he feared prosecution on a worthless check for $21.40 which he had given the Wichita merchant.

Tells Murder Story.

The statement as made public by Eubanks, who is assistant district attorney at Wichita, read:

Q.—"Just relate the events leading up to the killing of Mr. and Mrs. Pritchard on Thursday, November 23, 1933."

A.—"Well, I met up with Mr. and Mrs. Pritchard there in the Pan-American Cafe and he got onto me for this here check, and wanted the money right then and insisted on having it at the time or me going to jail, and I got out and tried to get the money for him but failed, and I couldn't get it. The only way I could think of to keep from going to jail was to make away with them, which I did on the road south of Wichita."

Q.—"So you did form the intention of doing away with, or killing Mr. and Mrs. Pritchard in Sedgwick County, Kansas?"

A.—"Yes."

Q.—"And you carried out your designs or plans in Sumner County, Kansas, two or three miles north of Wellington?"

A.—"Yes."

Second Body Found.

Pritchard's body was found today beneath a culvert near El Reno, Okla., soon after Wisdom was rushed from Kingfisher, Okla., to Kansas for safe-keeping. His wife's body was discovered yesterday in a culvert near Bison, Okla.

Wisdom was brought here secretly and Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, expressed determination today to thwart any attempt to establish "lynch law" by calling out the Kansas Guard if necessary.

Denies Third Slaying.

Capt. Lyle said Wisdom told him he did not kill Emery Large, the elderly cowboy with whom he worked on a ranch. Large's bullet-pierced body was found in a well November 30, about two months after he had disappeared and Wisdom had told their employer, "the old man has quit."

The Pritchards disappeared last November 23 and their bullet-pierced, bloodstained car was found near Depew, Okla.

Lyle said Wisdom described the shooting and said the bodies were blanketed and placed in the back of Pritchard's car for the trip into Oklahoma.

Waterway Group Hits Rail Codes

Association Asks NRA Put Inland Routes to Use.

St. Louis, Dec. 11 (AP).—Provisions of NRA industrial codes, which require the estimating of delivered prices upon the basis of all-rail transportation rates, were criticized today by the traffic committee of the Mississippi Valley Association in its annual report.

The report urges that Gen. Johnson, NRA administrator, set up machinery "whereby use may be made of inland waterway routes and to require that such provisions be inserted in all existing codes and those hereafter put in effect."

The existing all-rail provisions are "inimical to the interests of the consumers, unjustly eliminate all forms of transportation other than railroads from participation in valuable traffic, and tend to destroy water carriers and port facilities," the report said.

Litvinoff Call, Bullitt's First Official Act

Soviet Shows U. S. Flag for First Time; Embassy Site Rejected.

Moscow, Dec. 11 (AP).—The first act of William C. Bullitt after arriving in Moscow today was to pay a formal call on Maxim Litvinoff at the foreign office.

There, the first American ambassador to the Soviet Union spent a half hour in cordial conversation with the Soviet foreign minister.

Afterward, accompanied by D. T. Flourinsky, chief of the protocol department of the foreign office, Mr. Bullitt inspected the "house of the central executive committee," which has been offered him as a possible embassy site.

Doffs Hat to Flag.

For the first time in the history of the Soviet republic the United States flag flew over Moscow in honor of the American envoy. To it Bullitt doffed his hat as he arrived at his hotel from the railway station.

The ambassador, as he stepped from a private car attached to the regular Moscow train, was greeted by I. A. Divilkovski of the Russian foreign office, Flourinsky, Alexander Troyanovski, ambassador to the United States, and more than 40 other officials.

Although Bullitt refused to comment, it was understood the "house of the central executive committee" was found to be too small for the full embassy and consular staff, which will number probably 80.

Tomorrow the American emissary will visit the Supreme Court Building, which has been set aside by the Soviet government as another possible location for the American Embassy.

Statement Wednesday.

He will present his credentials to President Mikhail Kalinin Wednesday. After that formality he promised to give a statement to Soviet and foreign newspapermen.

The local English language daily, the Moscow Daily News, today published a two-column photograph of Bullitt under a six-column headline, which said "Welcome to the first United States Ambassador to the Soviet Union."

Moscow's only afternoon paper the Evening Moscow, published a long article on Bullitt's career.

A model of brevity not often observed in diplomatic dispatches was Ambassador Bullitt's telegram to the State Department yesterday. Scorning to use the secret code, the new ambassador wired his chief:

"Arrived. Shall present credentials Wednesday. Bullitt."

President 'Loves' Cheese, So He'll Get Plenty of It!

President Roosevelt "just loves" cheese.

This is on the authority of Mrs. Roosevelt, who has undertaken to observe American Cheese Week in the White House.

"I will serve cheese in some form at every meal," said the energetic and thorough-going First Lady.

She admits the problem of thinking up new ways of putting cheese on the Presidential plate is her major problem of the week.

When the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the United States Supreme Court dine at the White House on Thursday night, they will have cream cheese balls with their salad.

New Admirals And Captains Commissioned

39 Promotions Are Approved by President; Effective Later.

Selection of 11 naval captains for promotion to the rank of rear admiral was approved yesterday by President Roosevelt.

At the same time the President approved the names of 28 commanders selected for promotion to the rank of captain.

Captain Walter N. Vernou, the President's naval aid, carried the list of recommendations to the White House and learned he was named to be a rear admiral.

The names were presented to the President by a selection board headed by Admiral David Foote Sellers, commander-in-chief of the United States Fleet. The board had been in secret session for 10 days.

To Take Rank Later.

None of the new officers will assume their new rank immediately, the selection being made for vacancies which are expected to occur during the next year.

The captains named, who either reside in Washington or are on duty here at the present time are:

Capt. N. Vernou, who was appointed the President's Naval Aide last May. He holds the Distinguished Service Medal for his World War service in command of the destroyer, Cassin. His home is in Baltimore.

Capt. Arthur P. Fairfield, who is assistant chief of the Bureau of Navigation. He holds the Navy Cross for his World War service. His home is Annapolis.

Capt. Hayne Ellis, who is Director of Naval Inteligence. His home is at Kansas City, Mo.

Capt. James Otto Richardson, of 2708 Thirty-fifth place northwest, who is now a member of this year's class at the Naval War College.

Other Captains Named.

The other captains selected for the rear admiral rank are:

Capt. George F. Neal, now in command of the Naval Training Station at San Diego. His home is at Rhea Springs, Tenn.

Capt. Paul B. Dungan, who is industrial manager of the New York Navy Yard. His residence is at Hastings, Nebr.

Capt. Adolphus Andrews, of Denison, Tex., who is chief of staff of the Battle Force, U. S. Fleet.

Capt. Manley H. Simons, jr., of St. Helena, Calif., who is chief of staff, cruisers of the Scouting Force.

Capt. Ivan E. Bass, of Carley, Miss., who is fleet engineer on the staff of the commander in chief of the Asiatic Fleet.

Capt. William H. Allen, of Florence, S. C., who is commander of Destroyer Squadron 2 of the Battle Force.

Capt. William Satterlee Pye, of Minneapolis, Minn., whose present assignment is as chief of staff to the commander of the Scouting Force.

Many Commanders are Here.

Many of the commanders to be made captains are at present on duty at Washington.

Commander Jonas H. Ingram, assistant director of Naval Intelligence, is probably the most notable of these. At the Naval Academy he was an All-American football player and later football coach and director of athletics.

He is a holder of the congressional medal of honor, won by his distinguished conduct in the Battle of Vera Cruz in 1914. He also holds the Navy Cross for his World War duty as well as the Belgian Order of Leopold.

Other commanders selected who are on duty at Washington now are:

Schuyler F. Heim, who is at the Army Industrial College.

Patrick N. L. Bellinger, on duty at the Buraeu of Aeronautics.

Henry T. Markland, on duty at the Bureau of Ordnance.

Joseph J. Broshek, on duty at the Bureau of Engineering.

William F. Amsden, World War winner of the Navy Cross, who is detailed at the Army War College.

Elwin F. Cutts, on duty at the Bureau of Naval Operations.

Harry Booth Hird, on duty at the Bureau of Engineering.

The remainder of the commanders named were:

Harry Asher Badt, now commander of the Aleutian Islands Survey Expedition.

Abel T. Bidwell, now inspector of ordnance at the Naval Ammunition Depot at Lake Denmark, N. J.

Edward J. Foy, executive officer of the U. S. S. Chester.

Charles W. Crosse, in charge of naval recruiting station at Portland, Oreg.

Newton H. White, jr., commanding officer of the U. S. S Wright.

Herbert A. Jones, inspector-instructor of Eleventh Naval Reserve District, San Diego, Calif.

Ralph C. Parkerm, commanding officer of the U. S. S. Kittery.

Frank J. Wille, inspector of machinery, United States Dry Docks, Inc.

Henry F. D. Davis, engineer officer on the staff of the commander, battle force.

Oscar Smith, operations officer, scouting force.

Richmond K. Turner, executive officer on the U. S. S. Saratoga.

Alexander M. Charlton, inspector of naval material at General Electric Co., Schnectady, N. Y.

Edmund D. Almy, now at Mare Island (Calif.) Navy Yard.

Newton L. Nichols, executive officer U. S. S Pennsylvania.

Francis A. L. Vossler, operations officer, scouting force.

Richard B. Coffman, on duty at the Naval War College.

Harry A. McClure, inspector of ordnance, Fort Mifflin, Pa.

Cortlandt C. Baughman, commander of Destroyer Division No. 11.

George N. Barker, executive officer, U. S. S. Portland.

John W. Rankin, staff of Naval War College.

Unless Congress changes economy legislation none of these officers will receive any increase in pay when they go into their new rank when vacancies occur.

Roosevelt Legion Post Picks Finley

John T. Finley has been elected commander of Quentin Roosevelt Post, American Legion. Meeting at the Potomac Boat Club, the post also named South Trimble, jr., senior vice commander, and Elmore K. McKay, junior vice commander.

The new officers were installed by W. Means, commander of the District department of the legion. Commander Finley served in both the Army and Navy during the war.

Christian Crosses in St. Sophia, Hidden 4 Centuries, Unveiled

Istanbul, Dec. 11 (AP). — Brilliant with gold and silver leaf and mosaics of green, blue, red, and mauve, the narthex, or porch, of St. Sophia, once the greatest church of Christendom, and since 1453 a Turkish mosque, has been given back to the world as it was before the Moslem conquest covered its decorations with fanatical whitewash.

The Byzantine Institute of America has unveiled the results of two years' work of cleaning and conserving the sixth and ninth century Byzantine masterpieces of mosaic art.

At the unveiling, Prof. Thomas Whittemore, director of the institute, said that the narthex is now again what it used to be, the greatest gold room in the world. The vaulting is covered entirely with gold leaf, seen through transparent glass, the work of craftsmen of the time of Emperor Justinian.

In the narthex's main portal leading into the church, are great red crosses on a gold ground, some set with emeralds and sapphires.

So far has fanaticism fled from the new Turkey that Turkish worshippers pass beneath the exposed crosses to enter the mosque and say their Moslem prayers.

The chief treasure exposed at the unveiling is a magnificent ninth century mosiac, above the main portal picturing Christ seated upon an opulent throne of gold, decorated with pearls, emeralds, and enamel. His right hand is raised in benediction; in the left is the Book of Gospels, across whose white page is written in deep blue:

"Peace I leave with you. I am the light of the world."

Republican Aid For Roosevelt Policies Voiced

Returning G.O.P. Members of Congress Disinclined to United Fight.

(Associated Press.)

One prominent Republican senator returned to the Capital yesterday with word that "the country is still with Roosevelt," and predicted that the January session of Congress will support the President's policies.

While declining to talk for quotation, he voiced the opinion that the two big battles of the forthcoming session will develop over inflation and the NRA, and that the President will be victorious in both.

He predicted that those who want to go further than the President on the money question will not be able to get together on a program and that enough Republicans will support the Administration to prevent repeal of the national recovery act.

Several other returning spokesmen for the Republican party expressed similar views, but likewise declined to make any public statement.

Some within the party have disagreed, among them Senators Dickinson, of Iowa, and Reed, of Pennsylvania, who already have spoken out—the former on NRA, the latter on money.

The party leaders in Congress—McNary in the Senate, and Snell in the House—both have been here for several days without making any public statement.

Those Republicans who feel President still holds the whip hand expressed belief that his hardest struggle would be to hold Congress in line on the economy act, with its cuts for veterans and Government employes.

The only time Senate Republicans have voted solidly within recent years on any issue was against the Administration's veteran cuts at the last session. This, they said yesterday, indicates the President will have to rely on his party to uphold the policy established last session.

20,000 CWA Job Limit Set

Allen Says Quota Will Be Filled This Week; New Office Opens.

Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins yesterday told District Commissioner George E. Allen it would be impossible to allot Civil Works Administration funds to pay more than 20,000 workers in the District. Allen told Hopkins in a conference on the local relief situation that this District quota would be filled by the middle of this week.

Allen also was told no one could be employed on C. W. A. work who had not registered and asked for such work.

David Ruml, in charge of the public employment center, announced a new registration office will open today at 1621 K street northwest to register architects, attorneys, executives and other professional men and women seeking employment under P. W. A.

At this office artists interested in participating in the Government program to assist 2,500 unemployed artists also may register.

Revenge Denied, Afghan Chieftain Kills Himself

Kabul, Afghanistan, Dec. 11 (AP). Afrid Khan Bajauri, a leading Afghan chieftain, committed suicide Thursday, it was learned here today, because he was not able to avenge the death of King Nadir Shah, who was assassinated November 8.

The chieftain will be buried at the foot of the king's grave in accordance with his last wish.

Supported for D. A.

WILLIAM H. COLLINS, assistant district attorney, who is reported to have the backing of President Roosevelt's son, James, for the post of district attorney.

Collins Gains Roosevelt's Aid For Rover Post

President's Son Reported Backing Assistant for District Attorney.

Support of James Roosevelt, son of the President, was reported yesterday to be behind Assistant District Attorney William H. Collins for the post of District Attorney.

Roosevelt, who is handling Federal patronage for Massachusetts, is understood to have expressed his support of Collins to the Attorney General, who is to make the recommendation for the appointment.

The interest of Roosevelt is understood to be based on the fact the Collins' family has been identified more than 50 years with the Democratic party in Massachusetts. Collins is not actively engaged in politics; also is a Democrat.

Flag Makers Busy as Navy Prepares Soviet Ship Salute

A brisk little business in blood-red bunting has been going on lately while the Navy prepares to observe the social amenities toward the newly recognized Soviet Union.

Four hundred and sixty naval vessels of all types are in commission this year and each must now add one big and one little Soviet banner to its flag locker. Flag makers have been doing overtime, working hundreds of crossed hammers and sickles onto fields of revolutionary red.

Tradition requires that the Navy be prepared at all times to display appropriate courtesy toward fighting vessels of nations with which the United States maintains relations.

Not only must the other nations' flag be run up on certain well-defined occasions, but there also are times when foreign national anthems must be played. When a foreign man-o'-war is in the same American port with a United States naval unit, custom expects the American to follow the "Star-Spangled Banner" by a rendition of the visitor's hymn at sunrise colors.

Consequently, sheet music bearing the Communist "Internationale" must now be supplied to all the more important units of the Navy and ships' bands must familiarize themselves with a hitherto frowned-upon melody. Just in case one of the few Soviet battleships should happen to pay a visit to an American port some morning.

Supreme Court Ruling Widens Women's Scope

Permits Wives to Testify in Behalf of Mates in U. S. Tribunals.

The right of women to testify in behalf of their husbands in Federal courts was upheld yesterday by the Supreme Court.

Although the traditional common law custom of forbidding women to testify against their husbands was not involved in the test case, feminists say they consider the court's decision as another step toward "complete equality for women."

The principle arose in the appeal of the conviction of John S. Funk, Federal prohibition agent of Rockingham, N. C., in 1929, accused of having offered protection to bootleggers.

Lower Court Reversed.

His wife was refused permission to testify in his behalf. When Funk appealed to the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, the lower court's ruling was upheld. The Supreme Court, in reversing this decision, granted Funk a new trial.

Justice Sutherland, reading the court's opinion, pointed out that the defendant himself is always permitted to take the stand in his own defense, although his interest in the case is "undoubtedly greater" than that of his wife.

Justice Sutherland found that world conditions have so altered in recent years that common law interpretations must be modified. The old prohibition against wives, he said, was based upon the assumption that a wife had too great a personal interest in the case.

Tax Case Also Decided.

The Supreme Court also ruled that trustees of estates may claim income tax exemption for money paid widows who accept such payments in lieu of their statutory rights.

Four test cases involving estates were decided by the court. In each case the widow had decided to accept the provisions of her husband's will instead of her dower and statutory interests. The commissioner of internal revenue held that the trustees were responsible for the income tax on the sums paid the widows.

Chief Justice Hughes announced that the court will adjourn next Monday for a holiday recess, reconvening January 8.

Glover Park Meeting.

Election of officers and discussion of liquor control, street car and bus fares and one-way streets are on the program for the Glover Park Citizens Association meeting at the Industrial Home School Friday night.

Budget Uncertainties.

This week the director of the budget is expected to present to the President his budgetary plan for the fiscal year 1934-35.

Mr. Douglas outlined his program some weeks ago in an address before the New England conference. He then estimated that ordinary operating expenditures would approximate $2,600,000,000, exclusive of sinking fund.

Assuming a moderate expansion in industrial activity of about 10 per cent, he concluded that revenues in the coming fiscal year would total $3,350,000,000, yielding about $750,000,000 to cover the cost of emergency operations undertaken this year, but due for payment in the following fiscal year.

Inflation is a traditional foe of budgetary balance, since violent changes in prices upset estimates of governmental receipts and outlays in various ways. In the initial stages of inflation, surpluses frequently arise, while in the advanced stages, governments are apt to be confronted with mounting deficits due to the failure of tax receipts to keep pace with the mounting costs of goods and services.

So long, therefore, as the director of the budget remains confident of his ability to effect a budgetary balance next year the public is encouraged to hope that uncontrolled inflationary price increases are not in immediate prospect.

The benefits resulting from Mr. Douglas' budget-balancing efforts may be nullified, however, if the extraordinary or emergency budget is regarded as a carry-all into which it is safe to dump all outlays that the Budget Bureau failed to include in the ordinary budget. In classifying expenditures, conscientious care must be taken to provide for a discriminating and legitimate differentiation between expenses that should be covered by taxes and expenses that may be met legitimately by resort to borrowing. R. F. C. loans which ultimately are recoverable properly may be excluded from ordinary budgetary outlays.

On the other hand there is a heterogeneous category of so-called extraordinary or emergency expenditures, the exclusion of which from the ordinary budget gives rise to misgivings. Thus, nonproductive outlays for public works, and so-called civil works, to give employment to the idle, for direct relief, &c., increase the dead weight debt of the Government, and add to the interest and sinking fund charges which the public must shoulder.

Practically speaking, it is obvious that such outlays can not under present conditions be covered by taxes, they must be met from the proceeds of loans. Should they, then, be treated as part of the current ordinary deficit, or is it safe to classify them as extraordinary outlays?

The answer depends upon the policy pursued in voting future emergency outlays. If Congress shows a firm resolve to eliminate, or at least to curtail decisively, these emergency expenditures, with a view to their speedy disappearance, they may be handled as nonrecurrent outlays, which constitute no serious menace to sound fiscal policies.

If, on the other hand, the work of spending is to proceed with additional appropriations for public and civil works amounting to $10,000,000,000, as some congressmen urge, or even a considerable fraction of that amount, efforts to balance the ordinary budget will neither strengthen the public credit nor provide a defense against the danger of forced inflation.

What the public desires is assurance that a halt will be called to the process of debt accretion before the carrying charges on that debt become dangerously burdensome and the size of it begins to intimidate the investor. No such assurance is possible if Congress should insist upon voting for a continuance of the kind of emergency spending which is both nonproductive and nonrecurrent.

Government Building.

Plans for the construction of new Government buildings in Washington appear to be moving forward. There is some indication that President Roosevelt may ask Congress for funds to erect the proposed Apex Building at the eastern extremity of the Pennsylvania avenue-Mall triangle. It is designed to provide quarters for the Federal Trade Commission, the Fine Arts Commission and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. Inclusion of new structures for the War and Navy Departments in the Federal building program also is said to be under consideration.

The Fine Arts Commission is on record in favor of the construction of suitable edifices on Pennsylvania avenue, west of the White House, for the War and Navy Departments. Its purpose is to beautify that section and to maintain the White House as a center of the vast development for housing the executive departments. Ultimately, improvement of the entire area between Pennsylvania avenue and Constitution avenue is contemplated.

Inasmuch as the Government is involved in a tremendous public works program, its own needs for quarters in the National Capital may well be considered. Funds for the proposed War and Navy Department buildings can not be taken from the $3,300,000,000 public works appropriation at present because this money may be used only for materials and labor. An appropriation to purchase sites, together with authorization to go ahead with these buildings, may be forthcoming, however, at the next session of Congress.

The proposal again brings to the front the situation with respect to the District's Municipal Center. In this case the site is available. Plans have been completed. The need for construction of at least the first unit is unquestioned. Why does the P.W.A. hesitate when a small fraction of the sum which the Administration is spending for public works could be devoted to such a useful and necessary project?

Mr. Peek's Transfer.

From an administrative standpoint, the transfer of George Peek from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration became inevitable when irreconcilable differences of opinion arose between the head of the emergency agency and the Secretary of Agriculture. The President had little choice when Mr. Peek made it a question whether he or members of the so-called Tugwell group in the Department of Agriculture should go, and Secretary Wallace refused to ask for the resignations Mr. Peek wanted.

The questions of policy involved in the controversy within the Department of Agriculture have not been settled. In the codes that have been transferred to the jurisdiction of the N. R. A. and revised by that agency, Mr. Peek's viewpoint has been sustained. But a great many codes, affecting first processors and handlers of agricultural products, still are under the supervision of the A. A. A. Their completed form will show whether the ideas of Mr. Peek, or the Tugwell group, which has been using emergency powers to obtain drastic application of government control shall prevail.

Nor has the administration made any committment of policy in announcing the formation of the special committee, headed by Mr. Peek, to make recommendations concerning permanent machinery to coordinate government relations to foreign trade. Not until the committee is formed and its functions clearly defined, is it possible to take any worthwhile judgment.

For the negotiation of any actual transactions, it would seem that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would be the logical organization. It already has ample resources and some legal authority in connection with the conduct of such business. However, if we are to enter upon an era of bargaining tariffs, import and export quotas, then it is possible that a special committee might find some work to do.

Tuberculosis in Washington.

The current drive for sale of Christmas Seals calls attention to the inadequate facilities for control of tuberculosis in the District of Columbia. Washington has the fourth highest death rate from this dreaded malady among 46 large cities included in a recent study. The Tuberculosis Association of the District ascribes this condition to the lack of facilities properly to control the disease.

According to the association, Washington has less than half the required number of hospital beds for tuberculosis patients. The need of hospitalization for children has been especially acute; more than 1,200 in Washington are known to be infected. This condition will be relieved somewhat with the opening of the new Sanitarium for Tuberculosis Children on the Defense highway, but it is equipped to care for only 150 patients.

Efforts also are being made to obtain a District tuberculosis sanitarium for adults. The District already has an up-to-date Municipal Tuberculosis Hospital, but it can not meet the demands for treatment. A new institution in a rural setting, where all the modern treatments known to the medical profession can be applied, is urgently needed. It is hoped also that the District may acquire a tuberculosis hospital within the city especially devoted to terminal cases.

Experiments in some communities indicate that it is possible to cut in half the death rate from tuberculosis. Scientific treatment in appropriate surroundings and the segregation of patients from members of their families are among the most powerful weapons against the great white plague. Another method of attack is through the public health nurse, whose function is to advise families in danger from the disease as to preventive and curative measures. Diagnosis clinics also are considered of great importance in checking the development of tuberculosis and preventing its spread to members of the victim's family.

The contribution of the public toward eradication of tuberculosis through the purchase of Christmas Seals can not be measured. Funds derived from this source are used chiefly to educate the public as to means of preventing tuberculosis and to bring about the establishment in each community of adequate facilities for diagnosis and treatment. It is a worthy cause, deserving of public support.

Anarchism in Spain.

Spain's latest uprising, which is reported to have cost the lives of more than 100 persons in the last three days, apparently is being directed by radicals, who see in the present state of unrest an opportunity to strike a blow at the government.

There seems to be no evidence of a popular revolt. An attempt by the extremists to precipitate a strike throughout the country appears to have failed for want of support by the rank and file of workingmen.

Some attempts are being made to connect this uprising with the conservative leaders who won a sweeping victory in Spain's recent election, but no evidence to support this theory has been revealed in the dispatches from Madrid. Jose Maria Gil Robles, leader of the Rightist parties now in control of the Cortes, is a vigorous young journalist who has never been associated with the monarchistic forces. His campaign was directed against the excesses of the republican regime.

It does not appear probable that the conservatives would employ anarchists to fire churches and orphan homes, to derail passenger trains, to bomb buildings and agitate for a nation-wide strike, just as the conservatives take over control of affairs in the Cortes.

While the Spanish people do not appear to be in sympathy with the uprising, there undoubtedly is abroad in the land a widespread feeling of unrest and disappointment. Many of the promises made by the Socialists, who had maintained control over the government since the overturn of the monarchy, failed to materialize.

Results of the election generally were interpreted as a swing to more conservative policies. Restoration of the monarchy is not expected, but Spain now may recede from some of the more radical experiments launched by the ambitious Socialists.

It remains to be seen whether the Rightist factions will attempt to follow the examples of Italy, Germany and Austria in the establishment of a corporate state. At present there is confusion at Madrid.

Dispatches indicate that the Rightists are overwhelmed by their victory and are not yet certain how far they should attempt to go in revising the constitution. Talk of a right-wing dictatorship is heard, but the program appears to be still in the formative stage.

While new policies are taking shape, all the responsible parties are expected to lend support to the government in its efforts to crush the revolt of the anarchists and the extreme radicals.

Local Option.

Many divergent opinions as to how the liquor problem should be handled in the District were expressed at the hearings conducted by the Commissioners. Apparently, a majority of the people here favor rigid control, in accord with local sentiment. On the other hand, there is an obvious desire to eliminate the bootlegger from the District. Indications are that the measure to be submitted to Congress by the Commissioners will represent a compromise between these two objectives.

Because of the divergent sentiment in various parts of the District, the Commissioners have decided to advocate some system of local option. "Where the residents of a particular neighborhood object to the licensing of the sale of liquor in their section," the Commissioners concluded, "their wishes should be binding on the Commissioners and the licensing board. * * * Such a plan would, it seems to us, give complete self-government to each neighborhood regarding liquor regulation."

In general, this approach to the problem is sound. There is no intention, of course, of making the use or transportation of liquor illegal in any part of the District, but only to restrict the manufacture and sale of liquor to areas where it is not objectionable to a majority of the residents. Saloons and liquor warehouses were forbidden in about three-fourths of the District, it is estimated, before the eighteenth amendment was voted into the Constitution.

No specific recommendations have been made by the Commissioners as to the application of their local option plan, but it is obvious that the matter of restricting the location of liquor stores, licensed hotels, etc., should be left largely to the discretion of local authorities. Numerous difficulties would arise if Congress should undertake to prescribe detailed regulations for each area and to define the zones wherein liquor could be sold.

In some areas the sale of bottled spirits may not be objectionable, while the serving of liquor in public places would meet with majority opposition. Some residential neighborhoods wish to forbid the sale of liquor in any form within their area. On the other hand, there appears to be no concerted opposition to the sale of bottled goods and the serving of liquor in restaurants in the downtown district.

Congress should create a strong control board under the jurisdiction of the District Commissioners and make it amenable to local opinion within well-defined and fundamental limitations instead of attempting to cover in the law every detail of administration.

There Is Slight Difference.

Who Gave the Order?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I consider myself a progressive Democrat, but I have not reached that point where I agree that those (many of them prominent Democrats) who criticize certain acts of the Administration should be referred to as "Tories." Certainly any such retorts by members of the present Administration does the Democratic party no good, nor will it serve to strengthen the program of those responsible leaders at whom the criticism may be directed.

But if we are to descend to the game of hurling epithets and calling names we can spend much of our time in our own backyards—in the vicinity of the NRA codes, for instance. The press reports of December 5 carried the item that the textile strikes in portions of South Carolina and Tennessee have been settled, and added that the managing board of the textile code had ordered the mill owners to give preference to former employes who were members of the labor union in reemploying workers.

Now, it seems to me the word "Tory" could aptly be applied to those who were responsible for such an order without any misrepresentation. It has been repeatedly charged, and at no time successfully refuted, that the NRA is 100 per cent favorable and partial to union labor. I should like for those responsible for the issuance of the order above mentioned to explain to the public on what ground and by what authority in the National Recovery Act the order to favor union labor, as contained in the proclamation above mentioned, was based.

It is true that most of those who had gone out on these strikes were members of a labor union, but it would have been eminently fair to union labor if the order had merely stated that members of the labor union were not to be discriminated against in reemploying or taking back workers when the strikes were settled. But the order was specific in demanding that the mills give preference to union labor members in their reemployment.

When such gross injustice is indulged in and partiality shown by these officials, is it any wonder that the red blood which still flows in the veins of some of us rises and causes some of our acknowledged leaders to criticize those who permit such a practice? P. T. W.

Potpourri: The Post and Politics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit a reader to compliment The Post on its most excellent improvement, especially in the addition of the interesting daily talks about books.

It is refreshing to turn from the news of crime and political discussion to read the charming and delightful review of the inspiring writings of Carlyle and Macaulay and others. These articles entertain and instruct a mass of readers who are fed up on politics and sensational stuff which are stale and unprofitable.

In the present crisis the great masses of the people believe implicitly in the President. They may not understand the labored discussions of the now-discredited capitalistic income tax dodgers who formerly dictated and controlled the financial policy of the republic, but, like the blind man whose sight was restored, when questioned by the Pharisees in their attempt to discredit Christ, replied: "Whether He be a sinner I know not; one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I see."

The people of the Nation well know that on March 4 last the country was practically on the rocks; it was the Nation's darkest hour; all confidence lost, millions of unemployed in despair; that today confidence and hope are restored. The financial Pharisees, whose code of morals considered it legitimate to evade paying tribute to the Government that gave them its full measure of protection and to speculate on the money of their depositers and trusting clients, and thereby reap huge fortunes for themselves, have been driven out of the temple, and millions again are earning a living.

We are again marching forward under the great chief who seeks inspiration from the Divine Master who guided Washington and Lincoln in our darkest hours as a people.

The West Virginia election on November 28, in which the ablest Republican of the State was snowed under by the most impressive and greatest majority (5,741) ever given in that district, shows their absolute faith and confidence in the President. J. H. SHEPHERD.

What to Do With Starlings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me that the forces fighting the starlings are attacking with the wrong ammunition. As long as they are alive the birds have to roost some place. If not on the District Building, then on the new Department of Commerce Building. The only way to keep them from roosting is to kill 'em all.

Surely the Chemical Warfare Service should be able to mix up some dope to go in their food that would kill all the pests—starlings, sparrows, and pigeons—at one fell swoop.

If the C. W. S. can't do that, we will lose faith in this talk of a popular columnist as to how "horrendous" the next war is going to be. M. S.

Parodies.

No matter how ridiculous a parody may be, it is from one point of view a compliment to the thing parodied, for it assumes that everyone is familiar with the victim.

A parody is also criticism; for by burlesquing the original it emphasizes its most salient features. For that very reason a caricature drawing is often more accurate than a photograph; it stresses the thing that is most distinctive, the thing that particularizes the object. Thus Roosevelt's teeth and Gladstone's collars were exaggerated in the caricatures, because they were the features that one noticed instantly in those men.

In the palmy days of Weber and Fields in New York, these admirable comedians — whose whole was so much greater than the sum of their two parts—always selected the most popular play of the year for their burlesque; and no one who saw them will forget their parody of "Quo Vadis," with De Wolf Hopper and Lillian Russell. "I have just arrived on the Limitis Vestibulis from Asbury Park; let us go to the boozeorium."

In literature, the book of verses by C. S. Calverley, called "Fly Leaves" (1866) is very near perfection. It sometimes takes a great poet to parody another successfully. Swinburne's book (difficult to get hold of today) called "The Heptalogia; or the Seven Against Sense," contains the finest parodies of Tennyson and especially of Browning, that I have ever seen. In America today, F. P. Adams and Louis Untermeyer are skillful parodists.

You Can't Make Home Attractive by Picking All the Flowers for Strangers

By Robert Quillen

Nearly all married people are content with their bargain. Despite bickerings and poutings, they still feel some affection for one another and would rather live together than to part.

Yet comparatively few of them are uniformly happy, and the chief cause of their unhappiness is contrast.

As the ordinary middle-class family would be content with the comforts it now enjoys if nobody else had more, so the ordinary husband and wife would be happier together if they were quite sure that other married couples behaved as badly.

The faults of other people reconcile us to our own. That is the reason people enjoy scandal. The sins of the fallen make our little store of virtue seem greater by contrast.

A man and his wife may quarrel as they dress to go out for the evening, and so leave home in a bitter mood, ashamed and resentful; but if their host and his lady quarrel and make a scene, their own shame is forgotten in the presence of this newer one, and they walk home hand and hand, happy in the knowledge that their ill manners are not unique.

Opportunity to observe other people at their worst is comparatively rare, however, for the rudest make some effort to seem civilized in the presence of strangers. Thus imagination is left to picture the scene in others homes, and the result is an ideal seldom achieved by mortals.

Because Bill holds a chair for his wife in a restaurant, imagination assumes that he does as much at home. Because Bill's wife is a vision of loveliness when she appears at a party, imagination assumes that she never is frumpy and frowsy. With or without these public evidences of courtesy and charm, imagination assumes that Bill and his wife live in unalloyed blisss.

And other couples, tricked by their imagination, envy Bill and his wife and hate their own lot more and more.

How then shall you mend matters? By assuming that all Bills and their wives are vulgar and ill-natured in the privacy of home, and thus reconciling yourself to ill manners by means of manners as ill?

That might work, for a shame seems less when others share it; but wouldn't it be better in the long run to get rid of the shame?

It is a hard commentary on our boasted culture, but the sad truth is that the greater part of the unhappiness in middle-class homes is caused by ill manners.

If husbands and wives would speak and act as courteously as they did before they were married, and treat one another as well as they treat other men and women, they would find little reason to reproach one another or themselves.

It is the failure of manners that causes the failure of marriage.

Hardly a man is now alive
Who remembers the famous day and year.
He said to his friend: "ITBM BLOS* from the town tonight
Hang a lantern aloft in the belfry arch

Meanwhile his friend through alley and street
Watches and wonders with eager ears,
Till in the silence around him he hears
The muster of men at the barrack door,
The sound of arms and the tramp of feet,
And the measured tread of the grenadiers
Marching down to their boats on the shore.
Then he climbed the tower of the ONC*

To the belfry chamber overhead,
And caused the pigeons to fly from their perch.

A shape in the moonlight, a bulk in the dark,
And beneath, from the pebbles, in passing, a spark.
Struck out by a steed flying fearless and fleet.

DIPLOMATIC NOTES.

When rival political parades met recently in Londonderry, Ireland, the interchange was limited to the realm of music, according to the Los Angeles Times, the band of one group and the choristers of the other striving valiantly to drown each other out. Instead of the cracked sconces of an earlier day, the net casualties of the encounter were a varied assortment of headaches.

Just Folks.

By Edgar A. Guest.

Life's Variety.

We seek, we struggle and we tire,
Are disappointed in desire,
Gain something, lose it and begin
Another fragile prize to win.
For so 'twas planned and so must be
The tale of human history.
Who rises high at last must fall
To share the grave with one and all.

If life were only that and naught
Beyond that worth a moment's thought;
If pride and pomp and power possessed
The only keys to peace and rest
And hours of happiness unstained,
'Twere best that death were quickly gained,
For living long would be to hear
Merely a greater weight of care.

Days come and go and soon the mind
To countless pleasures grows inclined.
In trees and flowers and skies and streams
Man finds an endless source of dreams;
Builds friendship and beyond his needs
Finds peace in little kindly deeds;
Keeps memories tender and maintains
Secure the wisdom which he gains.

Not all is vain! The spirit clings
To thoughts and not material things,
And in between the days of strife
Man finds the lasting joys of life,
In being, not in owning, lies
The sweet contentment mortals prize.
Years bravely lived and nothing less
Assures a man of happiness.

Pan-American Bids to Europe Stayed 4 Years

Hull Delays Action on Seats for Portugal, Spain and League.

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 11 (AP). The Associated Press learned today that leaders have agreed to postpone until the next Pan-American Conference the question of seating an official observer for the League of Nations.

This stand was taken in view of the pact that no formal request for credentials was received from the league. The conference normally meets every four years.

This developed after a three-hour debate in a subcommission of the steering committee on the proposal of Cordell Hull that a policy be formed to consider credentials for the league.

The commission adjourned, saying further consideration would be necessary.

It was assumed that requests of Spain and Portugal for official observers, which had been approved by a committee but not by the conference, also would hang fire until the next conference.

Peace Scheme Buried.

Mr. Hull had suggested that the committee "reexamine" the request. The United States delegation was represented as feeling admission of European observers might produce a wedge in Pan-American solidarity.

A proposal that incidents arising between nations be referred to the Pan-American Union, which would retsore the status existing before the disagreement arose, was virtually buried in a subcommission of the peace committee.

A committee composed of Argentina, Chile and Colombia was named to attempt a more accurate definition of the term "aggressor" when it was agreed the word was used vaguely in Pan-America conciliation treaties.

Mexico Asks Bimetallism.

The infant welfare subcommittee designated Miss Sophonisba Breckenridge of the United States delegation to summarize international activities on the subject.

The Cuban effort for a declaration on recognition of a principle of non-intervention was crystallizing in the report of a subcommission on rights and duties of States, to be made day after tomorrow.

A resolution declaring the gold standard unsuitable and calling for bimetallism was presented by Mexico and referred to two subcommittees.

Equality with men throughout the Americas was asked today for today for women by the Inter-women by the Inter-American Commission of Women, headed by Miss Doris Stevens, of New York.

Drunkenness Cited In Rum Bill Plea

Claim for Increase Based on Legalized Beer.

Claiming that police statistics show a decided increase in arrests for drunkenness since the legalization of 3.2 beer, the Citizens Service Association addressed a letter to the District Commissioners yesterday asking that as many prohibitive features as possible be added to the liquor control bill for the District.

The letter stated that any value in legal liquor will reside solely in laws controlling its sale as to hours, places, sale to minors and habitual drinkers. It quoted the association as believing prohibition to be the most effective method of handling the liquor traffic and that the organization is in favor of continuing all regulations in the Sheppard act for the District. Dr. Everett M. Ellison is president of the association.

Endurance Flight Thwarted by Wind

Two Women Forced Down by Dwindling Fuel.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 11 (AP).—Unable to make a refueling contact because of shifting winds, Violet Gentry and Frances Marsalis today ended an attempt to establish a women's endurance flight record after being aloft 21 hours and 17 minutes.

The fiers, who were seeking to better the present mark of eight days and four hours, said they would make another attempt, possibly tomorrow.

Running short of gasoline, the women were forced down after gusty winds thwarted several efforts to make a contact with their refueling plane, by whipping the hose line out of reach of occupants of the second ship.

Late Maryland Plea for Liquor Elections Fails

Prince Georges Men Lose Appeal; Anti-Lynching and Road Bills Pass.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 11 (Spl.).—An eleventh-hour movement for special liquor elections in several towns of Prince Georges County was rejected today as the State Legislature considered early adjournment.

The House passed, by 71 to 21, a bill to authorize Sunday movies and amateur sports in Montgomery County. The administration won the Philadelphia road construction fight when the House passed a measure already approved by the Senate. Senator J. Allan Coad, St. Marys County, lost an attempt to permit use of oyster hand scrapers in the Potomac.

Mayors or other officials of Prince Georges towns comprised the delegation that sought the liquor referendums. For more than two hours the group was in close conference with Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer and the county's delegation in the House, but were told that it was out of the question to put such a proposal through in view of the few hours remaining in the session.

Road Bill Wins, 99 to 5.

Senator Sasscer told the delegation he would recommend to the county liquor board that every possible consideration be given to the wishes of municipal authorities in applications to sell liquor.

The delegation included Mayors John H. Petty, Laurel; J. H. Beall, Mount Rainier, and H. P. Willis, Hyattsville. Others in the group were Corporation Counsel Milton Campbell, Riverdale, and former Councilman Roscoe Brinson, Brentwood.

For several hours the House was locked in debate on the Philadelphia road bill. The fight centered around a House amendment to compel the State roads commission to use the first proceeds from the proposed $4,000,000 debenture bonds for improving and widening the existing road to Philadelphia. This was killed by a vote of 66 to 38. On final passage of the bill the vote was 99 to 5. A similar fight on the measure was waged in the Senate. As finally passed, the bill provides that the franchise tax and fees from commercial vehicles to liquidate the debentures can not be repealed.

The State conservation department was subjected to severe arraignment by Senate President Walter J. Mitchell, who spoke against Senator Coad's bill to permit hand scraping for oysters in the Potomac. He declared insufficient enforcement of existing laws was working a hardship to the oyster industry. Senator Coad asserted the use of hand scrapers would enable scores of persons to earn a livelihood, without working harm to the oyster beds.

When the House passed the administration bill placing greater responsibility upon sheriffs in caring for prisoners, Delegate Metzerott declared "we have a situation here of not acting to prevent mob law, but acting to bring about newspaper publicity after the mob was through."

The House amended this bill by eliminating the provision making a sheriff liable for damages in event of injury to a prisoner in his custody. The measure gives the governor and State's attorney authority to order removal of a prisoner from the jurisdiction where arrested, and also empowers the governor to remove a derelict official.

Insurance Tax Bill Dies.

Among bills killed in the closing hours of the Assembly was that increasing by two-fifths of 1 per cent the tax on fire and marine insurance premiums written by foreign corporations doing business in Maryland. The added revenue was to have been for sick and death benefits of volunteer firemen and aid investigations by the State insurance department.

This measure was sponsored by the State Volunteer Firemen's Association, and was introduced by Delegate George K. Edmonds, Montgomery County.

Eugene Raney, of Kensington, president of the association, and a delegation of firemen were here today working in the interest of the bill. It was argued that 40 States would adopt retaliatory measures if the bill passed.

All of the State administration's six-point program, dominated by the liquor control act, for which the extraordinary session was called, was enacted into law.

Likewise, all legislation of importance affecting the area adjacent to Washington found sanction. Among the last group of bills approved were those extending the time for payment of street assessments in Riverdale, vesting the Mayor of Glen Echo with powers of a justice of the peace and authorizing Montgomery County commissioners to make certain levies.

Loot Too Heavy, So Bandits Spurn $1,500 in Change

New York, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—Two bandits, one of them dressed as a policeman, refused to take $1,500 in "chicken feed" bills and silver during a hold-up of a Woolworth store in Brooklyn today, and went away empty-handed rather than carry the bag containing the money.

The fake policeman and his companion entered the office of Harold Anderson, the store manager, and, with drawn revolvers, demanded all the money on hand. Anderson opened the safe for them. The robber in street clothes lifted a canvas bag from the safe and started to put it under his coat. His uniformed companion scowled.

"Hell!" he exclaimed, "We don't want all them dimes!"

The two men then slugged Anderson and departed.

Hazen Seeks To Rush Work On City Center

Project Should Be First Objective, Board of Trade Is Told.

Development of the Municipal Center as the principal objective in the District was urged by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, before the public order committee of the Washington Board of Trade, at a luncheon meeting yesterday in the Raleigh Hotel.

"We want everyone to get behind this movement," Commissioner Hazen said. "We have paid $6,000,000 for the property and it is lying idle. At present the section is in such condition that a decent woman would be afraid to walk through it after dark. The development is badly needed and I hope this committee will get behind it."

Commissioner Hazen told the committee he wants its support in every District undertaking. He said the Commissioners have no ax to grind and that regardless of what they do, it will be the honest thing. He voiced particular praise of the Police and Fire Departments, and their respective heads. Paying tribute to Engineer Commissioner John C. Gotwals, he described the official as "one of the finest men with whom I have ever been associated."

Comments on Local Option.

Commenting on the proposed local liquor option plan, Claude W. Owen, president of the Board of Trade, declared that "it is a good plan if it can be worked." He told Commissioner Hazen, and Commissioner George E. Allen, also a guest of honor, that the board wants to be helpful in every way that it can.

Commissioner Allen told the committee that unemployment is being rapidly eradicated in the District. An additional 5,000 persons will be put to work under the Civil Works Administration this week, he said.

Favorable progress is being made on establishment of the first boys' club at the Fourth Precinct, Maj. Brown, superintendent of police, reported. Old equipment has been offered by District public schools, but more is needed, he said. He suggested that boys who have old athletic equipment donate it to the clubs.

Snyder Gives Address.

The new Commissioners were welcomed with talks from Edgar C. Snyder, United States marshal; George Offutt, former president of the Board of Trade; Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor; Representative Collins, of Mississippi, and Odell Smith, chairman of the public order committee, who presided.

Center Program Speeded.

Closing of Fourth street northwest between Sheridan and Van Buren streets, to permit development of a major recreational center, was ordered by the District Commissioners yesterday after a conference with representatives of the Park and Planning Commission and property owners of the neighborhood, headed by H. L. Thornton.

Plan to close the street had been threatened by protests of Mr. Thornton and other property owners, who asserted certain features of the center would impair the value of their property which is zoned residential A restricted.

Douglas Seeks Presidential Aid on Budget

Curb on Outlays Sought to Insure Stabilized National Credit.

from the fact that the R. F. C. gold price has remained at $34.01 since December 1, and from the recurring private conversations which Gov. George L. Harrison of the New York Federal Reserve Bank holds with the Bank of England on dollar-pound relationships.

Unless interested officials are misinforming the press, Harrison does not speak for the Administration—assuming he again has broached the feasibility of "steadying" exchange—and no move is contemplated at this juncture to fix even a temporary dollar-pound ratio. Before, during and after the London economic conference, Harrison sought a formula for fixing, even on a basis subject to change, the dollar-pound relationship.

Move Still Inexpedient.

As the Treasury represents the situation, such a move now would be as politically and economically inexpedient as President Roosevelt thought it when he twice turned down the equivalent proposal during the economic conference, the second time in his famous July 3 message which stunned the conference and for all practical purposes ended it.

The so-called sound money advocates who remain in the Administration see another road to ultimate stabilization and to removal of the monetary uncertainty which, they believe, is paralyzing private capital, sending much of it in flight abroad, and, as a result, retarding recovery. That road is budgetary, in their judgment.

Douglas, apparently, is taking a determined stand for this thesis now, on the ground that a halt must be called before the country suddenly finds itself unable to finance its commitments without resort to the printing press. The issue must culminate by the end of the week, for the budget has to go to the Public Printer by then.

Preliminary figures allow for some $500,000,000 additional for direct relief, but would rigidly exclude any further large outlays for other extraordinary expenditures, not only on the ground that unchecked lavishness is the road of paper money inflation, but that public works funds, for example, already authorized, can not be expended for another year.

Edict May Be Delayed.

Whether the President will take his stand on this ground, or on a compromise acceptable to the advocates of prompt restriction, may not be known until the budget is presented to Congress immediately after his message. However, present discussions at the White House turn on the issue raised. In round numbers, Douglas estimates expenditures at $2,600,000,000 for the new fiscal year, and receipts at $3,550,000,000. He sees a surplus that will run well beyond a billion if R. F. C. operations end with the fortifying of banks, apropos of Federal insurance, by next March at the latest, and repayments on R. F. C. disbursements come in at the expected rate.

The major assumptions behind the budget policy are that there will be no occasion to pay the Government's bills with greenbacks if the halt in spending is called now; that this would do more than anything else to convince the doubters that the currency is to be kept sound; that, in turn, private capital will venture out of its retreats and into lagging construction; that in no other way can the price level be soundly, safely or assuredly raised or increased—that, in short, there is no other road to the goal of the inflationists.

Many Demands Coming.

Congress seethes with demands for fresh outlays; the progressive group leaders, like Senators LaFollette, Nye and Norris, divulged demands yesterday for another $3,300,000,000 addition to the public works fund, though Douglas holds the sums already authorized can not be put to work for another year. The progressives also want $500,000,000 minimum for direct relief and some of them have schemes to spend literally tens of billions paying off debts, rural and urban, with paper money.

Senator Pittman, up for election in Nevada next year, is daily crusading for his favorite silver. He would have the Treasury coin all silver mined after a bill he has in mind is enacted, and estimates it would add about $30,000,000 to the currency, providing, as he puts it, a mild inflation. LaFollette would spend up to ten billions on public works alone.

At some stage, as the budget stabilizers see it, the President must put his foot down on Federal spending. They think the time is here. For, in their view, the "safe" level of public debt is incalculable and not preceived until a nation suddenly discovers itself unable readily to pay its bills. They feel that the Treasury's experience with the recent refunding issue, and the 2¼ per cent of interest paid on the short term certificates floated to finance December 15 requirements, are significant, and that the heavy requirements of next March and April may reveal a severe strain unless the budget situation is taken in hand now.

The Treasury is to take about $1,000,000,000 of the funds offered for the new certificates, instead of the $950,000,000 first announced. Morgenthau announced yesterday that subscriptions tendered aggregated $2,600,000,000, and that $607,590,500 of $727,000,000 in maturing certificates had been offered for exchange.

News Leak Is Mystery.

The taking of about a billion was explained on the basis that all subscriptions of $5,000 were allotted in full, while 17 per cent of all cash subscriptions had been accepted.

The Treasury meanwhile is still puzzling over how London gets the R. F. C. gold price in advance, whether by a "leak," which investigators are now inclined to doubt, or by guess. The mystery remains unsolved.

"Only two people besides myself know the gold price before it is released to the press," said the Acting Secretary yesterday. Chairman Jones, of the R. F. C., who helps set the price, is one of the others. Morganthau himself is another. But who the third is, he would not say. It is no great secret, though. The third is Prof. George F. Warren, author of the gold buying manipulations. However, he is not officially acknowledged.

Jones gave out his usual total of domestic newly mined gold bought by the R. F. C. It is now 420,000 ounces, obtained for $14,000,000, he said. As usual foreign purchases were kept secret, though Jones has said they were trifling, suggesting that the psychological effect, perhaps to scare off dollar speculators, has been the main idea behind the announced buying abroad.

Bond Market Watched.

Morgenthau announced, also, that the Treasury bought $7,079,000 of its own bonds last week, much more than usual. While this buying is described as being for investment purposes for various trust accounts, its effect on propping up the Government bond market is being closely watched by Treasury officials.

Morgenthau formally denied the newest stabilization rumors, and added "there is no change in the Treasury's monetary program, and if the Reserve Bank was holding discussions with foreign banks, I would know of them."

He said he was in touch with Gov. Harrison almost daily and knew nothing of any conversations regarding stabilization or exchange controls. One explanation is that the new rumor arose from misunderstanding the apparent reaching of a top price, $34.01 an ounce, for domestic gold, a fact Harison would probably convey to the Bank of England. Acting Secretary of State Phillips similarly denied that the American Ambassador in London or the British Ambassador here had, as rumored, raised the stabilization question anew.

Peace Move in Cuba Fails, Uruguayan Blames Welles

Claims U. S. Envoy Would Not Follow His Advice and Blocked Plan.

Havana, Dec. 1 (AP).—A conciliation conference of government officials and opposition leaders ended tonight in a failure for which American Ambassador Sumner Welles was blamed by Benjamin Fernandez de Medina, Uruguayan Minister to Cuba, who had proposed a plan to ease the troubled political situation.

De Medina revealed peace negotiations were broken off because President Ramon Grau San Martin refused to deal with delegates who went to the presidential palace prepared to demand his immediate resignation.

According to De Medina, former Prof. Dorta Duque, a close friend of Welles, undertook to act as spokesman for several opposition leaders.

President Grau suddenly interrupted and asked Duque whom he represented. Receiving an answer that he considered unsatisfactory, the executive called off the meeting and the conciliation attempts.

To the Associated Press the minister said:

"I lost 20 days' work because Mr. Welles did not deign to follow my advice.

"His role was only to seek the cooperation of the A. B. C. (a secret society), but instead of this he organized a special meeting of the opposition last night without my knowledge, sending his observers, who spoiled everything.

"We already had everything set. The only matter pending was the setting of the date for President Grau's resignation, and it is only the ambassador's stepping out of bounds which caused the failure."

Mr. Welles said that since De Medina previously had kept him informed of the conciliation efforts, he was very much surprised to hear of the remarks of the Uruguayan minister.

The American ambassador asserted he was acting only as a friendly observer in De Medina's efforts, and that he would issue a full statement on the matter tomorrow.

A representative of the national coalition junta, a leftist organization supporting Dr. Guiteras, said President Grau had signed the following five demands presented by Guiteras:

The immediate breaking up of mediation efforts, the formation of a leftist cabinet, the resignation of all rightist secretaries, the immediate enforecemnt of the light rate reduction decree and a strict adherence to the original revolutionary program.

The junta claimed it had the support of Col. Batista, who, they asserted, "was inclined to lean to the left."

Roberts, Reno's Famous Mayor, Dies Suddenly

Foe of War in House, He Urged Free Drinks to Solve Liquor Problem.

Reno, Nev., Dec. 11 (AP).—E. E. Roberts, the ultra-liberal Mayor of Reno and Nevada's war-time congressman, died unexpectedly today.

Diabetes was given as the cause of death. The mayor would have been 65 tomorrow.

With his passing Nevada lost one of its most colorful characters. He had served four terms in Congress, ran for senator twice and was in his third term as mayor.

During one campaign he spoke from the pulpit of a Methodist church and so aroused the congregation that the pastor who invited him to speak was removed. It was on that occasion that he stated if solving the liquor problem were left to him he would put a barrel of liquor, labeled "help yourself," on every street corner in Reno.

In Congress Roberts bitterly opposed entry of the United States into the World War.

As an attorney, self-educated in law, it was the mayor's boast that he had escorted more than 3,000 divorce-seekers into court and never lost a case.

He was born in Pleasant Grove, Calif., and came to Nevada in 1897.

Mr. Roberts' daughter was the late Mrs. Walter Johnson, wife of the famous baseball pitcher.

League Chief Blames Crisis On Arms Cuts

Discussions Have Devolved Into Equality of Rights, Avenol Declares.

London, Dec. 11 (AP).—The problem before the world does not involve a choice between the League of Nations and some better system, but between the league and almost complete anarchy, Joseph A. C. Avenol, secretary general of the league, declared yesterday.

Before assembled members of Parliament, M. Avenol laid the present crisis at the door of disarmament. He expressed no opinion as to desirability of revising the league covenant, but said he doubted whether objections made to its operation could be met only by a change in procedure.

Describing disarmament as the basis of European problems, the secretary general said that, despite injunction of article 8 of the covenant, arms discussions had simmered down to one of equality of rights, a purely European matter, with reduction of armaments in the background.

He maintained that confidence in the league still was justified and added that it was to be regretted a combination of circumstances had "rendered any understanding between the great powers impossible."

What is "still more to be regretted," he went on, "is that the responsibility for failure of the great powers to reach an understanding should be laid at the door of the league."

M. Avenol began conversations today with British statesmen. Simultaneously, diplomatic exchanges regarding the league and the world disarmament conference were in full swing in Europe.

The secretary general and Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, discussed the two topics in Sir John's room in the House of Commons after a government luncheon at which Avenol was the guest of honor.

Ohioan Says G.O.P. Rules Farm Loans

Declares Set-Up in State Has Built "Machine."

Representative Truax (Democrat), Ohio, yesterday told the Associated Press that those responsible for the set-up of the Farm Loan Administration in Ohio have created a "Republican machine."

Truax last week told President Roosevelt that out of 186 appraisers for Federal farm loans in Ohio, 142 were Republicans, and that Democratic applicants for such positions were given "no show."

Taxicab Group Loses $7,000 Accident Suit

Supreme Court Holds It Liable for Injury to Huckster.

After having successfully contested to the United States Supreme Court an adverse decision in the District Supreme Court, James Callas, a huckster, yesterday received his reward when a jury in District Supreme Court allowed him $7,000 damages.

The decision followed the recent establishment of liability of the Independent Taxi Owners Association for injuries to persons as a result of Diamond Cab accidents. Up until this suit, the company had been exonerated from liability on the ground that it had no control over the individual cabs. The contention that the drivers were "independent contractors" also was put forward.

The District Court of Appeals, though, held that not only the cab driver but the association was liable. Thus Callas was enabled, after having his suit dismissed, to sue both the driver, Harry Schou, and the association.

His injuries were received when a cab struck his push cart near the Bureau of engraving and Printing, in 1927. Attorney John U. Gardner represented Callas, who lives at 1005 Seventh street northwest.

In the lower court the original opinion was expressed, at the first trial, that Callas' suit would lie only against the driver.

Emperor Rumored For Manchukuo

Japanese Plan Separate Set-Up, China Hears.

Peiping, China, Dec. 11 (AP).—A Japanese plan to restore the "Boy Emeprior," Henry Pu-Yi, to the throne of his Manchu ancestors in Manchukuo was believed by Chinese authorities here today to be progressing rapidly in Mukden.

Credence was lent to the rumors filtering down from beyond the great wall of China by Japan's unceasing disavowal of intent to annex Manchukuo. The Chinese regard these avowals as containing some grain of truth and indicating that while Japan does not intend to annex Manchukuo, she does intend to place Pu-Yi on the throne of that puppet State as ruler over the people whence his forefathers came.

Reports from Mukden set next spring as the date for establishment of the projected monarchy.

What Today Means

"SAGITTARIUS"

If December 12 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 to 11:50 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 6:30 to 7:40 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 to 9 a. m. and from 3:30 to 5:40 p. m.

Housewives will be particularly active on this date and will accomplish much, both in their homes and in other activities they are interested in. Children will not require the usual amount of attention and mothers with very young children will have more freedom. All agreements made on this date should be gotten in writing.

The child born on this December 12 will be an inconsistent little one. He will have many wants and once they are fulfilled, he will quite lose interest in what he has gotten.

If December 12 is the date of your birth, you are more than likely a person who puts up a big front; you brag a lot and never fail to "blow your own horn" when you get a chance. If you are not careful and trust too much to a false front to get you across, you are probably in for a rude awakening. You have a fine head on your shoulders, but you are either too lazy to use it, or else you enjoy fooling the rest of the world. They see the good things in you and believe that you are sincerely using the fine equipment that you have. You have a naturally pleasing personality; you are spontaneous and witty in your conversation and you have the ability to judge people well.

Born on December 12, you must get down to earth and try to develop a true sense of values and proportions. Life is more than just a game and you must learn that you have to do more than just get by. In love, you are probably fickle; you put yourself across in a big way and as soon as you have made your conquest, you lose all interest and turn to other fields. This applies to both sexes. There is a very cruel and unkind side to your nature which makes its appearance in your relations with those of the opposite sex. The men are inclined to boast about their love affairs and to recite with relish details of the broken hearts they have left along the road. You will have many difficulties to face during your life, but most of them you will have brought on yourself.

Successful people born on December 12:

Arthur Brisbane, noted newspaperman.

Lillian Norton Dome (Mme. Nordica), singer.

William K. Vanderbilt, financier.

Byron A. Brooks, author and inventor.

Mary Todd Lincoln, wife of Abraham Lincoln.

Peter F. Collier, publisher.

Food Cost Rise Here Triples National Gains

Bureau Reports General Increase, Led by Eggs, Lard, Salmon.

Retail food prices in Washington rose three-tenths of 1 per cent—three times as much as the average food cost rise throughout the country—during the two-week period ended November 21, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday.

The average cost rise for the Nation was placed at one-tenth of 1 per cent. Capital food charges were reported to be eight and three-tenths per cent higher November 21 than on November 15 last year.

A general strengthening in the average prices of eggs, lard, corn meal, cabbage and canned salmon was pointed out by the bureau in accounting for the increase. Declining prices were reported for pork chops, oranges, oleomargarine, fresh beef cuts, cheese and canned tomatoes.

Continued rise in prices brought foodstuffs to within seven-tenths of 1 per cent of the high of September 6, when the index reached 107.4, based on the 1913 average as 100. Present prices are more than 18 per cent above April's low point of 90.4.

Increases in retail food prices occurred in 25 of the 51 cities covered by the bureau. Salt Lake City led the Nation with a rise of nearly 2 per cent. Cincinnati and Houston showed an increase of slightly more than 1⅛ per cent.

Graft Charges In Home Loans Under Inquiry

Fahey Tells of Gouging by Appraisers, Others; Chicago Named.

(Associated Press.)

John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, is investigating reports of false appraisals of home loan mortgages in Chicago and other places.

He warned yesterday that no one has a right to make any charges against mortgages on the ground that they can obtain special privileges from the corporation.

An investigation of the refusals of some mortgagees to accept corporation bonds in exchange for mortgages also is being undertaken.

Reports are being obtained from every State with regard not only to refusals due to misunderstandings but also with regard to refusals where the lender apparently wishes to foreclose in the expectation of making a profit by obtaining property at distress prices.

In Chicago, some attorneys have claimed to be in a position to influence loans before the commission and that several appraisal companies have been charged with making excessive fees.

As a result, the appraisal companies have been discharged and all appraisals turned over to the Chicago Real Estate Board, which agreed to take the work for but half the previous price.

"No one has any influence with the board," Fahey said, "and as a matter of fact it is against the law to take any fee or commission for negotiating a loan."

Some complaints had been reported from the Southeast, but Fahey said it so far had been impossible to "put a finger on" any specific actions.

Examination Postponed.

Examination of records of the Electric Bond & Share Co., by the Federal Trade Commission, scheduled for today, has been postponed until tomorrow.

Weirton Steel Official Defies Wagner Board

Flouts Order Governing Employes' Election and Ends Pact.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 11 (AP).—Ernest Tener Weir, chairman of the Weirton Steel Co., defied the National Labor Board today, flatly refusing to abide by rules it had announced to guide an election of employes' representatives for collective bargaining.

The dynamic 56-year-old executive, who began his career as an office boy and has built up one of the chief competitors of the giant U. S. Steel Corporation with his National Steel, wrote Senator Robers D. Wagner, chairman of the board:

"We must consider any arrangements with you terminated and the election will proceed in accordance with the rules adopted by the employes' organization."

Informed later that Chairman Wagner had announced the board would enforce its agreement to supervise the election scheduled for next Friday at the plants at Weirton, Clarksburg, W. Va., and Steubenville, Ohio, Weir reiterated: "My letter stands."

Told that Wagner said the Attorney General would be asked to step in if necessary, Weir expressed confidence that he would be on the winning side of any legal action.

Many Back Stand.

An official of the company said numerous telegrams are pouring in congratulating Weir on his position. He named several large concerns outside the steel trade as indorsing his stand.

Thirty minutes after Weir's letter was made public, Jesse I. Miller, assistant to Wagner and designated by the board to supervise the steel mill election, appeared at Weir's office. He presented a counter proposal by the board, which it was said represented some concession in the matter of qualifying the electorate.

Weir gave them a copy of the letter and said his answer remained the same.. The board is out as far as the election is concerned, he declared.

As they left, the Labor Department men said something about an "injunction" but would not add more.

The labor board rules for the steel company election, announced last week, set aside a primary election, scheduled for today and made nominations by petitions bearing 10 signatures instead. It also increased to 98 the employes' proposal that 49 men be elected. Today's "new rules" did not basically change these rules, to which Weir took exception.

Calls Agreement Broken.

Weir's letter accused the board of failing to follow an agreement reached October 15. It said testimony before the board would show it agreed, at the company's insistence, to hold the election at the next regularly scheduled election date of the employe's union, and continued:

"The rules which we have just received, and which you request us to post, are not in conformity with the by-laws of our employes' organization, which was discussed before your board. * * *

"The employes' representation plan now in force was adopted by the employes themselves, and we believe they have the right under law to determine their form of organization and the number of representatives they desire.

"The change which you are proposing is not a matter of procedure or supervision of the election, but is an attempt to impose an entirely new form of organization on our employes. We think that neither the company nor the Labor Board has any such right."

Weir attacked the nominating plan of the board at great length, calling it "not only a vital change of plan, but inherently vicious and unfair. If nominations are by petition, the persons who sign are subjected to criticism, threats and intimidation."

Car Kills Retired Marine Officer

Major Case Was Original "Captain Flagg."

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Maj. Philip Townsend Case of the Marine Corps, retired, the original of "Captain Flagg" in "What Price Glory," was killed when struck down by a motor car last night. He was 44 years old.

Maj. Case supplied Laurence Stallings with the basis of facts for the stage character "Captain Flagg" in the play, but it was another officer who suggested the swaggering characteristics.

A motorist who witnessed the accident took the number of the car, and several hours later a Negro letter carrier, Melvin Sweeney, was arrested and held for arraignment today on a homicide charge.

Sports Promoter Bills Star Wrestlers for Toy Fund Show

Post Staff Photo.

Kimble and Marsh, twin sons of Senator and Mrs. Bennett Clark, with Spencer Lee Hart, jr., arrive at the Willard Hotel carrying gifts, which served as admission to Theodore Tiller, jr.'s marionettes benefit performance for The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund.

Part of Profits in Friday Bout Go to Post's Christmas Box.

Again filling his role as Santa Claus to The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund, Joe Turner, sports promoter, yesterday announced his wrestling show at the Auditorium Friday will be an all-star benefit performance, featuring Jim Browning, world's championship claimant, and "Tiny" Roebuck will bring new funds to the cause. Part of the profits will be devoted to The Post fund to provide a Merry Christmas for every needy child in the city.

"The opportunity of helping a good cause and at the same time see a great show should bring one of the finest crowds ever seen at the Auditorium," declared Mr. Turner. "In fact, I wouldn't be surprised if we played to capacity.

"Jim Browning is the type of wrestler the fans go for. And they're saying it with ringsides while indorsing the Browning-Roebuck card."

Washingtonians were outspoken yesterday in their approval of the benefit, and Mr. Turner announced plans to sign a supporting match.

Toys, Tickets to Show.

Judging from all the signs, a capacity audience will crowd Keith's Theater Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, when the Children's Theater Party, under the auspices of The Post Toy and Doll Fund, will be held. A new toy for the fund will serve as an admission ticket, and the children of Washington are cordially invited to attend. Parents or guardians accompanying the children will be admitted, provided they also bring new toys.

The management of the Keith's Theater, which is presenting the show as a share in aiding The Post Toy and Doll Fund, has billed a special program to amuse the youthful audience. The doors of the theater will be open at 8:30 a. m.

The program will include:

"Three Little Pigs," courtesy United Artists.

"Cubby Cartoon," courtesy Radio Pictures Corporation.

"Mickey Maguire," courtesy Radio Pictures Corporation.

"Grantland Rice Sportlight," courtesy Radio Pictures Corporation.

Crazy Cat Cartoon, "Snowtime," courtesy Columbia Pictures Corporation.

Doll House Is Prize.

A huge hand-made doll house, constructed by Andrew Gemeny, of the Travelers Insurance Co., will be given to one of the children attending the theater party. In the gift by Mr. and Mrs. Gemeny, their son, Gordon, 4, also shares. It is a fine, modern, eight-room playhouse, white frame, with green shingled roof. On the first floor are living room, hall dining room, kitchen and bedroom, while on the second floor are bedroom, bathroom and play room. The house is completely furnished and has electric lights.

Mr. Gemeny has been working hard to have the house complete, inside and out, for the Keith party. Mrs. Gemeny shopped for just the right paper for the walls and the right type of furniture.

Speaking yesterday of this labor of love, Mr. Gemeny declared he has always enjoyed tinkering and that it was a pleasure to do so with the idea of helping The Post Toy and Doll Fund.

G. P. O. Sends Toys.

From the Division of Accounts of the Government Printing Office, under James K. Wallace, superintendent of accounts, came 175 toys, mostly new, that the division employes had collected to aid The Post Toy and Doll Fund.

Among the toys in the truck load which delighted the workers at The Post Toy and Doll Fund headquarters yesterday were Raggedy Ann dolls, porcelain and wool animals, spinning tops, balls, mechanical "Pop Eye," trapeze jumpers and toy furniture, some of which had been repainted by Superintendent Wallace until it looked like new.

There was a good-natured rivalry among the clerks, too. A Democrat presented a red cart drawn by a red donkey and a Republican accepted the challenge by giving a similar cart, drawn by a blue-and-yellow elephant.

This division of accounts has been doing Christmas relief work for several years. For the last three years the employes have been supplying Christmas dinners to poor families. There are 90 employes in the division and last year they supplied 100 dinner baskets, none worth less than $5.

Riotous Waste Is Laid to Rule Of Democrats

Rep. Treadway Backs Pay Restoration for Old U. S. Employes.

Charging the Roosevelt Administration has "run riot in extravagances," Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, yesterday cited the salary paid Miss Frances M. Robinson, secretary to the Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

At the same time, he demanded the 15 per cent cut in the salaries of regular Government workers immediately be restored.

"For the national recovery administrator to raise the salary of a typist from $25 a week to nearly $6,000 a year in a few weeks is proof enough that the plea of economy is not being lived up to in good faith," he said, referring to Miss Robinson's salary.

"Contrary to my usual custom of not expressing opinions on legislative matters likely to come before Congress, I am free to state that I shall favor restoration of the 15 per cent cut which was deducted from the salaries of Government employes by the so-called economy act of March 20, 1933," his statement read.

"When this law was passed, Congress was informed there was a vital need for governmental economy. Instead of seriously exercising economy, the Administration has run riot in extravagances."

He charged a large number of employes, mostly "political appointees," have been added to the Federal pay roll in many instances at salaries greatly in excess of pay received by regular workers.

He said there are approximately 2,000 employes of the National Recovery Administration alone in Washington, not counting the large number of workers in other new agencies.

"I do not believe the older Federal employes should be penalized to provide for this emergency group, and I, for one, shall vote to restore the full salaries of the older groups, both in Washington and throughout the country," he said.

Dollar's Flight Talk of Europe, Kellogg Says

Returns for Birthday at Home; Lamenting U. S. Gold Action.

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Returning from Europe today to spend his seventy-second birthday at his St. Paul home, Frank B. Kellogg said the "thing I heard most about in Europe" was the sending of American capital abroad for investment.

The former Secretary of State, now on the bench of the World Court, urged a "stable currency," and said it was a "great mistake to go off the gold basis."

"The thing I heard most about in Europe was the fact that millions—I might, if I knew more, say hundreds of millions—are being sent abroad for investment," Kellogg said. "They are talking about it everywhere.

Says Europe Hangs to Gold.

"It is difficult for the people of Europe to understand why the dollar is uncertain. * * * No country in Europe that went through the postwar inflation would touch inflation today. They'll hang to the gold standard as long as possible."

Declaring he did not think "the President would resort to fiat money," Kellogg said, "What we need more than anything else, is a stable currency."

The jurist did not say whether the dollar, if stabilized, should be at its former level or at its present ratio to gold.

Favorable to Expansion.

He said, however, he found no objections to expansion of currency through regular channels of machinery already available, providing the expanded money was backed by ample securities.

Kellogg, the coauthor of the Kellogg-Briand pact of Paris to outlaw war, had nothing to say on the American recognition of Russia except to term it a possible "stabilizing influence in the Far East."

In his tenure as Secretary of State, the policy followed was that of nonrecognition set forth by his predecessor, Charles Evans Hughes.

Kellogg, who will be 72 years old December 22, will go to his St. Paul home after spending a week or 10 days in New York.

Cannibals, Turned Christians, Ban Pig Worship and Smoking

The white man's civilization has come to the Island of Mussau in the Mathais group of cannibalistic South Sea Islands and each of its 2,000 inhabitants has given up tobacco smoking, pig worship and polygamy, according to the Rev. M. E. Kern, foreign mission secretary, whose report, "Into the Regions Beyond," was read last night to the General Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists in connection with the annual Prayer Week services in Takoma Park.

The Rev. Mr. Kern said the natives had become members of the Seventh-Day Adventist faith.

"This transformation on the part of these literally wild and bloodthirsty humans came within one year after a missionary had risked being eaten by them," the Kern report stated.

"The natives have put away all but their first wives. They seem now to be living for something, which I can not understand. I took a case of tobacco over with me, and it was returned unopened. Betel nut chewing is not seen anywhere. I marvel, and say it is a miracle."

An address, "Medical Ministry—Its Place in the Adventist Gospel Work," by A. G. Daniels, president of the board of managers of the College of Medical Evangelists, Loma Lindo, Calif., will feature tonight's program.

Heads Chaplains

CHAPLAIN ALVA J. BRASTED, who will take office as chief of Army chaplains on December 23, when the term of the present chief, Julian E. Yates, expires.

Alva J. Brasted Assigned Army Chaplain Chief

Successor to J. E. Yates Will Receive Rank of Colonel.

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed Chaplain Alva J. Brasted, who holds the rank of lieutenant-colonel, to be chief of chaplains of the Army when the term of Julian E. Yates, present chief, expires on December 23.

Chaplain Brasted is now post and regimental chaplain at Fort Snelling, Minn. He joined the Army in 1913 and was appointed lieutenant-colonel this year. He will be promoted to the rank of colonel when he takes his new assignment.

Theological Graduate.

The new chief of chaplains is a member of the Baptist Church North. He was born in New York State in 1876, and is a graduate of Des Moines College, which he left in 1902, and the Theological School of the University of Chicago, from which he graduated in 1905.

Chaplain Brasted received the rank of first lieutenant when he joined the Army in 1913 and was assigned to the Coast Artillery at Fort Hancock, N. J. With the same arm of the service, he was detailed to duty at Fort Screven, Ga., in 1914 and 1915. The next three years he spent as regimental chaplain of the Eighth Infantry in the Philippine Islands and in the American Expeditionary Force.

Served at Camp Lee.

Chaplain Brasted later served at Camp Lee, Va., Fort Sam Houston, Tex., and Sternberg General Hospital, Philippine Islands.

After two years at Sternberg Hospital, Chaplain Brasted returned to the United States, to Fort Logan, Colo. In 1931 he was ordered to Fort Snelling. His appointment as chief of chaplains is for four years.

Transit Employe Held Up as He Prepares for Run.

Brandishing revolvers, two white bandits late yesterday held up Bryan Thompson, of Rosslyn, Va., a conductor on the Capital Transit Co., and robbed him of between $50 and $60, he told police last night.

The holdup occurred at Fourteenth and East Capitol streets, Thompson said. Part of the money belonged to him, and part was the property of the company, he asserted.

Thompson was waiting to make a late afternoon run, he told police. He declared he could identify the robbers.

Aid Consumer, People's Lobby Asks Roosevelt

Attacks NRA "Gouging," "Window Dressing"; Seeks New Cabinet Place.

President Roosevelt was urged yesterday in a letter from the emergency conference of consumer organizations, known as the people's lobby, to ask Congress to create a Department of the Consumer and to add to the Cabinet a Secretary for Consumers.

In another letter, to Mrs. Mary H. Rumsey, chairman of the Consumers Advisory Board of NRA, the conference asked for resignation of the board, declaring the board is "mere window dressing for the NRA, with no effective powe rto safeguard the consumer against price-gouging and against shoddy standards of manufacturing."

Attacks Monopolies.

The emergency conference of consumer organizations includes Consumers Research, Inc., the Co-operative League of the United States, Consolidated Home Ownes committee, Committee for the Defense of Schools and other similar organizations.

The letters to the President and to Mrs. Rumsey were signed by J. Charles Laue, as executive secretary of the organization.

In his letter to Mrs. Rumsey, Laue says the consumers are getting no representation on code authorities or their regional subdivisions; that there has been no development of essential data upon which policies to protect the consumer can be based; that there has been no insistence on standards of quality, and that sellers of goods to consumers have been allowed to acquire monopoly privileges.

"Consumer Foots Bill."

In his letter to the President, Laue says:

"The consumer who pays all the taxes and all other Government costs and in every other way foots the bill of industry and finance, their wastes and leaks, unemployment and underpayment of labor, certainly is justified in demanding a place of even greater importance than business men, and fully equal to that of labor."

He declared nearly the whole burden of relief has been put on the shoulders of the lower income classes. He urged reduction of sales taxes and a sweeping tax on invested wealth.

Radio Commission Wins License Suit

Upheld in Its Permit for 2-Station Tie-Up.

The District Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the Federal Radio Commission in granting an "experimental synchronization' permit to two mid-Western broadcasting stations.

The permit was issued to Stations WBBM, Chicago, and KFAB, Lincoln, Nebr., so they could operate the two stations simultaneously, upon the same frequency, with identical programs. The hours set in the permit were from 10 p. m. until midnight.

Station WGN, owned by the Chicago Tribune, asked that the permit be revoked, asserting increased competition would result in an "economic injury." The appellate court held the complaint was "so vague, problematical and conjectural as to not merit attention.

Wild Ride Ends in Open, But Driver Is Arrested

A wild ride, which ended when his automobile bounced over the curb in the 2900 block of Wisconsin avenue and plunged a quarter of a mile through a vacant lot, led late yesterday to the arrest of Harry Cinder, of 1225 Elliott place northwest, on a charge of driving while drunk.

Cinder's automobile struck two parked cars before it left the street, police said. These were the property of Albino Penigo, of 918 Seventh street northwest, and Mrs. Elizabeth L. Gittings, of Bethesda, Md. Nobody was injured.

Radio Waves and Ripples

THIRTY-TWO years ago today Guglielmo Marconi spanned the Atlantic by wireless for the first time. And as late as last night, our modern broadcasters, who are notorious for remembering and celebrating anniversaries—going so far one day last week as to bake a cake because Albert Spaulding's violin was having a birthday—had not so much as nodded in recognition of that December 12, 1901, when Marconi, wearing earphones and sitting with two assistants and a lot of queer-looking devices in an old barracks on Signal Hill, at St. Johns, Newfoundland, heard the first transatlantic signal—three dots—coming faintly from a transmitter on the southwest tip of England.

At least C. B. S.'s Mr. Paley or N. B. C.'s Mr. Aylesworth might make appropriate little speeches tonight.

Whitecaps.

WRC — Christopher Morley lyrics, "The Black Beetle" and "Dandy Dandelion," sung by Tenor Lewis James for children, 5:45 p. m.; Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit in air premiere of "Singing on the Air," new songs by Mary Cohan, 8 p. m.; Fire Chief, 9:30 p. m.; Phillips Lord broadcasts again from the "Seth Parker," 10 p. m.

WMAL—First air demonstration of the celeste grande, a piano that sounds like an organ, 2 p. m.; Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Chairman Jesse Jones addressing the Illinois Manufacturers Association, 10:30 p. m.; Morley Singers in a program of Christmas carols, 11:15 p. m.

WJSV—Auction of unclaimed articles from New York postoffice, 10:15 a. m.; Orestes H. Caldwell, former Federal Radio Commissioner and now president of the Science Forum of the New York Electrical Society, demonstrates the speed of sound, 9:15 p. m.; Glen Gray's Cassa Loma Orchestra, "Dream Waltz Medley," Irene Taylor singing "No More Love" and "So Shy," 10 p. m.

There was a rumor afloat yesterday that WJSV minds knew all along whom they were going to use on the lady announcer job, that all the competition business was staged to arouse the interest of home folks in their Sun Dial program. So we went to the young lady in question and had the rumor sunk.

The young lady is Helen Ault. She started working regularly yesterday. She and her bosses declared before us there was no collusion. One of the minds was said to have favored another contestant until the final audition Sunday.

Miss Ault is practically another native Washingtonian. She came here at the age of 6 months with her family, the Bennett Aults. She attended Western High School, played in a Junior League show and with the St. Patrick Players before Eddie Dowling took her to Broadway at the age of 15. She had the lead part in "Honeymoon Lane," toured in vaudeville, acted with the National Theater stock company, worked for Oscar Hammerstein in "Sweet Adeline," danced in "Three's a Crowd" and sang for New York radio. She's an inch over five feet tall. Her hair and eyes are brown.

She determined to live again in the Capital because her mother is ill. She went to WJSV because she needed a job.

You may not think the hat such a nifty, but the girl who wears it is Loretta Lee, Bandman George Hall's blues singer. She works for C. B. S., is 19 and a native of New Orleans.

Ben Bernie heard Joan Olsen (above), singing over a station in Kansas City. He hurried her over to Chicago for network broadcasting.

Four trees will be planted in Alexandria Saturday.

No. 1 tree will be dedicated to the memory of John Carlyle, who built the house in which George Washington received his first military commission. No. 2 goes into the ground for John Duffey, who made the trowel with which Washington laid the corner stone for the Capitol. No. 3 will be for Anthony Charles Cazenove, whose daughter married a man whose father had served with Washington during the Revolution. Tree No. 4 will stand as a memorial to Col. George Deneale, a charter member of the Washington Society of Alexandria, who had an important part in Washington's funeral rites.

Washington Society of Alexandria will conduct the tree-planting exercises at the Old Presbyterian Meeting House in Alexandria. Ferdinand A. Silcox, chief forester of the U. S. Forestry Service, will be the principal speaker. Mrs. Robert F. Downham will sing a solo, "Trees."

The rites, including the playing of the oldest church organ in use in America—a pump and bellows instrument—will be broadcast by WJSV from 2:30 to 3 in the afternoon.

WMAL will put on the air Saturday night the National Aeronautic Association dinner at the Mayflower. Speakers will include former Senator Hiram Bingham, Balloonist T. G. W. Settle, Frank Hawkes, Jimmy Weddell, Maj. Gen. Benjamin Foulois, chief of the Army Air Corps, and Capt. William J. Tate, who helped the Wrights at Kitty Hawk.

Ella Gardner, recreation expert of the Labor Department's Children's Bureau, advises on Christmas toys on WRC at 10:45 a. m. today.

Board Considers Oppenheim Taxes

Mystery Writer's Appeal Taken Up by U. S.

Income tax difficulties of E. Phillips Oppenheim, writer of detective and mystery novels, yesterday reached the United States Board of Tax Appeals.

The board took under consideration an appeal of the novelist from a ruling of the Bureau of Internal Revenue holding him $720 deficient in 1928 and 1929 income taxes and liable to a $179 penalty. Oppenheim asserted in his petition that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue erred in computing his earned income.

The writer stated that his income from publication of his books amounted to $29,264 in 1928 and $30,866 in 1929. He claimed credits which were disallowed by the revenue bureau.

Culbertson on Bridge

An End-Play in Trumps.

When the Declarer at a trump declaration finds four trumps to the Queen-Knave-nine massed in one hand, it must be conceded that he must play the hand with meticulous care to avoid the loss of more than one trump trick. This is a matter of extreme importance if the contract is is one for a Small Slam.

The hand below, which can be made only by means of an end-play in trumps, is an interesting example of how such a situation can be met, granted, of course, the element of favorable distribution, which will not frustrate the carrying out of the plan. The bidding given below was perhaps unduly optimistic on the 4-4-3-2 distribution of the declaring hand and the lack of distributional values in the responding hand.

West, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

North: ♠ A Q; ♡ 8 6 4 3; ◇ 7 4 2; ♣ A 9 7 2
West: ♠ J 9 6 2; ♡ 7; ◇ J 9 6 5; ♣ Q J 10 5
East: ♠ 7 4 3; ♡ Q J 9 2; ◇ Q 10 8; ♣ 8 4 3
South: ♠ K 10 8 5; ♡ A K 10 5; ◇ A K 3; ♣ K 6

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1♡
Pass	2NT(1)	Pass	3NT(2)
Pass	4♡(3)	Pass	4NT(4)
Pass	5NT(5)	Pass	6♡(6)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—North feels that a bid of two hearts would be inadequate. He is doubtful of bidding three hearts on his rather barren distribution and feels that a happy compromise is two notrump.

2—South also is fearful of the distribution at this point and is willing to play the hand for merely a game.

3—North now decides, possibly erroneously, that the hand should play in hearts in preference to notrump.

4—Encouraged by his partner's strong response to his Opening bid and eventual Raise to game in hearts, South is fully justified in now making the conventional Slam try.

5—With two Aces North can do nothing less.

6—The choice between six notrump and six hearts is close. As a matter of fact, the selection of the heart suit was a happy one as there is no play for six hotrump.

The Opening lead was the Queen of clubs, which Declarer won in the closed hand. He then laid down the Ace of hearts, led a small club to the Ace, and cashed the Ace and Queen of spades. He returned to the closed hand by ruffling a small club and led the King of spades, upon which he discarded a diamond in Dummy. Next the Ace and King of diamonds were cashed and the diamond 3 ruffed in the Dummy. The Declarer's play had been based largely upon the distribution of his own hand and the Dummy. At this point, with the Dummy in the lead, the situation was as follows:

North: ♠ —; ♡ 8 6; ◇ —; ♣ 9
West: ♠ J; ♡ —; ◇ J; ♣ J
East: ♠ —; ♡ Q J 9; ◇ —; ♣ —
South: ♠ 10; ♡ K 10; ◇ —; ♣ —

The hand had reached the crucial situation. Obviously, there being three trumps outstanding, the trump lead could not permit the fulfillment of the Slam, regardless of the distribution of the adverse trumps. Basing his play on this assumption, the Declarer now led the club 9. West was marked with the remaining card in that suit both because it was the suit chosen for his Opening lead and because of the subsequent fall of the cards. Regardless of the distribution of the trumps the Declarer's contract is assured. If, as the cards lie, East ruffs with an honor, the Declarer will discard. If he ruffs with the nine, the Declarer will ruff with the 10 and concede one trump trick to fulfill his contract.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If South is playing a contract of seven hearts against an Opening spade lead, what is the best chance to take all the tricks?

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

North: ♠ K Q 8 5 3; ♡ 4; ◇ A 6 3; ♣ J 10 5 2
West: ♠ 10 9 6 2; ♡ 6 3; ◇ K J 8 4; ♣ K 7 6
East: ♠ J 4; ♡ Q 10 9; ◇ 10 7 5 2; ♣ 9 8 4 3
South: ♠ A 7; ♡ A K J 8 7 5 2; ◇ Q 9; ♣ A Q

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Mrs. Dall Is Leader Of Bachelors' Ball

Mrs. Curtis Dall, daughter of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, danced with Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, U. S. A., when he led the figures at the Washington Bachelors Cotillion given at the Mayflower last night. Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, debutante daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, was originally chosen for this honor but was unable to be present on account of illness. Mrs. Dall wore a gown of wine-colored velvet, fashioned on princess lines.

It has always been the custom of the "bachelors" to select one of the season's debutantes as the partner of the officer leading the figures, but in view of the fact that last night's ball honored the Roosevelt family, Mrs. Dall very graciously consented to take Miss Roosevelt's place. It was the first cotillion given during this administration, the last one of the 1932-33 balls having taken place in February, a month prior to President Roosevelt's inauguration.

Mrs. Henry L. Roosevelt, Mrs. Dall and Mrs. Donner Roosevelt were in the receiving line which was formed in the Chinese room of the hotel and the more than 400 guests in attendance were introduced to them by Maj. Gen. George Owen Squier, U. S. A. Dancing began promptly at 10 o'clock and dancing of the figures at 11. Mrs. Henry Roosevelt wore a gown of black velvet with a brief train, and Mrs. Donner Roosevelt was in a simple princess gown.

"My Own United States" was played by the orchestra when Gen. Horton escorted Mrs. Dall the entire length of the grand ball for the dancing of the figures, and the very intricate numbers were then danced to the strains of the "Roosevelt March," written by Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin. At the completion of the figures, all those participating stood at attention while a spotlight was focused on a photograph of President Roosevelt and the orchestra played "Hail to the Chief." General dancing was then resumed with the orchestra playing "Happy Days Are Here Again."

Mr. George H. Calvert, jr., vice president of the cotillion, directed the figures, assisted by Col. Reginald L. Foster, secretary.

The Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Col. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, chairman of the floor committee, was greeted with "Anchors Away" upon his arrival at the ball.

Gen. Horton and the other officers of the group wore white gardenia boutonnieres and the members of the Board of Governors red and white carnations, in order that they might be distinguished from the other guests.

Beautiful silver trays were presented to all the ladies as souvenirs of the gala affair and handsome hand tooled Italian cigarette boxes were given the men. Mr. Archibald C. V. Wells, assistant secretary, was in charge of the very delicious hot supper that was served in the Presidential dining room.

Chaperones chosen for last night's cotillion included Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President; Mrs. George A. Dern, Mrs. James Crawford Biggs, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mrs. Smith Hempstone, Mrs. Ralph Walker McDowell, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Wilton J. Lambert, Baroness von Redlich, Baroness von Pagenhardt, Mrs. Edward Everett Robbins, Mrs. George H. Calvert, jr., Mrs. Lewis W. Jennings, jr., Mrs. John Allan Dougherty and Mrs. Meade Moore.

Reed, Mr. Robert V. Fleming, Mr. Marcy L. Sperry, Mr Edward B. Montgomery and Comdr. H. F. Kingman.

Noel Coward Shows Himself Surprised at Success Awarded Him.

The introduction by Mr. Noel Coward to the volume of his plays just issued by Doubleday Doran, entitled "Play-Parade," seems wholly worthy of being quoted at some length:

"I find it very interesting nowadays, now that I have fortunately achieved a definite publicity value, to read criticisms and analyses of my plays written by pepole of whom I have never heard and whom I have certainly never seen, and who appear to have an insatiable passion for labeling everything with a motive. They search busily behind the simplest of my phrases, like old ladies peering under the bed for burglars, and are not content until they have unearthed some definite, and usually quite inaccurate, reason for my saying this or that. This strange mania I can only suppose is the distinctive feature of a critical mind as opposed to a creative one. It seems to me that a professional writer should be animated by no other motive than the desire to write and, by doing so, to earn his living.

"The original motive for 'Calvalcade,' for instance, was a long-cherished ambition to write a big play on a big scale and to produce it at the London Coliseum. I toyed for a while with the thought of a French revolution epic, a pageant of the Second Empire, and various other ideas which might give me enough scope for intimate characterizations against a background of crowd scenes. One day I happened to see in a back number of the Illustrated London News a photograph of a troop ship leaving for the Boer War. Very soon after this the whole scheme of the play fell into my mind, and, after relating it to C. B. Cochran, and asking him to get me the Coliseum at all costs, I left for New York to play 'Private Lives.' A few months later I received a cable from him saying that the Coliseum was unobtainable, but that I could have Drury Lane provided that I would guarantee an approximate opening date. This was slightly agitating, but I cabled back that the play would be ready for production by the end of September.

"When I returned to London in May I carefully examined the facilities of the Drury Lane stage in company with G. E. Calthrop, who constructed the whole show with me in addition to designing all the scenery and dresses, and we retired to the country, after a series of conferences, to build the play according to blue prints, time changes, electrical installation and hydraulic lifts. I had not one moment to waste on patriotic fervor. After a slight delay, owing to two extra hydraulic lifts which he had to install, "Cavalcade" was finally launched in October, and with it came the deluge. A very gratifying deluge. Lettters of congratulation. Crowds in the streets. Superlatives in the press. I was told, on all sides, that I had done 'a big thing' and that a peerage was the least I could expect from a grateful monarch. I was also congratulated upon my uncanny shrewdness in slapping on a strong patriotic play two weeks before a general election, which was bound to result in a sweeping Conservative majority. (Here, I must regretfully admit that during rehearsals I was so very much occupied in the theater, and, as usual, so bleakly uninterested in politics, that I had not the remotest idea until a few days before production that there was going to be an election at all. However, there was, and its effect on the box office was considerable.)

"The excitement continued for the two weeks that I remained in London after the play had opened, and I left for South America, flushed with heroism and extremely tired. I could relax on the boat, and reflect that although it was undoubtedly very pleasant to read in the press that my country was proud of me, I had escaped the grave danger of taking the idea seriously."

Soglow and Words.

A Handbook, "THE DRUNK'S BLUE BOOK," by Norman Anthony and O. Soglow. (Stokes, $1.).

O. Soglow, depicter through his inimitable line drawings of the hilarious adventures of "The Little King," has illustrated this latest addition to post-prohibition drinking advice so profusely that there is a laugh on nearly every page.

This is fortunate, because the text matter, supplied by Norman Anthony, editor of Ballyhoo, is about as much help as the exclamations of knickerbockered tourists are to an Arizona sunset.

Not being one of those devotees of wall writing who find "Ballyhoo" inspiring, much of Mr. Anthony's labored humor leaves this reviewer cold as a mackerel, and less interested.

But O, those Soglow pictures! With a facility and insight which leads one to suspect he, too, has known the dark brown tastes of life, the cartoonist shows us hang-overs as are hang-overs, while his flying pink elephant which goes along as a book mark with each volume is the very answer to an imbiber's indiscretion.

Without its illustrations, "The Drunk's Blue Book" is just another one of those things. Explaining that this is the season for annuals and manuals for bridge, babies and the proprieties, its publishers ask: "Why not one for drunks?"

Well, if O. Soglow had run out of India ink, this little volume might have supplied the obvious answer. But fortunately there was ink enough to go around, and Mr. Soglow's riotous drunks, bewildered coppers, embattl'd wives and ingenious devices to assist inebriety make it good to the last drop.

There is much that is in questionable taste in the "Blue Book," naturally. The blue owl, clutching bottle and corkscrew, with the slogan: "We Do Our Quart," is far from funny. There are chapters that bore. There are others, on "Wetiquette," "Sobriety Tests," "How to Fill in the Gaps in the Night Before," which contain the material for a snicker or two to supplement the humor of Mr. Soglow's illustrations.

Perhaps it will all seem as superlatively funny as it thinks it is, after repeal rolls around our way and we can take it in (and with) the proper spirits.

Gift Gloves and Handbags Constant Reminder of You

Directed by Amos Parrish

Gloves and handbags of the type described below are available in Washington in all the better class shops.

New York, Dec. 11.—Always in hand. And therefore a constant reminder of yourself. That's one advantage—especially if you're a man seeking a lady's favor—of making a fashionable gift of golves or handbag. Or—better—both.

New shapes in handbags will please her . . . because everybody won't have the same thing. And they'll make her realize you know what's what.

Ovals New.

Ovals, similar to the one in the top sketch, are among the newer ones for daytime use. Others have uneven tops. And still others are long and narrow and often characterized as "stream-line."

If you should choose one of these . . . or a regulation pouch or envelope . . . and a pair of gloves, too, try to have their materials harmonize.

Bags of smooth and grained leathers are sound choices. They not only go with the fashionable smooth leather shoes, but can also be carried right on into spring. And with these smooth leather, gloves of fine kidskin are the best match.

Suede Ensembles.

If the bag you pick is of suede, make your gloves of suede. (And hope that she'll wear suede shoes with them!)

And if the bag is made of fabric, as many very smart bags are, choose to go with it some fabric gloves . . . as nearly like the fabric of the bag as you can find.

As for type, slip-ons or demi-mousquetaires in four to six-button lengths will be correct.

For more formal afternoon or evening bags, one that sparkles is the thing. Gold or silver sequins, metal cloths, velvet, satin or crepe trimmed with glittering heads . . . these are all important to fashion.

One of the newest sparkling bags is of crepe with gold stars twinkling all over it. (This has been sketched at the bottom of the illustration.)

It can go to formal afternoon teas or out with glittering evening ensembles.

Longer Gloves.

Gloves to go with bags of this sort would depend on what time of day the bag will be carried. If it is to be used for afternoon, 8 to 10 button suedes or kidskins would be right.

But for evening the very long 16-button gloves should be given.

If you are giving just gloves alone, make your daytime, afternoon and evening choices from these same types.

But if you'd like to get sportier, give her some of the gay wool gloves that she can wear with a cap and scarf for all sorts of outdoor activities.

Tomorrow—Christmas towels are gay as their wrappings.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

It is best to overcome constipation by training and by the use of diets. If any medicines need to be used they should be the weakest possible and those with the least tendency to cause the constipation habit. If enemas must be used it is better to avoid soapsuds and to use a simple, normal salt solution.

We should be especially careful to prevent it from developing. Therefore it is not advisable to make frequent use of enemas, and especially those containing soapsuds.

Dr. Julius Friedenwald considers the habitual use of enemas as harmful. This is especially true of the well-known soapsuds enema. It should apply also, but in a lesser measure, to the soapstick. We think of soap as an article of household use, losing sight of the fact that it is a chemical substance composed in part of lye or some other strong alkali. The fat or grease present does not completely neutralize the alkali. There are not apt to be any harmful effects when this mixture of alkali and fats is applied to the skin, but the same is not true when it comes to the delicate membranes with which the enemas solutions come in contact. Soapsuds enemas are more irritating than some of the chemicals that we thinks of as definitely harmful.

Find Trouble First.

S. L. writes: I am 70 years old. Eight years ago I had gallstones removed, but the gall bladder was left behind. Several weeks ago I caught cold, and that started trouble in my gall bladder. My weight has dropped from 140 to 120 pounds and is still falling. I take the juice of a lemon in warm water every morning. I can eat chicken, lamb, chicken soup, and fruits—and do—but I am going down every day. What can I eat? I am too old to be operated on. What shall I do?

Reply.

You are not too old to be operated on, but is operation indicated? The symptoms you give suggest cancer of the liver. That can not be operated on. You need to know, first of all, what the trouble is.

Castor Oil Might Help.

Mrs. X. Y. Z. writes: My feet are very sensitive to any pressure, friction, or the like. I have found the condition much worse when I have worn rather expensive silk stockings that have the soles of same woven with lisle threads than when I have worn cheaper silk stockings that have soles woven with a cotton thread. The lisle is a small, hard twisted thread and is much harsher and more irritating on the feet than is the cotton thread, which is very soft to the tread, thus giving much ease and comfort to the feet.

Reply.

Another suggestion that has come in is to grease the feet nightly with castor oil. A certain child tells me he is glad to have the castor oil used that way.

Wassail Bowl Popular Rite At Christmas

America Continues Holiday Custom Started by Henry VII.

The Wassail bowl was an ancient ritual started on Christmas day. It was called Waeshal—meaning "Be whole," and at every Christmas gathering the toasting or Wassail bowl of spiced wine was present. During the time of Henry VII on Christmas day a steward would enter and say, "Wassail," three times and then a large golden bowl filled with special beverage would be brought in with much singing, and the guests were then served from it.

Today we do not have the ritual but we do have the punch bowl at festive occasions. In most of America it has been the custom for neighbors and friends to pay Christmas calls. Each house generally has a bowl or container of Christmas eggnog, punch, &c. Times and cellars change a great many of the concoctions of the Christmas bowl.

How to Make Eggnog.

First of all let us consider an eggnog. Beat 12 egg yolks and 1 cup sugar together, then add 4 cups of boiled milk which has been cooled. Then flavor with cider or cranberry juice. Beat the twelve whites of the eggs and add. Sprinkle the top of each glass with nutmeg. Serve very cold.

Serve with this little open-faced sandwiches, olives wrapped in bacon and broiled, or your white and dark fruit cake or little frosted cakes. Another good beverage for your Wassail bowl is Christmas Mead.

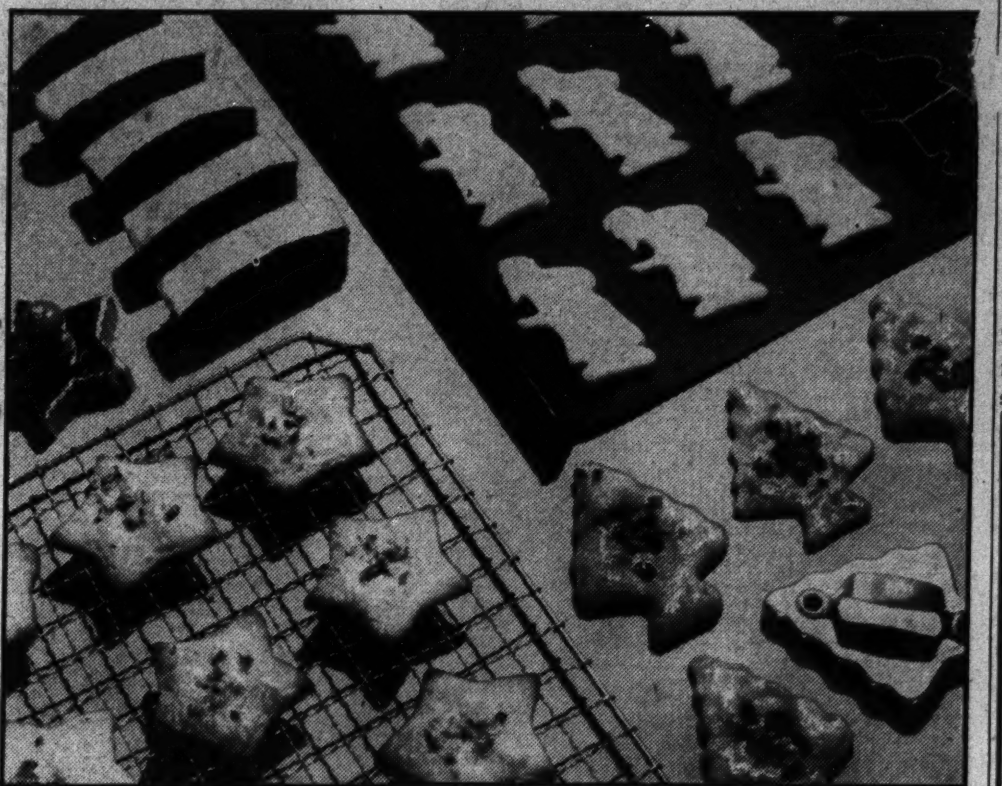
These Fancy Christmas Cookies, Sugared And Iced, Prove There is a Santa Claus



By Ann Barrett.

There is a Santa Claus, and the stars are within reach! With a batch of cookie dough and some Christmas cookie cutters, you can prove it. You can also prove what those two songsters Ruth Etting and Lanny Ross maintain—that Christmas cookies, fruited and nutted and sugared and iced—are about the eatingest things in the world.

Take the cookies in the picture, for example. The Santa Claus shapes, the stars and Christmas trees are all made and a rich sugar-cookie mixture that fairly melts in your mouth. (But doesn't spread out of shape while baking.)

Easy to make, too. Here's how: Gradually cream 2 cups sugar into 1½ cups butter (or part butter and some other shortening). Then beat in 2 eggs and add 4 cups sifted flour (any kind) mixed with 1 teaspoon baking powder. (No, no milk.) Then chill the mixture at least 2 hours (so it won't take up too much flour in the rolling). Roll it out and cut into fancy shapes. Put these on greased cookie sheet, brush them with unbeaten white of egg, and decorate as you wish—with bits of candied cherry or peel, with whole blanched almonds or chopped nuts or raisins. Bake in a fairly hot oven (375 F. to 400 F.) till nicely browned.

Date Sticks.

For iced or sugared date sticks—another great Christmas favorite—here's how to proceed: First beat 3 eggs till light. Then continue beating while you add 1 cup sugar gradually. Next sift 1 teaspoon baking powder with 1 cup sifted pastry flour. Mix into this 2 cups of dates (cut up) and 1 cup of chopped nuts. Stir into first mixture, then turn out into a well-greased pan about 9 x 7 inches. Bake at about 350 F. till cake shrinks from sides of pan. When nearly cold, cut into strips 3½ inches long by 1 inch wide. Then roll these in confectioner's sugar. Or frost them with 1 cup confectioner's sugar mixed into 1 egg white.

Date-Filled Cookies

For another Merry Christmas number, here are date-filled cookies. First cream 2/3 cup butter, add 1 cup sugar, 1 egg (well-beaten), ¼ cup milk, and 1½ teaspoons any flavoring. Then stir in 2½ teaspoons baking powder (first mixed with 3 cups sifted pastry flour). Chill. Then roll out ⅛ inch thick, cut into small rounds. On half of these cookie rounds, put 1 teaspoon date filling (recipe follows). Moisten edges with water, cover with another cookie round and press together. Brush with unbeaten egg-white and sprinkle with granulated sugar. Bake at about 375 F. till brown.

For the filling, mash up enough pitted dates to make about ½ cup. Add 1/3 cup sugar, 1 egg yolk, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 2 teaspoons fine cracker crumbs and 2 tablespoons finely chopped nuts.

Pfeffernuesse

Besides these all-American favorites, there are many Christmas cookies borrowed from foreign lands—especially the Germans. Pfeffernuesse (pepper nuts) for example. These, I might as well tell you right now (in case you don't know) go hand in cup with that good old practice of drinking. In other words, the flavor of these little nuts is delicious, but you can't get at it till you've first softened up the cookie in some kind of liquid.

Here's how to get started on this particular Merry Christmas game. Beat up 4 eggs till very light, then beat in 2 cups of brown sugar. Then sift together 4 cups sifted general purpose flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon cloves, ½ teaspoon mace. Mix into this ¾ cup shredded, blanched almonds, ¾ cup shredded citron peel and 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind. Add to first mixture and mix well. Then nip off small bits of this dough, shape them into little balls the size of hickory nuts, and place these 3 inches apart on a well-greased cookie sheet. Brush with unbeaten white of egg and bake at about 350 F. till delicately browned. Makes 65 to 70 cookies. (They'll keep a long time.)

The Family Marketer

Holland Herring in a Barrel Keep Until Wanted for a Meal.

"That's a cute little barrel," the Marketer pointed to one about a foot high "What's in it?"

"Holland Herring," said the market man. "There are 36 salt fish in a barrel, all for $1.75. That's a real bargin for large families who like salt fish. They will keep indefinitely."

"Do you have another new kind of salt fish?"

"Yes, we just got some English Kippers—they're 25 cents a pair."

The Marketer's eye traveled over the shop. What a surprise she got! A big basket of live snails! Vaguely she remembered that snails are considered a delicacy in some parts of the world. And why not? We eat oysters without a quaver, why not snails? Anyhow, they sell at 20 and 30 cents a pound.

Spaghetti that looks like dainty twists of rope, if you can imagine such a thing, is 15 cents a box. The Marketer observes that when you can get spaghetti in all sorts of artistic shapes, what's the use of serving the plain kind?

The Marketer picked up a bit of news quite by accident. When hunting for something in the kitchen cupboard in her home she found a little package of sugar. The lumps are tinted green, yellow and orange, flavored with lime, lemon and orange flavoring. The package costs only a dime, and will add allure to any tea-table.

While on the subject of tea time, here are some suggestions for sandwich fillings. Whether served with tea, or salad, or informal suppers they will be greeted with enthsiasm. Baked beans, mashed finely, moistened with chili sauce and flavored with a little chopped pickle is an unusual filling. Try peanut butter mixed with chopped ginger, or chopped dates. Finely chopped watercress mixed with butter makes an excellent sandwich for a formal tea. Chicken giblets and hard cooked eggs, chopped and moistened with mayonnaise is another idea, chopped corn beef, celery and watercress, blend together with tasty results.

It's surprising what delicious sandwich fillings can be made of left-over odds and ends. A little experimenting and the clever housewife can invent a truly original one.

False Modesty Hinders Progress of Art in America, Says Famous Capital Sculptor

Lipstick Trio Has Shades for Day and Night

Poppy, Coral, Raspberry Newest Parisian Shades.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A magic trio of lipsticks!

The approach of the yuletide season heralds the display of sensational gift values. An ensemble of lipsticks, including three delightful shades for morning, noon and night is the novel offer made by a world-famous cosmetician.

It is her opinion that many beautifully dressed and well-groomed women mar their beauty by a single factor—their lip rouge. She attributes this to an ignorance on their part of "lipstick facts." With her new ensemble she intends to educate them to a proper evaluation of shade values. By experiments they may find which of these three colors is most becoming to their type, which looks best for daytime wear or for evening, and which is suited to a particular frock, mood, or occasion.

The trio includes three Parisian lipsticks, one called Poppy, suggestive of a warm sunset glow; another Coral, a gay frivolous tone; and raspberry, a mellow medium shade, superbly rich in bright sunlight.

The quality of the lipsticks is the finest. They're devoid of any tinge of purplish undertone and so compounded that they nourish the lips and keep them soft and unchapped.

They are packaged in an enchanting silver box, gayly ribboned and "wrapped in cellophane." All three for $1.25.

If the ideal gloves for horseback riding are rainproof, coldproof and slipproof then surely these are they. The heavy, tightly knitted material of which they're made is thick enough to keep away the cold of its own accord, but an angora lining is double assurance that rain, snow or sleet fail to penetrate.

The flare for Chinese effects in frocks this season has resulted in the popularity of Oriental jewelry. One store has a striking display of earrings, bracelets, pins, clips, and necklaces which are exotic looking exponents of Eastern art.

Lapis, Carnelian, rose quartz and turquoise in rich filigree settings tease the eye with their fancifulness and add modish touches to a costume. The soft colors of the stones against a background of dull gold plate over silver gives them an enviable look of antiquity.

This "pagoda jewelry" was modeled in the style of genuine old pieces.

Christmas calls for holly wreaths in the windows, mistletoe on the chandelier, and bayberry candles over the mantlepiece.

The spicy odor of the candles fills the room with a refreshing aroma, and calls to mind the past generations which burned them as symbols of good luck. The tradition that the druids burned them hundreds of years ago to please the spirits was brought to this country by our New England ancestors. Since then they have been regarded in the light of luck, and burned during the yuletide season to bring happiness and cheer to the family.

A downtown store has some which they're selling for less than the usual price—a good luck gesture to begin on.

Stationery in attractive trinket boxes is another good item for Christmas lists.

The leather-covered boxes, each a foot square, have four drawers, two small and two large.

After the stationary—plain, simple sheets and envelopes in excellent taste—has been used, the boxes may be placed on the dressing table to hold costume jewelry.

The dainty rayon pajamas, selling for such low prices, will make a welcome present for some little girl.

They're light and soft enough to be folded into a small parcel and tucked away in the toe of her Christmas stocking. How pleased she'll be to own such gay, saucy-looking pajamas!

They come in red, orange, pink and blue, neatly trimmed in white appliqued designs. The store will have the name embroidered free of charge.

The new kasha skirts, featured in a large department store, tempt us to take the first train out for Florida. A delightful array of soft, light colors give mute evidence that Palm Beach must look like a spring garden if the women there are catering to the "Palm Beach" shades.

Subdued gray-greens, powder blues, light russets, gleaming golds, dull crimsons, turn otherwise simple sport skirts into exciting creations.

These come in two styles. One has buttons down the front, the other has gored pleats. All sizes are available.

It was a large box of excellent face powder. But it was $3. Many women felt that although they preferred it to other kinds, the price placed it slightly out of reach.

It was up to the manufacturer to do something about it. And she did. Stop by the toilet goods counter at a downtown department store and they'll show you the $1 size boxes of the same powder.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 105, for further information. Or write, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

WORLD-FAMOUS SCULPTOR,

Mrs. Herbert G. Sparrow yesterday declared that the Puritan heritage of American Women is responsible for holding back the progress of the arts. She deplored the sort of feelings which caused ladies of New England to drape the marble figures of children and cover a statue of Venus. Such conduct is unfortunate from the standpoint of National art, she feels.

Harris & Ewing.

She Thinks Wrong Ideals Cause Ban on Nudity in Art

Mrs. Herbert G. Sparrow, Likened by Critics to Michael Angelo, Deplores Primness That Hampers Free Expression.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

False modesty—the old Puritanical primness that finds something wrong about nudity—still retards the development of art in America more than any other one factor.

Mrs. Herbert G. Sparrow, famous Washington sculptor, yesterday declared that this characteristic of the American people is unfortunate and that they should fight against it.

"The Puritanical women who had a lovely fountain in Boston removed because it showed the nude figures of little children at play and who put dresses on statues of Venus because they thought her immodest, are not only enemies of art, but they have allowed a false sense of values to dull their appreciation of beauty," she said.

An astonishing statement to come from a little lady who looks as if she had stepped from the pages of a Victorian novel. But Mrs. Sparrow is in many ways a paradox. Her tiny fluttering hands which look as if they were skilled in nothing more than the art of pouring tea have mastered sculpture so well that the Review Moderne compares her work to that of Michael Angelo. One would classify her as a clinging vine. Yet she smiles at misfortune and tells with laughter how the depression has caused her to move her studio into her kitchen.

Senator Poses in Kitchen.

"Commissions have been so bad for the past year," she explained, "that I couldn't afford to keep my studio. At first I was heart broken, but now I like it up here. It is a happy combination of art and domesticity. Meals prepared in such an artistic atmosphere may gain in an esthetic quality. The busts certainly do not lose because of the contact. See this one of Senator Burton. He posed on the end of the kitchen sink for it.

"This bust which I call 'The Shepherd Boy' is a young Spaniard who came here one day selling magazines. He was so beautiful I asked him to come in and pose for me."

"The fountain signifying Living Water, which I am working on now is the realization of a life's dream. I have always wanted to make a memorial which would express immortality and eternal love. At first I had only a vague vision of water rising upward. Gradually the whole idea took form in my mind. A sphinx in the center representing the insoluble problem of life, and the living water rising above it. The figures posed around it respond in various ways according to what they are able to see. The man who sees only the sphinx is filled with defiance, the one who looks above to the living water is filled with the melody of faith."

Amateur Author.

"Lack of funds has hindered the progress of the work on the fountain. I am writing a book on my life in Rio de Janiero to help finance it. Of course I don't know whether the book will be published or not. I often write things and send them to magazines. They have a homing instinct which is remarkable. But I am hopeful about the book because it is based on actual experience. Then, too, I had it typed by a professional typist, and it looks so lovely I don't see how they can refuse it!

"The tragic part about writing the book is that I have become so interested in it I can not concentrate on my other work until I hear. Probably all authors are like that in the amateur stage."

Mrs. Sparrow told how she studied psychology and applies it to her work. She finds it very helpful to analyze her emotional reactions and to plan her work according to psychological principles.

She insists if more people who are slaves to the artistic temperament would do this both their health and their work would improve.

"There is nothing more helpful to an artist than an interest in a variety of things," she added. "Often the artist who concentrates on one particular phase of art will find his work improved if he will turn his attention to something else and then go back to the original work. You will note that the most versatile men are often the most outstanding. Michelangelo, who was painter, sculptor and poet, is the most striking example of this.

Dreams Fail.

"So often we pity ourselves because the things we have dreamed do not come true in exactly the way we have wished. We must have the vision to see that they are often fulfilled in a much greater way than we ever hoped for.

"Because I know this I have learned to face misfortunes both great and small. Such as the inconsiderate people who get fat during the time I am sculpturing them, and insist that I give them credit for the extra pounds, and those perverse people who think clothing more beautiful than the work of nature.

"But who knows? Perhaps some day people will keep to a standard weight, nudism will conquer false modesty and the work of the sculptor will be simplified."

Disguise.

Backyard Garden Now Includes Fish Pond

Fisheries Expert Says Many Now Raise Fish Along With Cabbages.

The old-fashioned back yard vegetable garden is being remodeled to include a fish pond. And the home gardener is able to eat fish cakes along with his mashed potatoes and cabbage.

"North, South, East and West, people are planting 'fish gardens' this year," Mrs. Barbara Bartlett Aller, publications clerk of the Bureau of Fisheries, told a Post reporter yesterday.

"People who feel they have lost out in the city, wanting to establish themselves in the country, are turning to fish raising as an uncrowded field," said this authority on habits and culture of fish.

While the idea of a fish garden in place of the every-day vegetable variety may present a startling alternative in providing food for the home table, it is not altogether new.

It seems to have had its inception as long ago as 1864, according to records of the Bureau of Fisheries, when Seth Green started a backyard hatchery at Caledonia Springs, N. Y. A little later the Rev. John Bachman, of Charleston, S. C., launched a similar venture. The two established a precedent which may be responsible for the present great vogue of the Depression Fish Garden.

"Our department is rendering people a real service in this field," she said. "Most of our requests for information as to how to start a fish farm—or garden, if you like—come from people who want to use the fish for food. They hope either to start a garden of their own, or to make a more intelligent use of such fish as inhabit streams on their farms. In rare instances, they are seeking a means of making money."

Such seekers after profitable knowledge are advised by the Bureau of Fisheries as to which species of fish thrive best in their locale. If they live in a northern climate, where winter comes early and lingers late, trout may be suggested for their fish garden.

Pond fish, on the other hand, thrive in the southern waters of such States as Oklahoma and southern California.

Words the "Plastic Surgery" That Remolds Sagging Faces

Duchess Carapa d'Andria Advises Women to Choose Them Carefully.

Words are the most important things in any woman's life, and the greatest aid to natural beauty. They do the work of a plastic surgeon.

Such is the opinion of Miss Renee Thornton, in private life the Duchess Carafa d'Andria, who conducts a studio school of beauty in New York. She came to Washington recently to give a series of talks on the fundamentals of youth and beauty.

Yesterday Miss Thornton sat at the tea table in the Mayflower dining salon, looking very much like a Gainsborough portrait come to life.

"There are two kinds of words," she said, "positive and negative. Every woman should make it her business to know the difference between them, and form the habit of using positive words as often as she can.

"They have an effect both mental and physical. Take, for instance, such words as 'harmony,' 'love,' 'sky.' They bring very important facial muscles into play. Besides that, they bring to mind uplifting thoughts which show on our faces.

"Just as the use of words is important, so is silence. Many, many women would find it unnecessary to stock their medicince cabinets with pills and syrups if they would take fivt-minute doses of complete and thoughtful silence every day.

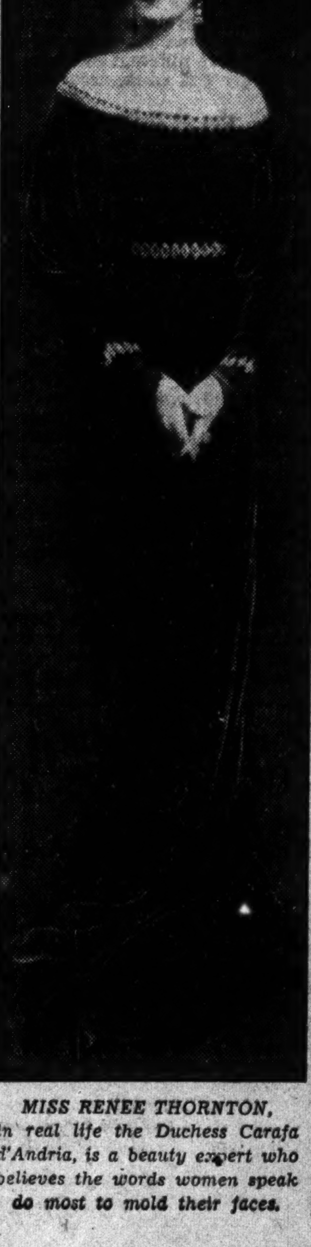
"I highly recommend kneeling during this time, both for the splendid exercise it gives the muscles in the limbs and for the psychological effect of such a posture. It's an absolute fact that no one can kneel down and remain aggravated and nervous."

For 16 years Miss Thornton has delved into Oriental philosophies which she believes contain a vast fund of wisdom regarding the care of the body in mental and physical ways. She not only teaches theories, she exemplifies them. Every gesture of her lovely hands, every movement of her body shows her to be master of what she imparts.

She was dressed in a Boeur Soeur frock of green chiffon velvet and black crepe. A dramatic black velvet cloak fastened high beneath her chin contrasted strikingly with the golden cluster of curls beneath her black lace hat. Her skin was like old ivory tinted by the hand of a master. When she spoke her brown eyes sparkled with genuine enthusiasm.

"The ordinary type of woman who talks freely and vigorously is apt to retain her youthful appearance much longer than the cultured gentlewoman," she said.

"It's because the gentlewoman in the development of good taste has hidden many of her emotions behind the mask of a bland countenance. In consequence her facial muscles do not have the proper exercise, and begin to sag long before they should."



MISS RENEE THORNTON, in real life the Duchess Carafa d'Andria, is a beauty expert who believes the words women speak do most to mold their faces.

Coat a la Mode Uses Two New Unknown Furs

'Weenushk' Trims 'Tigrette' Sport Coat Seen in Paris.

Paris (U.P.).—The sports coat in tigrette trimmed with weenushk—repeat, tigrette, weenushk—is the "a la mode" on the winter's apple pie. We might guess along with you all that tigrette was a kind of a baby tiger, or tigre to the French. But you'll have to figure it out for yourself about the weenushk. We've asked everybody, seen pieces of it, touched it and smelled it, but we get no reaction of any other animal to which we might compare it. The pelt has a stand-up fuzz over it, thicker than the tigrette, and it is sort of speckled like certain tribes of skunk; it is excellent for bordering coats and things, is light in weight and very flattering. If you can't find it anywhere in your town you'd better write a note to Vanek, Paris, and ask for particulars!

Any old burlap lying around the house? Snatch it up and take it to your tailor who, following the Paris mode if he's smart, can make you a perfectly ritzy ensemble a la Bruyere who uses Rodier's burlap in blue to make a skirt and three-quarter coat. The coat is worn over sleeveless waistcoat in white gaillac with blue bone buttons bouncing down the front.

And just to prove that foxes and ermines are thumbing their cold little noses at anemic pocketbooks, they've gotten together on an evening cape or coatee, as Blondell, who makes it, calls it. The ermines cover the shoulders and the foxes trot around the edge as a wide border. This slap at depression fastens at the throat with a gorgeous clasp of diamonds, pearls and emeralds.

New Kansas Art Museum Unique In the World

"Full-Blown" at Opening, It Houses Treasures Worth Millions.

Kansas City, Dec. 11 (AP).—A dream of William Rockhill Nelson, newspaperman, philanthropist and art lover, was actuality today. The William Rockhill Nelson Gallery of Art and the Atkins Museum were ready to open.

Visitors will find not only a new museum of art but something new in museums. The institution has come into being, full-fledged, completely planned for its purpose. Gifts of the late Col. Nelson, founder of the Kansas City Star, and bequests of his heirs total $15,000,000.

The world has been scoured for years by experts seeking art treasures. Guests will linger in rooms lifted bodily from American colonial farmhouses; in others brought in ticketed pieces from Spain, France, England and the Orient. They will step into a portion of a temple from China, and see in an inner grass-carpeted courtyard a fountain bowl of unusual green from the baths of Roman Emperor Hadrian.

They may inspect pictured Oriental history even woven into portions of the lining of the tent of Turkey's Suleiman the Magnificent. They are certain to pause long before masterpieces of Titian, Rembrandt, Millet, Hals and other geniuses of this and previous civilizations. Not only the paintings but many of the precious pieces of furniture permanently housed here and most of the Oriental art objects are world famous.

Here, too, was to be seen an art gallery without a great exhibition hall. It had instead a great number of small rooms, each dedicated to a mood or an epoch. Each, too, except those purposely depending upon its original lighting scheme, was bathed in artificial daylight, originating in electrical white and blue light diffused through special glass ceilings. Simple modernistic benches in the exhibition rooms were designed by Gardner, director.

The institution includes a complete theater, with ample stage, projecting room, cooled air and new notes in lighting.

Flaming red velvet and luxurious chinchilla are ingeniously combined in a full length evening coat that sets forth several of fashion's high points. First, there's the new shoulder cape effect created by the fur. Then there's the smart long and wrappy silhouette achieved with glowing velvet.

Pacifist Mamas Ban Toy Soldier Wars

They Rule That Wooden Guns Are Menace to World Peace.

Toronto, Dec. 11 (AP).—The Ontario Council of Women decided today that wooden soldiers and tin guns are harmful and dangerous to the peace of the world, and passed a resolution undertaking to militate against war toys and games.

"This is one of the ridiculous resolutions which make us women a laughing stock among men," one delegate objected.

"We needn't be afraid of that," was the reply. "Men are already a laughing stock among us for many of the things they do."

"You can take military toys away from children,' said Mrs. J. Cullen, of Niagara Falls, "but a boy will make a hat out of a newspaper, put a stick at his side for a sword and play soldier just the same."

But the resolution went through, urging the council to "undertake a campagin of education against the sale of soldiers and other toys of a military nature."

Wanted: Secretary With No Thought of Marriage

Winchester, Va., Dec. 11 (Spl.). Andrew Bell, secretary of the Winchester Chamber of Commerce, is looking for a secretary—one who has no thoughts of getting married for 5 years at least.

When, in 1928, the work of the office became so great, Mr. Bell employed a secretary, Miss Mary Barr. In 1930, she married Frank H. Chandler, jr., of Harrisonburg. He then employed Miss Amy L. Ritter, of Winchester, in the same capacity. In 1932, Miss Ritter was united in marriage to E. T. Shiner, of Front Royal, Va. After the marriage of Miss Ritter, Mr. Bell employed her sister, Miss Mary F. Ritter, as secretary. Last evening, Miss Ritter announced that on last March 10, she was wedded to Leon Jones, of Front Royal.

Cecil B. De Mille, Famous Picture Producer, a Capital Visitor—True to "Alice"

Director Here Briefly on an Official Call

Seeks Actor in New York; Authentic Film Alice; Theater Chat.

This morning at 8, a Pennsylvania Railroad train, equipped with sleeping arrangements, two kinds of cold water and all other modern conveniences, will draw into Union Station—barring disturbances of the time schedules by blizzards, washouts, earthquakes and other acts of God—bearing the distinguished person of Mr. Cecil Blount De Mille, pioneer motion picture producer, who comes to the Capital girded for a brief personal joust with the Treasury Department.

Mr. De Mille, the director who first made the great American public gold bathtub and Empire bed conscious and more recently staggered its imagination by the vivid realism of his Circus Maximus sequences in "The Sign of the Cross," an evangelical drama which went sexual and spectacular on him, and then bore testimony to the depth of his faith in the modern generation by turning the law over to the adolescents in "This Day and Age," will take up his abode at the Shoreham and probably tell the management what ails the main lounge from the standpoint of camera angles, color treatment and acoustics.

One of the Pioneers.

Mr. De Mille it was, as will be remembered by everybody who takes his cinema at all seriously—as Mr. De Mille frequently does not—who, with Jesse L. Lasky, Sam Goldwyn and the late Dustin Farnum, practically invented the modern motion picture in a barn out at the edge of Los Angeles, back in the dim, dead days of 1913. It was from this modest beginning that Paramount-Famous-Lasky eventually grew.

One of the ironies of the industry is that Mr. Farnum, having scant faith in the new magic lantern shows, refused to a share in the company and insisted upon a flat cash salary for his participation in the making of their first picture, a film version of "The Squaw Man," the Edwin Milton Royle drama in which William Faversham had created so profound an impression on the stage. Had Mr. Farnum made an opposite decision he would have made millions instead of hundreds.

However, as Sinclair Lewis likes to say, that's the way life is!

Was Once an Actor.

But reverting to Mr. De Mille, he has a much sounder foundation in the theater than most people credit him with, knowing him only as a picture director of the tinsel-and-glitter, or flamboyant, type. Long before he ever thought of making a picture, Cecil B. De Mille, along with his brother, William, was closely identified with the legitimate stage as an actor. Toward the end of his acting career he was associated with the late David Belasco and appeared with David Warfield in "The Return of Peter Grimm."

So it comes about that Mr. De Mille knows his theater as well as the next one and his cinema a good deal better than most. There may be a flash and a garishness about some of his more pretentious productions, but under the rococo superficialities usually will be found a basis of sane and substantial drama that complies with all the rules.

In Search of Type.

Mr. De Mille's present visit to the Capital is prompted by wholly personal considerations. After two or three days here, he will proceed to New York where his activities will revert to star-gazing and picture-making.

Mr. De Mille, in short, will devote much of his time in New York—or as much of it as is needed—to the selection of the proper actor to appear as Marc Anthony in his forthcoming production of "Cleopatra," in which, if memory serves, Claudette Colbert, who did so well in the bath of asses' milk as Poppaea in "Sign of the Cross," will play the title role.

If you can do a good Marc Anthony, Mr. De Mille may not even have to go to New York!

S. E. Cochran Continues.

It will be welcome, but not unexpected news to his many friends both in and out of the National Capital that at a meeting of the board of directors of the Rapley Theater Company, held yesterday in the offices of the Erlanger interests in New York City, Stephen E. Cochran was continued in his post of manager of the National Theater in this city, in full charge of the operation of the famous E street playhouse.

Mr. Cochran has been associated with the conduct of the National, as right-hand man of the late William Harryman Rapley, for the past 27 years and for the last 10 years of that period has been practically in complete charge of the house.

Alert Executive.

It is due to his initiative that the National Theater Players were organized and have continued to function as one of the country's foremost stock companies over an unbroken interval of eight years; many of the National's booking coups, too, have been the direct outgrowth of his sagacity as a show man and quick thinking as an efficient theater executive. The National was owned jointly by the Erlanger estate and Harry Rapley.

Steve today is receiving the congratulations of a host of friends on the action of yesterday's meeting of the board of directors which, of course, represented a majority vote of the National stockholders. Ours, too, fella!

It is announced by the management of Loew's Fox Theater that the preview trade showing of Samuel Goldwyn's production of "Roman Scandals," his fourth annual musical spectacle starring Eddie Cantor, scheduled for this midnight, will be purely invitational. Admission to the theater will be by card only, official complications relating to the picture's National release having militated against the sale of tickets to the general public, as at first was planned.

The American Scene.

If you have been worying about a possible shortage of film plays dealing with the everyday American scene, it will be a comfort to know that fifteen films are in course of production at Fox Movitone City on the West Coast. These include three musicals, three mystery melodramas, seven photoplays, dealing with native American life and two others.

Fox feels that it is in the van of a "trend" toward films pertaining to familiar aspects of American living. These films in work bear evidence of this attitude.

"Coming Out Party" is an expose of the debutante racket in our large cities, assuming that there is a debutante racket in our large cities; "Woman and the Law," of all things, deals with a lady cop in a metropolis, assuming that there is any such thing as a lady cop in a metropolis; "The Heir to the Hoorah," of course, is a picturization of the old mining comedy; "Carolina," adapted from Paul Green's "House of Connelly," a story of the South; "David Harum," a transcription of the Westcott classic of horse trading and homely "down East" philosophy; "Sleepers East," a melodrama of the Pullmans, and "Mr. Skitch," starring Will Rogers, a saga of the tourist camps. Is that American enough?

Tonight at 8:30, the Columbia Players will present Owen Davis' play, "Icebound," as the second offering of their current season. The play will be given in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest, with a cast composed of Virginia Rand, Betty Clark, Helen Read, Lois Alexander, Oral Bells Glaflin, Dorothy M. White, Steele Kennedy, E. H. Stringfellow, Robert Alexander, Harold Norton, D. A. P. Dochrer and Vernon Lyden.

Reassurance.

Following so closely in the wake of Miss Charlotte Henry's recent visit to the Capital, it is comforting to learn something definite concerning the Paramount production of "Alice in Wonderland," in which, as everyone by this time knows, she is to be Alice.

While many novels, from the classics down, have been made into films by Hollywood, it is said that no picture ever followed the original as faithfully as will "Alice in Wonderland."

Aside from combining the best-known and best-liked scenes from "Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass," Director Norman McLeod has followed exactly every incident, every bit of dialogue and every character in the original.

The characters are made up and look exactly like the drawings by Sir John Tenniel in the original editions of "Alice." The costume department copied the same drawings down to the smallest decoration and stitch.

Hans Dreier, art director on the picture, built his sets exactly as the pictures in the book decreed, and McLeod and William Cameron Menzies designed every prop used in the pitcure to fit in with the settings.

Adheres to Dialogue.

Menzies and Joseph Mankiewicz, who adapoted the two books for the screen, lifted Lewis Carroll's original dialogue bodily. Only when some small scene was needed to bridge a gap did they introduce any new speeches, and these few lines were written in typically Carrollian style.

Pictures of Charlotte Henry, which have been printed all over the world, have brought a tremendous flood of congratulations to the studio, terming the youngster, who was selected from among more than 6,800 candidates, the "ideal type" for "Alice."

Barring the fact that she is a slightly overgrown Alice, Washington is inclined to coincide with the general view—that is, those who were privileged to meet Miss Henry on her recent visit are.

Bette Davis, the Warner Brothers star, whose figure was recently insured for $50,000 by the studio, is attracting quite a bit of attention from amateur dieticians. The policy reads that the studio will be paid off if her weight exceeds 120 during the term of its effectiveness. One self-styled expert, reversing the usual counsel, has offered to prescribe a diet that will speedily increase her weight above the 120-pound limit, if the studio will divide the $50,000 with him. Can this be a racket?

Benefits of the NRA.

It is W. C. Fields' idea that the labor provisions of Mr. Rosenblatt's code for the moving picture industry, which requires the use of additional players on all possible occasions, will probably stop producers from throwing dummies out of airplanes and off cliffs. "They now will have to use an extra," Jimmy Cunningham reports Mr. Fields as saying.

Extra what, Mr. Fields? Producer?

The Noblest Roman of Them All!

When Samuel Goldwyn's fourth annual musical spectacle starring Eddie Cantor, "Roman Scandals," is accorded a trade preview in Loew's Fox Theater this midnight, those in attendance will make the acquaintance of a young "Roman" looking something like the above. The general public will see Cantor in this role early in the new year when the film is nationally released for public exhibition.

Make History, Hitler Urges

Chancellor Exhorts Nazis to Help Solve Problems That Defied Ages.

Berlin, Dec. 11 (AP).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler exhorted Nazi members of the new Reichstag tonight to "be an example to the nation" and asserted a "conspicuous characteristic" of the new government would be a capacity for pursuing its aims steadfastly and making decisions quickly.

"We shall discard useless traditions," the Chancellor told Nazi party leaders, in a session preliminary to the opening of the new parliament of 661 hand-picked progovernment men Tuesday afternoon.

"Our movement creates new precedents for centuries to come," Hitler asserted.

"If this Reichstag does its duty we can stand before the nation again in four years' time with full confidence. This Reichstag must earn the future reputation of having been the youngest, the boldest and the most courageous of all of having solved problems which have defied centuries."

Four of the parlimentarians personally pledged themselves by a handshake to follow the chancellor. These men, representing 655 legislators, promised blindly to obey the orders of their chief.

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—George S. Messersmith, American Consul General in Berlin, arrived on the S. S. Washington for a visit today, and advised the United States to "follow with the closest interest what is taking place in Germany."

"I think, in order to understand the developments, we must appreciate there has been a real revolution, and the chancellor, Mr. Hitler, himself wisely can not be permanent," he said.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Perhaps, as Noel Coward himself contends, this delicately sentimental musical romance creates and sustains an atmosphere of quaint and plaintive charm more completely and more satisfactorily than any other work he has contributed to the theater.

Its story stems from the soundest of human emotions, its music is by turns triste, nostalgic and gay, and its lyrics are never offensive to the temper or tempo of the scene in which they occur.

Furthermore, as an aid to the lavender and old lace quality of much of the retrospective narrative the author has contrived to cover the lifetime of a prima donna, much of the action is pitched back into the picturesque days of the '70s, '80s and '90s.

Production Not Adequate.

The basic qualities of the work being as splendid as they are, it is lamentable that they are not set off by a fresher and more adequate production.

"Bitter Sweet" is the sort of gentle romance that calls for shimmering moonlight, gossamer embellishment and stage pictures rendered exquisite by the artistic blending of pastel tints and the ethereal loveliness of fragile femininity. These dainty investitures it almost completely lacks. The costumes and settings give every visual evidence of being the originals which pretty thoroughly lost their crispness and sparkle during the New York run of the piece, when Evelyn Laye captivated American audiences by her blond charm in the stellar role.

With the singing of the pivotal roles, however, there can be no quibbling. They are brilliantly sung by Margaret Carlisle, Allan Jones, Berna Deane and Leonard Ceeley. A mixed chorus of lusty voices lends supporting power to the rousing climaxes.

Principals of Fine Voice.

Miss Carlisle's voice is a strong, true soprano of fine tonal quality in both high and low registers and Mr. Jones' tenor, already known to Washington audiences, is one of comparable strength and timber that blends superbly with it. Their solos and duets mark the high points of beauty in a score that is tuneful, lilting and, on occasion, vivacious without being at any time tawdry. Miss Deane also displays a voice of unusually wide range and power in the numbers that fall to her lot in the second act, the liveliest of the three.

This second act is the source, incidentally, of practically all of the enlivening comedy the operetta boasts, the Vienna cafe setting providing an appropriate background for the "Ladies of the Town" ensemble, sung by the habitues of the gayer haunts of a gay city, and the "It's Always the Man That's Pursued" trio, by Schlick, the cafe proprietor; Lizzie, his wife, and Fritz, the waiter, who happens to be Frau Schlick's passion of the moment. The Prater Girls and Harry K. Morton interpolate some effective dancing at this point.

Cumulative Effect.

The first act, purely introductory in nature and purpose, is for the greater part expressed in song and in its extreme economy of character and incident gives no hint of the later beauties in which the book and score abound.

It is well, therefore, not to be too deeply discouraged upon the fall of the first curtain. It is after that that one encounters a fair approximation of the engaging elements of song and story that caused "Bitter Sweet" to be hailed as one of the major triumphs of its season on Broadway.

They are worth waiting for.

Buses connecting northern and southern sectors of Takoma Park were advocated in a resolution adopted at last night's meeting of the Takoma Park Citizens Association.

Sixty street paving and repair items were cited for presentation to Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director. M. D. Finch, retiring postmaster, spoke. His long service to the community was commended by W. K. Norwood, association president.

Stern Puts Out New York Post In Old Dress

Tabloid Size Abandoned; New Owner Pledges Roosevelt Support.

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—The New York Evening Post came out today in its old dress, under the new ownership of J. David Stern, publisher of the Philadelphia Record, and with a front page editorial which said:

"The Evening Post will do its part to dispel the 'stagnant and sickly atmosphere' of political corruption and economic privilege."

Its the oldest newspaper in town, founded in 1801 by Alexander Hamilton, and today it said:

"The Evening Post will support Franklin D. Roosevelt for the same reason that the Evening Post a century ago supported Andrew Jackson.

"It sees Roosevelt now, as the Post saw Jackson then, arrayed against a great system 'for making the rich richer, the poor poorer,' and thus arresting those enormous disproportions of wealth which are always the forerunner of the loss of freedom."

And on the front page of the newspaper, which returned to its old eight-colunm form after a venture into tabloid size, was a letter to its new owner from President Roosevelt.

"My dear Dave," it said. "I want you to know how glad I was to hear that you had bought the New York Evening Post.

"I believe there is a great field there for the right kind of newspaper, and have every expectation that you will make a great daily out of this fine old property, that should play so important a part in the life of New York and of the Nation.

"As you once laughingly remarked, there are times when a 'hair shirt' is a good thing for an Administration. I always welcome honest and constructive criticism, as you know, and you are one of the people upon whom I can count to get honest convictions. I want to wish you all the good luck in the world in this new venture."

Cotton Option Plan Modified

4-Cent-Per-Pound Advance Offering to Liquidate 2,400,000 Bales.

(United Press.)

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced last night a plan to advance 600,000 farmers 4 cents a pound on cotton options, and to create a pool to liquidate 2,400,000 bales of cotton held by the Government and covered by the options.

Under the "option with benefit" plan of cotton relief, offered in connection with the 1933 cotton adjustment campaign, the 600,000 farmers who elected to take advantage of the plan are entitled to options at 6 cents a pound on the 2,400,000 bales held by the Government. The plan announced last night will make 4 cents of this amount available at once.

Option holders who apply for and receive the 4-cent advance will be required "if eligible and if requested to do so" to participate in the 1934-35 cotton production control program.

250 NRA Violation Cases Already Investigated.

A National organization, employing 170 men with headquarters in 18 districts has been set up for enforcement of the oil code, Secretary Ickes, oil administrator, announced yesterday.

More than 250 cases involving code violations already have been investigated and many have been turned over to the Attorney General with recommendations for prosecution.

The employes of the Division of Investigations include special agents, oil experts, auditors, clerks and other office workers. Of this number, 55 rank as special agents for oil code enforcement. The largest single unit is stationed at Tyler, Tex.

Bandits Shoot Down Two in Bay State City

Fitchburg, Mass., Dec. 11 (U.P.). For no apparent reason, two Fitchburg men were shot down in a street here tonight, one probably fatally, by four bandits riding in an expensive automobile, who stopped them on the pretext of asking directions.

The first victim was Ernest W. Clarke, 43, believed dying at Burbank Hospital of eight gunshot wounds, one in his skull. The other was Perry I. Wilson, superintendent of cemeteries and former president of the city council, wounded in the leg and thigh.

Littleton, Colo., Dec. 11 (AP). Donald K. Smith, 31, farmer who is said by Sheriff E. E. Monzingo to have signed a confession that he kicked his 3-year-old son to death, pleaded not guilty to a first degree murder charge today.

Taussig Sees Recovery.

Doris Duke Shoulders Load Of Being "Richest Heiress"

Attends Trustees' Meeting and Pays Visit to Hospital.

Greenville, S. C., Dec. 11 (AP). Doris Duke today shouldered her part of the responsibility for administering the huge endowment established by her father, the late James B. Duke, tobacco and power magnate.

Frequently smiling but keeping out of the public gaze as much as possible, the young woman hailed as the country's "richest heiress" a fornight ago when she came into control of a portion of her fortune at 21, came here from New York for a celebration of the ninth anniversary of the founding of the $40,000,000 Duke endowment.

She attended a meeting of the foundation's board of trustees, of which she became a member upon attaining her majority in compliance with her father's stipulation. The endowment was created for the benefit of colleges, hospitals and orphanages in the two Carolinas.

"I am having a wonderful visit—enjoying every minute of it," she said in a brief interview. "I hope that I may come back again."

Miss Duke spent nearly an hour visiting youngsters at the Shriner's Hospital for Crippled Children, one of the participants in her father's benevolences. Many of the children had written her in anticipation of her visit. She thanked them for their thoughfulness.

As the tall, blonde visitor prepared to leave, a score of the youngsters stood up and gave her and the other Duke trustees a cheer in collegiate fashion.

"Such lovely children," she told her mother, Mrs. Nanaline H. Duke, as she left the hospital. "I enjoyed my visit with them ever so much."

Judge Disowns Florida Fugitive

Chicagoan Finds Larue Has Long Record.

Chicago, Dec. 11 (AP).—Judge Alfred O. Erickson of the South State street court tonight said he "washed his hands" of the affairs of James A. La Rue, fugitive from a Florida chain gang.

The judge, after espousing the cause of La Rue for a week, changed his opinion he said, when advised that United States Bureau of Criminal Investigation records disclosed La Rue was known as an habitual criminal.

The records listed arrests on charges of stealing an automobile; burglary, and carrying concealed weapons. La Rue fled Florida after serving part of a five year sentence, for burglary.

Plane Almost Hits Buckingham Palace

Near-Accident Causes King to Make Inquiries.

London, Dec. 11 (AP).—An airplane, apparently out of control, narrowly averted striking Buckingham Palace today, causing the King and Queen to make inquiries. While crowds watched the changing of the Guard, the airplane twice roared over the palace, only a few feet above it.

"The first time he swerved sharply to avoid crashing into a flagstaff," an eye witness said. "It looked for a moment as if he could not avoid hitting some part of the palace, but he managed to get the plane away."

Women screamed and the throng scattered. The plane made a forced landing in Hyde Park. Its occupants were uninjured.

Tentative Colombia Treaty Is Approved

Final Signing of Reciprocity Just a Formality.

President Roosevelt has approved the draft of the proposed reciprocity treaty between the United States and Colombia.

This was learned at the State Deparment yesterday and it was indicated that signing of this important trade agreement by William Phillips, Acting Secretary of State, and Dr. Don Fabio Lozano, the Colombian Minister, was a formality.

First Lady Tells Progress Of Subsistence Homesteads

Model Homes on Little Plots of Ground Are Springing Up.

Subsistence homesteads, one of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's many relief and charity projects, are making progress in all parts of the country, the First Lady said yesterday at her press conference.

Mrs. Roosevelt pointed out that the principle of giving a family a plot of land which each member can help in cultivating in order to provide food will "never make anybody rich."

To provide cash for extra necessities and even a few luxuries, each of the new projects will have a factory or some other central industry where different members of the family will work, according to plans.

One at Beltsville.

It is hoped the Department of Agriculture's experimental animal husbandry farm at Beltsville, Md., will be expanded soon to provide subsistence plots for the more than 300 workers engaged in making various agricultural improvements on the general farm, Mrs. Roosevelt said.

The farm, which was made possible through a $1,500,000 public works allottment, is designed to carry on experiments in breeding, feeding and general care of farm animals. An exhaustive study is being made of goat's milk and the possibility of putting it on the general market as a subsitute for mother's milk.

Mrs. Roosevelt detailed the project for women's reemployment being carried on at the experimental village at Reedsville, W. Va.

Homes Going Up.

Construction of model houses, each set in its own five acres of land, is going ahead rapidly, said Mrs. Roosevelt. The first 50 families are expected to move in by January 1.

The women have been put to work making bedding, household linen and heavy winter clothing, which will enable the incoming families to settle down in their new homes with all the necessities and a few of the comforts they have been forced to give up during long periods of unemployment.

Another subsistence project, designed to relieve congestion in industrial centers, has been undertaken in New Jersey, where garment factory workers will be settled on self-supporting farm homesteads.

North Carolina, New York and Ohio are among the other States where such projects are making favorable progress.

Farmers Warned Of Losing U. S. Aid

Must Work With the A.A.A. to Get Cash.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 11 (AP). Oscar Johnston, finance administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, told an audience of farmers, bankers and cotton traders today that no Government loans of any kind will be to cotton farmers failing to take part in the acreage reduction campaign.

Johnston told his 2,800 listeners that Henry Morgenthau, governor of the Farm Credit Administration, has decided that the farmers not participating in the campaign will not be entitled to Federal loans of any nature—Farm Land Bank and seed loans included.

Ice on Wings Forces 2 Mail Pilots to Jump

Both "Bail Out" to Safety to Mountain "Graveyard of Aviators."

Portage, Pa., Dec. 11 (AP).—Swirling snow high above the Alleghenies forced two pilots flying the night mail to abandon their ships and "chute" to safety in the "graveyard of aviators" early today.

Gene Burford of Columbus, Ohio, who took off from Pittsburgh for New York in his Transcontinental & Western Air Line plane at 1:35 a. m., messaged at 2:40 o'clock that his ship was ice-crusted in a blinding snowstorm and "it looks like I can't make it. I'll have to jump." He landed near Portage.

A few minutes later distress signals come, from Harold G. Andrews, of New York, fighting westward in another T. W. A. plane.

"It's getting heavier all the time and the snow is getting thicker," he messaged from a point east of Portage. "If it gets any heavier and I lose any more altitude I'll have to leave." Then a silence and the terse announcement "I'm leaving."

About 6 a. m., he telephoned from Roaring Spring that he was safe. Burford, who took part of his mail "over the side" with him, relivering it at the Portage postoffice, "reported in" from a railroad switch tower a short time before Andrews was heard from.

All Italy Faces Cut in Salaries

Cost of Living Also Would Be Reduced.

Rome, Dec. 11 (AP).—A nationwide and simultaneous reduction in salaries and the cost of living is being worked out by Premier Mussolini and experts of the corporative state.

Every person in the kingdom, directly or indirectly affected, is expected to follow a national reduction similar to that of October, 1930, when the government forced every salary in Italy, and all rent, light, heat, food and transport charges down between 10 and 12 per cent.

The government said a wholesale reduction in wages and the cost of living must be effected if Italy is to continue to export products.

The Chamber of Deputies, whose days apparently are numbered because Premier Mussolini never has been pleased with it, met today for the beginning of the winter term. Internal matters were taken up almost exclusively.

T. R.'s Widow Visits Husband's Birthplace

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt came in from Sagamore Hill today for one of her rare appearances in public—a reception at Roosevelt House, the birthplace of her famous husband.

Mrs. Roosevelt is 72. This is the first time in several years that she has attended the memorial receptions in honor of "T. R."

Liquor Levy List Drafted By Crusaders

License Fees for District Proposed in Report to Commissioners.

Permits Range From $5 a Day to $2,500 for Period of Year.

License fees ranging from $5 for a permit to sell beer one day at a picnic to $2,500 a year for operating rectifying plants and distilleries were proposed by The Crusaders yesterday to the Commissioners for incorporation in the District liquor law.

Taxes proposed ranged from 10 cents a gallon on wine to $1 a barrel on beer.

The fees and taxes were set forth in a memorandum sent the Commissioners by Rufus Lusk, vice executive commander of the organization. Elimination of many provisions of the draft considered at the public hearing last week was urged. Broad authority should be reposed in the Commissioners and the contemplated alcoholic beverage control board the report said.

License Fees Proposed.

The license fees proposed were: rectifying plant or distillery, $2,500; nonbeverage distillery, $500; winery, $1,000; brewery, $1,000; wholesaler, Class A, $1,000; wholesaler, Class B (beer), $250; retail off-sale, $250; off-sale beer, $50; on-sale spirits and wines, $500 for restaurant, plus $5 per year for each restaurant chair over 100, total not to exceed $1,500; hotel, $750, plus $5 for each guest room over 300, not to exceed $1,500; clubs, $500; marine vessels, same as for restaurants; railroad dining car, $25 a month; retailers, on-sale beer, $100; druggists, $250; picnics, $5; solicitors $10.

Taxes proposed were spirits, 25 cents a gallon; wine, 10 cents a gallon; beer, $1 per barrel; alcohol, 50 cents a gallon.

As drafted the measure did not specify license fees or taxes, although contemplating both. The rates have not been discussed seriously by the Commissioners, and the Crusaders' rates are the first to be submitted authoritatively.

The liquor law, Mr. Lusk said, should "give the Commissioners and the control board broad and comprehensive control powers, define the kind of licenses, circumscribe with proper restrictions, determine fees, taxes and penalties and set up a control board.

"For Congress to attempt to do more courts disaster. We are embarking on a new voyage; that of promoting temperance by sane control of the liquor traffic. The captain should be able to change his course as his judgment dictates. The proposed bill will permit such changes to be made without the proverbially, almost impossible 'act of Congress.'"

Penalty List Offered.

Mr. Lusk proposed a fine of not more than $250 and imprisonment not more than 60 days for first offenses; not over $500 and not over 120 days for second offenses, and not over $1,000 fine and jail or not more than one year for third offenses.

Detatils of a liquor law are to be discussed between Commissioner George E. Allen and Corporation Counsel William W. Bride, and Vernon E. West, principal assistant, at 10:30 a. m. today and the question probably will be discussed again at the board meeting of the Commissioners this afternoon.

Favorable comment has been received on the proposal to allocate to each neighborhood the decision as to whether liquor shall be sold in the section, Commissioner Allen said. How boundaries are to be determined remains undetermined. So, too, does the question of how the will of the residents shall be registered.

As the problem now stands, the Commissioners propose to have incorporated in the law provisions for a downtown business zone in which sale of alcoholic beverages will be permissible without reference to the local option applicable in other sections.

Boundaries of this oasis probably will be irregular. A rough outline suggested would run from the Capitol on the east to Nineteenth street on the west, from the Mall on the south to U street on the north.

Senator King Skeptical

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, yesterday said he believed that District sale of liquor under neighborhood options "will not work."

"My mind is not closed," said Senator King, "and, of course, I will hold hearings on any bill the Commissioners send to my committee, but I yet must be convinced that a local option plan would work in the District."

He said he was afraid it would prove an "impossible task" to subdivide the District in accord with the views of every neighborhood.

"I am firmly o the opinion, however, that liquor should not be sold within several blocks of any schoolhouse or church, and I think it ought to be kept out of the residential neighborhoods," he added.

Bathing Beaches Ask U. S. Help.

3 Wampler Witnesses Hit Dean Evidence

Lawyer's Secretary Says Employer Returned Cash Given for Women.

Baltimore, Dec. 11 (AP).—The trial of T. Morris Wampler, Washington attorney, accused of concealing income from taxation for 1930 and 1931, entered its second week today with defense witnesses denying statements made by Edward B. Dean, sr., aged Washington real estate man, who is the chief witness for the Government.

Today's evidence largely concerned a check for $4,550 which Dean said he gave Wampler and Wampler kept. The defense claimed that when Dean complained at Wampler's fees for "settling" claims brought against Dean by women, the check was returned, though it already had been indorsed.

"Take the damned check back and I'll let a jury decide how much you owe me," said Wampler, according to Mrs. Catherine Offutt, his secretary and one of the main witnesses today.

Real Estate Man Testifies.

Alonzo Bunch, Washington real estate man, told the court he had arranged a meeting between Wampler and Dean after the check incident, and that Dean at the time told him the check had been returned.

Last week Dean testified it had not been returned and presented it in evidence to show it had been indorsed and cashed.

Robert J. Hooven, of Washington, told the court he had overheard a conversation between Dean and Wampler concerning the claims of women who said the aged man had assaulted them. He said he heard Dean say that he had been returned $25,000 out of the $45,000 given Wampler to settle such claims.

"Bad Liquor."

Previously Dean said he had been returned but $10,000, and the Government contended that Wampler kept the $15,000 but did not put it on his income tax return.

United States Attorney Simon Sobeloff called Hooven's attention to a number of alleged discrepancies between his testimony today and that given before the Federal Grand Jury which indicted Wampler last January.

The witness replied he was ill at the time of the Grand Jury hearing, probably because he had consumed too much "bad liquor."

The case will continue before Judge W. Calvin Chestnut in the District Court here tomorrow.

Oil Station Chief Slugged, Robbed

Blackjacked and threatened with death when he refused to obey a command of two bandits to "step lively," Leroy Croson, night manager of a gasoline station at Massachusetts and New Jersey avenues northwest, early today was robbed of $10 by two men who escaped on foot, according to a report to police.

The bandits entered with guns drawn and ordered Croson to throw up his hands and to hand over his money. When Croson showed signs of resistance he was slugged by one of the men, who continued to cover him with the gun. Meanwhile his accomplice looted the cash register.

Court Backs Vaccine Case Ban on Pupils

School Authorities Backed by Appeals Judge in Entz Ruling.

Justice F. D. Letts, District Supreme Court, yesterday upheld the District public school authorities in barring Barbara and David Entz from the Gage School because they had not been "duly vaccinated." They are the children of H. H. Entz.

Justice Letts said "the court thinks this statute (relating to compulsory vaccination) should be construed in the light of the result sought to be accomplished. The result sought was pupils should be immune to smallpox."

He said that when Congress inserted the word "duly" it meant more than "the operation of vaccination." He held that the intent of Congress was that the pupil should submit to more than "the operation without reference to the result."

The Entz children submitted to vaccinations last spring by a licensed physician. The vaccinations did not "take." Both children later were barred from school and their parents brought court action to compel their reinstatement.

Two years ago Entz started a somewhat similar action. This was dismissed in court by Justice Jesse C. Adkins, when witnesses said that shortly after the vaccination the children were treated with iodine, which nullified the effects.

Is District Dry Or Wet? Police Judge to Rule

Liquor Defense Declares U. S. Repeal Includes This Area.

The question of the validity of prohibition enforcement in the District is to be dealt with in a forthcoming decision by Police Court Judge Gus A. Schuldt.

After hearing arguments for more than an hour in the case of Roland R. Steiner, charged with possession and sale of liquor on Ocotber 14, Judge Schuldt yesterday took the case under advisement and will render a decision "in a day or two."

Defense Attorneys Louis Whitestone and George Boden, arguing a motion to quash and dismiss and a plea of abatement, contended that prohibition enforcement becomes ineffective in the District and Territories when it becomes ineffective in the States.

They contended that any other interpretation of the law would permit the local court to enact, by judicial opinion, local legislation for the District when Congress had obviously intended to enact a general law applicable to the United States as a whole.

Assistant United States Attorneys Dave S. Hart and Roger Robb declared Congress had power to legislate for the District and the Territories, aside from the power derived from the eighteenth amendment, and that it had passed liquor laws for the District and that it could not have intended to leave the District without a liquor law after repeal.

They charged also that, due to the fact the offense is alleged to have been committed before National repeal became effective, December 5, there is no reason the case should not come to trial.

Thief Acts in Church As His Victim Prays

A Virginian who entered the Church of the Epiphany, on G street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets northwest, yesterday to pray, was robbed of his camera.

Jesse Ziegler, of Bridgewater College, Bridgewater, Va., the victim, told police the camera was valued at $15. He placed it on a bench in the rear of the church before it vanished, Zeigler said.

Price of Bootleg Alcohol Reaches $15 in District

Increased Cost of 5-Gallon Tin Laid to Activity of U. S. Agents.

Prices for bootleg alcohol have soared to $15.50 for a five-gallon can since repeal became effective, and prospects are that it will reach $25 during the Christmas holidays.

The upward trend is attributed by alcohol runners to increased activity on the part of revenue agents who are striving to make favorable showings before the staff of agents is curtailed.

The other factor in the price boost, according to bootleggers, is that demands of enforcement officials for graft have become extortionate because of a realization that the source of illicit income may soon end.

Less than ten days ago, alcohol was selling in the District for $9.50 a five-gallon can and it rose gradually to its peak quotation of $15.50. The result is that some bootleggers are using cheaper grades of sugar and molasses alcohol in mixing "rye" and "gin."

Bootleg liquor was retailing last night at $1.25 a pint, $2 a quart, $3 a half-gallon and $5.50 a gallon; while rye whiskies were being sold in dispensaries in nearby Maryland at prices ranging from $3 to $4.55 a quart.

McCarl Bans Treasury Pay Of $100 Day

Professors and Experts Limited to $9,000 Annual Salary.

Ruling Also Fixes $5 as Daily Allowance for Traveling.

Professors or other experts employed by departments governed by the classification act can not be paid more than a basic salary of $9,000 a year, Comptroller General McCarl ruled yesterday.

The ruling was made in disallowing salary claims for two professors employed in the Treasury Department at respective salaries of $50 and $100 a day. Moreover, McCarl ruled, subsistence expenses while traveling must be limited to $5 a day, even by experts.

This ruling is not expected to apply to relief organizations, which operate not under the classification act but under Executive order. One NRA expert, Donald B. Richberg, legal counsel, is receiving a basic salary of $12,000 a year, it was revealed recently.

Hired by Acheson.

The two experts involved in McCarl's ruling are Prof. Harold M. Groves, of the University of Wisconsin, and Prof. Robert M. Haig, of New York. Both were brought to Washington by Dean Acheson, former Acting Secretary of the Treasury, "for the purpose of conference on matters pertaining to internal revenue taxation." Groves was promised $50 a day and actual traveling expenses and Haig $100 a day and traveling expenses.

Grove, it was revealed, worked three days, putting in a bill for $150 and $94.93 for traveling expenses. Haig worked only two days, his bill being $200 for salary and $36.14 for traveling expenses.

Acheson's letters to the two professors are quoted in McCarl's ruling. The letters promise payment from the appropriation entitled "Collecting the Internal Revenue."

Ruling Quoted.

"This appropriation is not available for payments for expert services," McCarl ruled, "unless the experts are duly appointed as provided by law, and it has been held that the salary rates of experts not employed as witnesses in courts are required to be fixed in accordance with the principles of the classification act in departments whose personnel is otherwise subject to the classification act, if no other basis for fixing their salary rates has been prescribed by statute, and that the per diem equivalent of the maximum annual rate of $9,000 prescribed by the classification act, or $25 per day.

"As no other basis has been prescribed by statute for fixing the salary rates of experts employed under the Bureau of Internal Revenue and as the personnel of that service, both in the District of Columbia and in the field service, is subject to the principles of classification except when specific salary rates are fixed, the above limitation is applicable to such employment.

Must Take Cut, Too.

"Furthermore, as persons temporarily employed as experts are officers or employes of the Government, their per diem compensation rate fixed in accordance with the principles of classification, not to exceed the rate of $25 per diem, is subject to 15 per cent reduction under the terms of the act of March 30, 1933, and reimbursement to them for subsistence expenses while in a travel status may be made only on a per diem basis under the terms of section 207-210 of the economy act, rather than on an actual expense basis."

Groves' expense account was for 11 days and Haig's for two. Thus the most Groves can receive is $63.75 for salary and $55 for expenses. Haig's maximum would be $42.50 for salary and $10 for expenses.

Truck Rams Police Car; "Hit-Run" Driver Held

A truck yesterday struck and badly damaged a police scout car at Twenty-sixth and L streets northwest. Policemen R. B. Rector and L. T. Mahoney, of the Third Precinct, occupants of the car, were unhurt.

David Weathers, 28, colored, of 519 Twenty-third street northwest, said to have abandoned the truck at the scene and later returned, was charged with hit-and-run.

Auction Crowd Bids Eagerly For Admiral Dewey Souvenirs

Some of the family valuables auctioned yesterday as part of the Dewey estate. Upper: Miss Peggy Higgins holds a Buddha brought by Admiral Dewey to his wife following the Battle of Manila Bay. Below: Mrs. Elsbeth Scudder examines some of the Dewey china.

Household Articles, Rare China, Silver Go Fast on First Day.

Hundreds of persons from Washington social, art and literary circles, as well as officers of the Army and Navy, members of Congress and diplomats — some once entertained at the home of the late Admiral and Mrs. George Dewey at Sixteenth and K streets northwest—attended the auction of the Dewey rare paintings, china, furniture, silver and mementoes of their interesting careers at the C. G. Sloane auction rooms yesterday.

While the sale was of the estate of Mrs. Dewey, many of the articles had either belonged to Admiral Dewey or were gifts to Mrs. Dewey.

Many bids, made for sentimental reasons by the Deweys' friends, exceeded the intrinsic value of articles. There was brisk bidding for chairs and for the tea tables and coffee tables over which Mrs. Dewey presided.

Rare decanters of Bohemian glass, as red and clear as the wines once served in them, and deep blue Colonial ones long in Mrs. Dewey's family also were popular among the bidders. Many dozens of cutglass wine and whisky glasses found ready purchasers.

Large Crowd There.

Long before sale hour, throngs waited at the door or wandered among the articles to be sold. Many of the items suggested incidents of the life of Admiral and Mrs. Dewey.

The chest of drawers with the Navy seal handles found a ready sale. In these Admiral Dewey kept his apparel, which made him the best dressed man of his era, whether he wore naval uniforms or civilian clothes.

The stand and mirror he used for shaving was eagerly bought by one of his retired brother naval officers.

Both the Admiral and Mrs. Dewey were collectors of rugs. Many handsome large and small ones were included in the sale, some of them real museum pieces, and most having historical significance.

Rare Sheffield silver, which Mrs. Dewey collected all her life and much of which she inherited, was sold.

Pictures Also Favored.

Most of the pictures offered had little intrinsic value but they, too, found purchasers. Here was lively bidding for a landscape by George Inness, and it was sold for nearly $100. Pictures signed William Hart were bought by an art collector.

Among the antiques sold were two bronze Buddhas brought back from the Orient by Admiral Dewey and which always occupied a prominent place in the Dewey house.

Handsome volumes which formed part of the Dewey library, including works of Voltaire, de Maupassant, Flaubert and the Earl of Beaconsfield, were sold for far below their value. Many of these books bore notations by Mrs. Dewey, who was noted for her literary inclinations.

Some of the most valuable and interesting articles of the Dewey estate will be offered at the auction rooms this afternoon. The sale will continue for several days.

Antique Society to Meet.

The Washington branch of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities will meet at the Willard Hotel Friday at 2:30 p. m.

Rigid Action In Accident Cases Urged

C. of C. Committee Maps 5-Point Program to Aid Traffic.

Negligent Homicide Law Will Be Sought for District.

Stricter prosecution of automobile drivers responsible for accidents will be sought by the transportation committee of the Washington Chamber of Commerce as one of the main objectives in its five-point program for improvement of local traffic conditions, it was decided at a luncheon meeting of the committee yesterday at Schneider's restaurant.

A too-lax attitude is being taken in regard to a large number of accidents, it was charged. Particular stress was laid on drivers who are continuously involved in accidents and who escape prosecution because of their willingness to reimburse the injured parties.

Prosecutions Under Study.

George E. Keneipp, chairman of the committee, appointed E. D. Merrill and Charles H. Frame to head a subcommittee to study the present methods of prosecuting drivers with the view to submitting recommendations for stronger enforcement.

The committee also will seek creation of a negligent homicide law for the District to replace the charge of manslaughter. Substitution of a medical examining board for the coroner's jury system is another objective on which progress was reported.

Charles H. Cook was instructed to confer with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, with the view to drawing up a clearer definition of the rights of pedestrians. The findings will be embodied in a recommendation for a system of pedestrian rights and pedestrian control.

School for Violators.

Legislation is being drafted for a traffic vialators' school, C. Phillips Hill reported. The legislation is expected to take the form of an amendment to the traffic act for the District.

William S. Friel was appointed chairman of a subcommittee to review and revise the bill providing for fixing of financial responsibility of drivers of private cars and taxicabs preparatory to introduction of legislation in Congress.

Without taking any definite stand on the proposal of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen to restrict Thirteenth street to one-way traffic, the committee recommended that the plan be tried out as an experiment, and carefully checked to decide its advantages.

Huge Turnover in Talent Expected as Big League Magnates Meet

Club Owners Put Players On Block

Many Trades in Both Leagues Foreseen in Lively Session.

Cochrane on Scene at Chicago Awaiting Sale to Detroit Club.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11 (AP).—Baseball's trade winds whipped into a veritable gale tonight as major league club winners and their pilots, all of them out to get their men, sailed into Chicago for their annual winter meeting and shopping tour.

No less than a score of players in both leagues were reported to be on the ivory block and the magnates, confronted with important problems in baseball such as the adoption of a uniform ball and what to do about radio broadcasts of games, admitted happily that they anticipated the biggest turnover of talent in many years. The various problems will be discussed in separate meetings tomorrow and Wednesday while the trades and sales will be completed in hotel lobbies, nooks and corners.

Cochrane Claims Attention.

As the baseball writers searched for news and impending trades today, they spied one of the first arrivals and a central figure in one of the outstanding deals about to be completed, Mickey Cochrane. The Athletic catcher was reported already sold to Detroit as manager and catcher and was straining at the leash, waiting for Connie Mack and Frank Navin, of the Tigers, to arrive to announce it officially.

Navin already has announced he was certain of getting Cochrane, and planned to clinch the deal after a short conference with the tall tactician of the Athletics. Cochrane was enthusiastic over the deal and was planning trades and sales in his mind and discussing Detroit's prospects for 1934.

Another apparently well-founded report said the Pittsburgh Pirates would trade Pitcher Steve Swetonic and Catcher Tom Padden to the Philadelphia Nationals for Flint Rhem, right-hander. This deal, it was said, awaited the arrival of William E. Benswanger, president of the Pirates, tomorrow morning.

Seek Cut From Radio.

As far as the league meetings were concerned, the leaders expected to adopt a uniform baseball for both circuits and offer Kenesaw Mountain Landis another contract as commissioner. The radio problem appeared to be unsettled and the best information was that those clubs that so desired could broadcast but that the league or clubs would ask for a cut in the profits accruing from the baseball broadcasts.

"Personally, I don't look for any change in the radio policy," said Will Harridge, president of the American League. "Some want it; some don't. The situation is about the same as a year ago."

Both President Harridge and President John Heydler of the National League agreed that a uniform baseball would be advantageous, but the big question was which ball—The American or National League sphere?

Heavy Snow Keeps Columbia Indoors

Two-Hour Drill Is Ended With Scrimmage.

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—A heavy blanket of snow on Baker Field forced Columbia's football team indoors today as the Lions continued their preparations for the Rose Bowl game with Stanford New Year's Day.

The drill, lasting for two hours, was held in the 105th Field Artillery Armory. The whole squad was in uniform and concentrated most of its attention on a defense for Stanford plays as put on by a scrub line-up.

Later Lou Little sent the first team through an offensive scrimmage against the second team line and wound up the practice with a scrimmage between the second team and the scrubs.

Eight Players Accept North-South Game Bid

New York, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—Eight football players have accepted invitations to play on the Northern team in the annual North-South charity game here, December 24.

They are Mike Sebastian, Pittsburgh back; Paul Howell, Fordham tackle; Robert Hogan, Pittsburgh quarter back; Nat Kossack, Cornell tackle; Joe Pilconis, Temple end; Armand Niccolai, Duquesne; Bob Burzio, Carnegie Tech, and Red Stewart, Carnegie Tech.

Claiming Race Purses Are Cut at Jefferson

New Orleans, Dec. 11 (AP).—Robert S. Eddy, jr., general manager of the Jefferson Park Race Track, today announced that purses for claiming races would be cut from $400 to $300, beginning tomorrow.

Poor attendance was blamed for the reduction, Eddy explaining that the $100 lopped off might be restored if conditions improve before the issuance of the next condition book 11 days hence.

On the Fire at Chicago

Chicago, Dec. 11 (A.P.).—Concerning the talk of sales and trades at the annual major league baseball meeting, here are the needs and rumors, take 'em or leave 'em:

American League.

Detroit—Cochrane to manage the Tigers, plugging up the weak spot of years—catching.

Philadelphia—Connie Mack is going to sell or trade George Earnshaw, Lefty Grove, Rube Walberg and Max Bishop to the highest bidders.

St. Louis—Manager Roger Hornsby needs a power hitter and likes Earl Averill, of Cleveland, but Cleveland wants him to swap Oscar Melillo for two other players.

Cleveland—The Indians want a second baseman who can hit.

Chicago—Rumors say the White Sox already have completed a cash deal for George Earnshaw.

New York—Rumor has Tony Lazzeri up as bait for the best deal. Manager Joe McCarthy out to rebuild infield.

Boston—Only three members of 1931 club left and club wide open for deals.

Washington—Joe Cronin said he was pretty well satisfied, but on the lookout for anything that looked good.

National League.

New York—Manager Bill Terry says he's all set since the purchase of Joe Bowman, star right-handed pitcher from Portland, but could use another good hitter.

Chicago—It was reported a hitch has developed in the rumored deal by which Pat Malone and Outfielder Kiki Cuyler would go to Cincinnati for Outfielder Chick Hafey, but that it would be overcome and the swap made.

Brooklyn—The Dodgers are hot after a southpaw pitcher.

St. Louis—All set, but always ready for a deal.

Cincinnati—An apparently well-founded report is going around that the Reds have given up hope of landing Catcher Jimmy Wilson from the Phillies and plan to name Jim Bottomley as manager. More punch and tighter fielding needed.

Pittsburgh—The Pirates, with lots of trading material, are after a star pitcher and second baseman of proven ability.

Boston—Looking for a good hitter.

Philadelphia—Phillies are looking for a good hitter.

Heavy Business in the Ring

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (Spl.).—It is with much distress I note the fight managers going sissy on us. Johnny Buckley, the petulant little fat man of Boston, Mass., who manages Jack Sharkey and also Andy Callahan, charges that at the weighing-in of his fighter Callahan for the battle with Vince Dundee in Boston recently a 10-pound weight was placed somewhere upon the person of Master Callahan to make his weight read 151½ pounds instead of his actual weight, which, according to Master Buckley, is 141½.

There is some slight mystery still connected with these charges because if Callahan was 141½ pounds and Buckley knew it, what was he doing in there fighting for the middleweight championship—in other words, who was swindling whom and what for and for how much? But what I really want to know is what is the matter with the present generation of fight managers? Are they softening up? In the old days nobody ever bothered to slip a fighter a 10-pound weight at the weighing-in. It was reserved for the ceremonies to follow, at which time it was tenderly wrapped in his glove and presented to his opponent.

In the old days, this was known as "the business," and was usually encased in leather of the same color as the gloves. The last time I heard of "the business" in modern times was when it was brought up by the late Walk Miller and the late Tiger Flowers, manager and fighter, respectively, some years ago at the time when the Tiger was fighting Jack Delaney. The Tiger was a colored man, a Georgia deacon, a brilliant fighter, and a quiet, pious man. His manager, Walk, also known as Squawk Miller, matched him to fight Delaney in the old Garden. Somewhere along in the fight, Delaney let the right go and the referee didn't even bother to count. They picked the deacon up and I have never before seen a man so damaged by a single punch. His nose was flattened, and bleeding, both lips were split and his left eye was completely closed. Deacon Flowers looked like a man who had been kicked in the face by a mule.

I was just starting out in this business at the time. Walk Miller called up on the telephone to say that he had a hot story and would I come up? In his dingy office on Times Square he accused Delaney of having had "the business" in his glove. "That man sure enough had the business in his mitt," said Walk. "No man living can do that to us in one punch like he done." I was so green I had to admit I didn't know what the "business" was. "What? Suh?" inquired Walk—"ain't you never seen no business?

"Well, then for your education, the business is a small implement made of iron, made to fit inside the palm of the hand and covered with red boxing glove leather. You do not see the business when it is in the glove, but it sure does your health no permanent good when you get it. I will say no man living can hit a punch like Delaney hit us. Did you see the Tiger's face after we picked him up? You may print in your paper that Walk Miller says Delaney gave Flowers the business?"

I did print it and it resulted in a rematch—which, of course, is what the crafty Walk wanted. They put them on in the old Garden again. Walk remained in Delaney's corner to make sure the business didn't go in. After a couple of rounds, Delaney let the right hand go again and down went Mister Flowers. He went, however, only to one knee. Delaney had another punch cocked and couldn't stop it.

Referee Patsy Haley lost his head and disqualified Delaney, awarding the fight to Flowers. There was an immediate riot at the ringside. Flowers was lugged to his corner and revived. Fans stormed the ringside, howling and screaming, the boxing commission summoned Haley, the police formed a cordon around the ring and after a few minutes the fighters were ordered to resume. Miller demurred at first, having won the fight once on a foul, but old Walk DID have some sporting blood in him at that and he wasn't convinced that Delaney was the better man. He gave the Tiger's head another shake and sent him back to the wars.

Well, there was a little sparring and not very much later, Delaney let it go again, and the deacon dove into the resin again, head first, and when they resurrected him after the usual fatal digits had been tolled, by George if he wasn't all busted up again, nose re-smashed, eye cut, lips puffed. Delaney stood in mid-ring with his palms extended to show that his glove was empty of anything but his knuckles. Miller was working over the deacon, frothing at the mouth, cursing and calling Delaney lucky and swearing up and down that in another fight the Tiger would win and that Delaney couldn't do it again. The Tiger must have been conscious of some of this, for along about that time he tugged a little timidly at Walk's sleeve and said—"Mistah Miller"—the Tiger was always respectful. "Ah know how you feel and ahm very grateful to you, but ah would just like to say at this time that ah have been convinced * * *"

Fox Importing a Faux Pas

AKRON, Ohio, Dec. 11 (AP).—Fox hunting, traditional pastime of the wealthy, is going proletarian in Akron.

H. S. Wagner, director of the metropolitan park system, announced today he is lining up the 400 C. C. C. boys around this city, and the week after Christmas will turn them loose on a fox hunt with plenty of dogs to help. It will be a campaign of extermination, however, not merely a sporting chase.

The fox situation is very grave around Akron this year, Wagner said, and he blames the hunt clubs in the Cleveland-Akron district for importing foxes. "If they'd kill the foxes it would be all right," he said, "but two-thirds of them escape and multiply."

According to Wagner, the city's parks are thick with foxes, which are killing many pheasants and rabbits. Outlining his big hunt, he said circles will be formed, inside and outside, by the C. C. C. boys with the dogs between. Time limits will be carefully set, and at the zero hour the two circles will start moving toward each other, the dogs frisking along in between. In this business-like fashion, Wagner hopes to exterminate the majority of the fox population in one swoop.

Baer Yearns For Action In Ring

Is Tired of Rehearsing 15 Hours a Day for Night Club Show.

Says He Has Learned Carnera's Chin Is Open to a Right Hand.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP).—A very large and debonair young man, Maxwell Adelbert Baer, is heading straight back to the fight business at a pace that startles even him—something he thought couldn't be done.

To his normal role of heavyweight challenger, and his recent success as a motion picture actor, Maxwell has added a brand new dodge. That of master of ceremonies in a night club. He starts tomorrow night. Right now he's rehearsing 15 hours a day, and he says it's killing him.

Yearns for Ring.

"I've got to get back outdoors," he muttered as he raced around, fresh from the tailor, the barber and a manicurist, among piled up chairs and tables, carpenters, actors, dancing girls, and howling directors. "I want to get back to fighting. I've got to get healthy again. This stuff's smothering me."

He sings and he dances—very fetching—but his mind is on prize fighting. In the picture he made he boxed ten rounds with Primo Carnera, the heavyweight champion. He took several knockdowns, and so did Carnera. But he's convinced of one thing. When he and Primo finally tangle—possibly in June—there's going to be a new champion.

Can Hit With Right.

"I learned all about him and I know this. I can hit him on the chin with a right hand, and that's all I need. He'll come down in more pieces than a church steeple hit by lightning. You saw what happened to Max Schmeling when I conked him, huh? Well, Carnera'll go the same way, but it'll be funnier. That's one that'll be so good I wish I was out in the audience watching it myself."

That's Baer's idea of what will happen. He mixes the monologue with large and portentious winks. But he does give Carnera some credit.

Is Big and Strong.

"He's very big and he's very strong. He also can fight a lot more than I thought. But—I can hit him with right hands and that's that. That's also that for any guy in the world I can hit with a right hand. They just naturally get sleepy when they taste those knuckles."

One of Baer's reasons for coming East was to prospect for a title match. Madison Square Garden wants to stage the bout in June, has Carnera signed. But Baer would rather Jack Dempsey staged the affair. Dempsey is expected East within a few weeks, and some compromise may be effected with the Garden.

"I'm glad," said Baer, "that the Garden has Carnera all signed, because he'd be a hard guy to find otherwise. He won't be anxious to fight me. He knows now I can hit him with right hands."

Chocolate Signed To Defend Crown

Will Battle Click Dec. 25 in Philadelphia.

New York, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—Kid Chocolate, of Cuba, was matched today to defend his world junior lightweight championship against Frankie Click, of San Francisco in a 15-round bout at Philadelphia, Christmas afternoon.

Chocolate won the junior lightweight title from Benny Bass at Philadelphia in 1931, and many experts believe he will lose it in philadelphia when he encounters Click. The Cuban is recognized as world featherweight champion in New York and affiliated states, but this title will not be at stake since both boys will enter the ring at about 130 pounds.

Click, who looks like a miniature Jack Sharkey, came to the front rapidly during his year and a half of boxing in the East. He fought 21 bouts since arriving from California and lost three. One of those was a questionable decision to Tony Canzoneri, former king of lightweights another went to Eddie Cool three weeks ago in Philadelphia.

Last Rites for Roper At Philadelphia Today

Philadelphia, Dec. 11 (AP).—From the diversified fields of sports, politics and business today came tributes to the late William Winston (Bill) Roper, who was guided through life, whether on football field or in council chamber, by his unchanging motto — "play the game."

Long a coach of Princeton University gridiron teams, veteran member of Philadelphia City Council, always a fighter, Roper died of infection yesterday. He was 53.

The funeral will be at 2:30 p. m., E. S. T.) tomorrow at Grace Protestant Episcopal Church. The Rev. Charles Eder, rector of the church, will conduct the services and interment will be private in the cemetery of St. James the Less, in Falls of Schuylkill, this city.

Turner Tempts Rassle Fans With Toy Fund Show Talent

Browning - Roebuck Top Brilliant Program of Bouts Friday.

DISTRICT rassle fans, judging from the caliber of talent lined up for Friday night's matfest at the Auditorium, are given the opportunity of doing a good deed in the most painless fashion, for all they have to do is to buy a ticket and Promoter Joe Turner will do the rest. Washington's rassling impressario has agreed to cut a generous slice off the top of the intake at the box office and give it to The Post's Doll and Toy Fund so that needy boys and girls of the Capital can still believe that there is a Santa Claus.

Turner has outdone himself in arranging Friday's card. It will be topped by Jim Browning, the Jack Curley circuit's world title claimant, who, incidently, is rated No. 1 to Jim Londos' No. 2 by Ring Magazine. Browning faces a real test in Theodore (Tiny) Roebuck, former Haskell Indian football star.

Trouble for Rough Rudy.

In the semi-final Turner has torn an old page out of the game's archives and is matching a Masked Marvel with Rudy Dusek. Usually these unknowns have proven to be set-ups, but the one who shows here Friday recently threw Gus Sonnenberg, ex-champ, for a loss and has victories over many other topnotchers to his credit. And this means that the going should be rough for Rough Rudy.

Two of the three preliminary matches were anounced last night, these calling for Bruno Gorasini to leer at Scotty McDougal and Tommy Draak to exchange holds and grimaces with George Manich. A third and what is promised to be the best of the supplementary bouts is still in the making and will be closed today.

The Browning-Roebuck feature seems to have struck a popular chord with the cash customers. Browning's famous airplane leg-scissors, one of the most spectacular holds seen here this season, calls for the champ to spin his foe about while laying on his back and then to follow through with a leg-scissors while crashing said opponent to the mat.

Roebuck Says "No."

With Roebuck weighing 271 pounds, Browning will have to be a better man than Gunga Din if he can use this, his most effective weapon, on the big Indian and the fans are wondering whether or not he can use it.

Roebuck, himself, says the answer is "No."

Schmeling Spikes Report of Divorce

Berlin, Dec. 11 (AP).—A report from Budapest that his wife was seeking a divorce there today met with a smiling denial from Max Schmeling, former world heavyweight boxing champion. "I love my wife more every day," Max told the Associated Press. "I don't see what interest anyone could have in spreading such a story—they must be crazy. The story has been going the rounds for some time and there is absolutely no truth to it."

Mrs. Schmeling is the former Anny Ondra, German film actress. They were married here last July, a month after Max was knocked out by Max Baer in New York City.

Schmeling has agreed to box Tommy Loughran, the winner to meet Baer in a match on the West Coast in February.

Post Mortems . . .

Joe Gardner, coach at Georgetown Prep, will attend the Rose Bowl game . . . driving there with Steve Barabas, former Georgetown star . . . who is now assistant coach at Columbia . . . after this Friday's wrestling card, Joe Turner will return Thursday night for his cards . . . last season "Dizzy" Dean pitched in the most games of any pitcher in the National League, 48 . . . struck out the most batters, 199 . . . and tied with Lon Warneke, of the Cubs, for the most complete games pitched, 26 . . . it was the second straight season that Dean was the strike-out king . . . in addition, he established a new modern record by striking out 17 Chicago players in one game . . . the former record was 16.

Eddie La Fond's boxing teams at Catholic University have lost only one match and have been tied once . . . both times by Bucknell . . . although Al Crowder, of the Nats, took part in more games than any pitcher in the American League last season, Irving Hadley, now with the Browns, hurled the most innings.

Milling to Face Von Reedon Tonight

Will Likely Win Battle if He Can Punch Tender Waistline of Foe.

THE flying fists of Varias Milling will hack at the tender brisket of Charley Von Reedon in an effort to chop down the willowy Dutchman in a ten-round bout at Portner's tonight. Von Reedon is generally conceded only an outside chance of evading a concerted body attack from the Filipino featherweight, but there are some who believe he will be able to stave Milling off and emerge with the decision.

It is the belief of most ring critics that Von Reedon possesses only one glaring fault—a supertenderness in the midsection. His waistline is of that waspish pattern usually indicative of a woeful inability to absorb punishment and in at least one local bout his reactions to body punches have been unfavorable. Against LeRoy Dougan he winced every time he was even tapped in the brisket and otherwise indicated that he did not exactly dote on being on the wrong end of blows to the brisket. In his most recent bout here against Joe Foglietto, Von Reedon managed to hold the enemy at long range throughout and did not stop a single solid body blow.

Constainly Wades In.

Milling is the type of fighter who should reach Von Reedon's middle section. He is constantly wading in crowding his opponent, and once he finds a target on the body he usually comes out on the long end of the decision or knockout.

An eight-round semi-final will find Frankie Nour, Rumanian flyweight champion, attempting to establish himself locally by overcoming Sailor Billy Landers of Norfolk. While his record shows some startlingly good wins, Nour is an unknown quantity to local fans. His performances in the gymnasium in preparing for the encounter have led many to believe that Landers will have little or no difficulty winning, but the Rumanian may be another of the type of Mickey Walker, who looks very bad in the gymnasium, but fights excellently in the ring.

Three fours will be offered. In the most promising, Mike Grove meets Al Shulman, a substitute for Earl Wise. Tom Slaughter meets Paddy Ryan in another four-round slugging match and Sailor McKenna will tackle Jack Quigley in the curtain raiser.

Around the Ring Selections—Milling over Von Reedon, Nour over Landers, Grove over Schulman, Slaughter to defeat Ryan; McKenna to outfumble Quigley.

Albany Training Camp.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 11 (U.P.).—The Albany club of the International Basket Ball League will train for its 1934 season at Barnwell, S. C.

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

REDS BARRY, the NRA heavyweight who has been giving employment to three managers, has discovered that two of the trinity were quite superfluous and is now operating under the sole management of Patsy Donovan Koontz, the man who managed him before he acquired two additional managers.

The great schism in the management of Barry occurred over the week-end when Head Manager Koontz discarded the branch offices of Reds Barry, Inc., and told Mushky Jackson, Barry's New York manager, that Jackson was now at liberty to peddle the services of some other fighter, not Barry.

Head Manager Koontz then gave Jimmy Erwin, Barry's Alexandria branch manager, his notice. It seems that the net profits of Barry, Inc., under three managers underwent a sharp slump compared to the peak years under the sole management of Koontz. The gross intake was greater but the margin of profit curiously smaller.

Had Stable of Managers.

For a while Barry was unique in his profession—one of the few fighters with a stable of managers. It all came about when Jackson, a New Yorker, who knew the second cousin once removed of Jimmy Johnston, the Madison Square Garden matchmaker, poured into Head Manager Koontz's ears glowing tales of Gotham streets paved with gold for fighters of Barry's type.

So Barry was given unto the management of Jackson by Koontz, who stayed in Washington prepared to clip the coupons from Barry's enterprises under Jackson. After Jackson finally succeeded in getting Barry knocked out in one round by a fellow named Tony Galento, Koontz recalled Barry without the formality of waivers from Jackson and brought him back to Washington.

Operating hereabouts was Jimmy Erwin and his perambulating stable of fighters, who won Koontz's favor and was assigned a piece of Barry for his matchmaking efforts. When Erwin matched Berry with Galento again in Pittsburgh for a sum said to be an insult even to the 60-cent dollar, Erwin's matchmaking began to lose its appeal for Koontz. Last night Koontz declared Barry free and independent of both Jackson and Erwin.

To Meet Ruggirello.

Koontz's first act as manager plenipotentiary of Barry has been to sign him for a fight with one Salvatore Ruggirello, a fellow of a mere 225 pounds, standing 6 feet 4 inches. The large Italian has knocked out Stanley Poreda, beaten Walter Cobb and Victorio Campolo on the floor, so Koontz has not picked something soft for his boy Barry.

But, on the inevitable other hand, Koontz may be fully aware of what he is attempting to do, for Barry always went better against the big, slow fellows than he did against the little, fast boys like Bob Godwin, or even Eddie Houghton, a fourth-rate middleweight who held the Southeast Redhead to a draw.

If Barry is only half as successful under the sole management of Koontz as he was under the triplicate management of Koontz, Jackson and Erwin, then he will fare no worse than before. Because, you see, the Barry-Koontz end of the firm had only been getting half the profits, if any.

Stein Leads G. W. Cagemen to 66-to-28 Victory Over Shenandoah in Opener

Colonials Top Foe, 33-8, At Half

Make 24 Points Before Invading Five Scores; Howell High.

Noonan, Shirley, Kane, District Boys, Take Part in Bout.

THE STEIN SONG—the Sammy Stein Song—is going to be popular with George Washington basket ball fans this winter, and so is Sammy.

Stein, the olive brown, squat youngster from Jersey City, led the Colonials to a 66-28 victory over Shenandoah College in the opening game of their season last night.

Stein was the spark plug of the Colonial attack. To borrow a slightly worn phrase, he was all over the floor, but never on it, guiding G. W. to its most impressive opening-night triumph. He directed his team in true Napoleonic fashion as George Washington's smooth-functioning attack seeped through Shenandoah's disorganized defense to ring up 24 points before the visitors located the hoop.

Howell High Scorer.

The newest star in the G. W. athletic firmament was not high scorer of the evening, however. That honor belongs to Jimmy Howell and his 15 points. But Stein was a close and spectacular second with 14 points—the result of seven flashily flung basket balls sinking into the bucket.

Shooting with both hands, standing in the corners and zipping them through, standing in midcourt and zipping them through, and dribbling through the startled Virginians for snowbirds, were the methods employed by the lad. Stein was good. The fans recognized his ability, and the kid himself knew he had the stuff.

Three District Boys.

With Bill Noonan jumping center, Dallas Shirley at guard, and Barney Kane at forward, Washington was well represented. Noonan is the most improved center in the business. Kane played a nice game, though hindered by a bad knee, and Shirley was as calm as ever, supplying some grade-A floorwork to the G. W. cause.

The score was 33 to 8 at the half. Bill Scott, Shenandoah forward, gathered up six of his team's points with a brace of long pot shots and as many fouls. He netted two additional goals in the second half to lead the visiting scoring with 10 points.

Bill Parrish's blocking and tackling easily was the best of either team. The ponderous, reformed football player accidentally bumped into a group of Shenandoah men at one stage of the game, scattering them about the premises like so many rag dolls. "Tuffy" Leemans and Joe Walsh, more footballers, looked good on end runs to the basket, but Leemans was caught stiff-arming a couple of times and penalized for his overzealousness.

Plays Baltimore U.

The Colonial point-scoring factory will resume operations tomorrow night when new material from Baltimore U. will be shipped in for some patented G. W. processing.

Community Lead Tied By Sigma Phi Lambda

Four games were played in the Southeast Community Center Basket Ball League at Hine Junior High School last night. Sigma Phi Lambda tied Christ Church for the lead in Section B by winning a double-header, defeating Congress Heights, 23 to 18, and the Blue Eagles, 24 to 21.

Certified Bakers won from Dixie five, 29 to 13, and the Marions defeated Naval Reserves, 18 to 10, in what proved to be a real battle. The Marions were reinforced by the addition of Timmons, Melton and Swift, three players who have made names for themselves in District basket ball circles.

Games to be played at Hine tomorrow night are as follows: Eastons vs. Anacostia Business Men at 7 o'clock; Blue Eagles vs. Certified Bakers at 8, and Anacostia vs. Dixie Five at 9.

Scholarships Hit By Trojans' Rivals

San Francisco, Dec. 11 (AP).—Dropping of Washington State from California's football schedule after 13 years of competition; a tentative five-year agreement between Washington State and St. Mary's College for games to be played in San Francisco, and a discussion of scholarships issued by Southern California were high lights of the annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Conference today.

Faculty athletic representatives held their annual meeting concurrently, and from their session came reports they had dug deeply into the matter of scholarships issued by Southern California.

While no official statement was forthcoming, it was reported faculty members from California and Stanford had made pointed remarks about the number of so-called athletic scholarships granted by the Trojan school. From the same source it was heard Southern California delegates had strongly defended their right to issue a certain number of scholarships.

Clipper Smith, N. C. State's Coach, Out

Council Calls Meeting on Dec. 20 to Consider His Successor.

Raleigh N. C., Dec. 11 (AP). Athletic Council of North Carolina State College announced late today that the contract of John P. "Clipper" Smith, head coach of football for the last three years, will not be renewed.

A brief, formal statement was issued after a meeting lasting more than three and one-half hours.

It said:

"The Athletic Council voted not to renew the contract with John P. Clipper Smith for the year 1934-35. And since the position of assistant coach is held subject to the approval of the head coach both positions are therefore open."

Frank Reese was assistant to Smith. It was explained the Athletic Council's action meant that Reese could be considered as a candidate for the job as head coach.

Another meeting of the council will be held here December 20 to consider a successor to Smith, but it was said the new coach would not be named at that time.

High School Highlights

TODAY marks the first heavy date in the scholastic basket ball campaign. The card holds almost as many tilts as were scheduled throughout all of last week.

Eastern and Western make debuts in the city division, meeting stern competition in St. John's and Washington-Lee High, respectively. The Western quintet clashes with the Little Generals on the Ballston floor. Roosevelt, in its fifth start of the current season, mixes with Mount St. Joseph in Baltimore.

Eastern's foe, St. John's, has already felt the sting of refeat at the hands of Emerson Institute, perhaps the strongest school five in the District. Sanborn's five buried the Saints under a 56-to-14 barrage last Friday. Washington-Lee, like Western, will be playing its initial contest of the season.

Roosevelt has fallen twice before the Emerson cagers, and lost to Mount Rainier. Kendall School was defeated early last week, 29 to 24, but Roosevelt has a heavy task on hand in order to win from the Baltimore St. Joseph's cagers.

Two suburban battles today that should prove interesting are the Manassas - Lee - Jackson embroglio at Manassas and the Rockville-Damascus fray at Rockville.

Coach Harley Sanborn of Emerson Institute has booked seven additional basket tilts for his team, the first of which will be with Western in the Georgetowners gym next Monday. The other games will be staged following the holidays. They are: January 5, National Training School; 9, Tome; 11, Catholic U. Frosh 16, Boys' Club.

The February dates show the Emerson lads meeting Washington-Lee High at Ballston on the 12th; Boys Club, the 13th, and Franklin High of McLean, Va., there, on the 23d.

Three big attractions on the Central High slate which Bert Coggins has just about completed are the games with Trenton (N. J.) High School, December 22, Tome and Southern High of Baltimore, last year's Oyster City public high basket ball winner. These games will be played abroad, the dates of the latter two to be announced soon.

Central's basket ball team will take part in the Washington-Lee tournament, only if the team wins three interhigh series. Eastern will defend the title in that event, which it won last year. Another local five to take part in tournament will be Georgetown Prep, which was runner-up in the prep school division of the tourney.

Herbie and Jimmy Thompson, former Western High School court flashes, are now members of the Duke University basket ball squad which meets Catholic University here Thursday night.

Snow Ping-Pong Champion

Bob Snow is the intramural ping-pong champion of the University of Maryland, following his straight-set victory over Morris Appelbaum in the final round.

The scores were 21—17, 21—17, 22—20. Snow went through the tourney without the loss of a set, while Appelbaum lost only two strings.

Arlington Faces Cubs.

Arlington Juniors and Georgetown Cubs will clash Sunday at Arlington at 1 p. m.

North Carolina Considering Grange

Cody, Crisp and Tilson Are Among Those Included in Speculation.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Dec. 11 (AP). The Charlotte News says a member of the University of North Carolina Athletic Council informed it today that Red Grange, the former Illinois "ice man" All-American, is being considered as a possible successor to Chuck Collins as head football coach at Chapel Hill.

Other names not previously brought into the discussion, the News says its informant mentioned, are those of Josh Cody, assistant at Vanderbilt, former Clemson mentor and also an All-American in his playing days; Hank Crisp, director of athletics at the University of Alabama; W. E. Tilson, head coach at Washington and Lee; Bill Fetzer, former coach at Chapel Hill and former back-field coach at William and Mary; Hiker Joy, of Canisius College, Buffalo, N. Y., who formerly worked at Fordham, Boston College and Holy Cross.

Not Offered Job.

Chicago, Dec. 11 (AP).—Harold (Red) Grange, Chicago Bears' half back, said tonight he had not been offered the job of coaching the University of North Carolina football team next year.

The "Galloping Ghost" of Illinois said, however, that a North Carolina alumnus had talked to him this fall.

"I would like to coach next year," Grange said. "But the conditions would have to be right. Anyway, I have had no official word from North Carolina."

CHICAGO, Dec. 11 (AP).—James Caras, sharpshooting Wilmington, Del., youngster, tonight conquered Charles Seaback, of Astoria, N. Y., 125 to 86 in 15 innings, to remain undefeated in the world pocket billiards championship tournament. The victory was Caras' third in a row, and enabled him to retain second place behind Andrew Ponzi, of Philadelphia, who has won four straight.

Ralph Greenleaf, of New York, the defending champion, regained his best form today to score his second victory of the tournament, 125 to 84, in 10 innings over Pasquale Natalie, of Chicago.

Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, the 1930 champion, went into a tie with George Kelly, of Philadelphia, by trouncing Bennie Allen, of Kansas City, 125 to 54, in 12 innings. Allen made a battle of it for five innings, but was shut out in the final frames. Each had a best run of 55. Rudolph and Kelly have won three out of their four starts.

G. U. Five Drills For Princeton Tomorrow

Played Below Par in Losing to Pitt, Coach Mesmer Says.

BACK on the familiar boards of Ryan Gym after a disappointing performance against Pittsburgh in the Smoky City, Georgetown's basket ball team was a disconsolate group of young men yesterday as preparations were launched for the Princeton game tomorrow at Princeton. The Hoyas are bent on regaining their lost prestige at the expense of the Tigers, but they'll have to do better than they did in Pittsburgh to bag the decision.

"It was a funny situation," said Fred Mesmer, recounting the downfall of the Hilltoppers. "Between halves, the boys talked it over and made their plans for the second half. They knew what the trouble was, and they knew it wasn't that Pitt was too good for 'em, but they weren't playing up to par.

Committed Same Errors.

"Then they went back into the game and committed the same errors. Dumb basket ball! That's what it was—and they know it. Pitt is good, but I don't think it should have won the game. Cripes! When Hargaden tossed one in to tie it up at 29-all, I thought the boys were going to win. He let another shot go just after. Right smack into the bucket, and I mentally figured us on the long end of a 31-to-29 count. But the ball jumped out. One of the funniest shots I ever saw. A sure basket, and then it pops out. Well, that was the turning point.

"Pitt played a close guarding game, just the way we figured them. It was a perfect set-up for our system. But my boys went haywire. They didn't move, simply stood on the corners, or grouped together around the foul circle. Gee, they looked great against Bucknell, and then nullified the good work with a poor game at Pitt."

Tomorrow night will find Ed Hargaden battling Ken Fairman, an old rival. Hargaden, as has often been related, was second high scorer in the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference last season, and Fairman won similar position in the Eastern Intercollegiate League. Siebert, Fairman's running mate, beat him out by two points for the individual laurels.

Bethesda Five Bows To Georgetown Prep

Georgetown Prep basket ball team won its second straight game in as many starts yesterday afternoon, defeating the Bethesda-Chevy Chase five on the Garrett Park court, 44-21.

Led by Maury Nee, Hoyaette guard, the Preppers went into an early lead that was increased to 20-8 at the half. Frank Allan and Tommy Keating, Georgetown forwards, accounted for 10 points each, while Nee led both teams in the scoring punch with 13 points. Johnson, the visitors' forward, led his team with 7 points.

Pro Rule Changes Brought More Field Goals, Points

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP). Professional football adopted two rule changes this year it hoped would give the public what it wanted—more scoring and fewer tie games. The final league statistics issued today show that both aims were accomplished.

The two changes were to allow forward passing from anywhere behind the line of scrimmage, instead of from 5 yards back, and to move the goal posts back to the goal line. The four chief results were these.

Twice as many field goals kicked.

Twice as many points scored, 1,109, in 57 games.

A greater percentage of passes completed, 614 of 1,630, or more than 37 per cent.

Tie games decreased from 20 per cent of those played in 1932 to only five, or less than 5 per cent of the league contests in 1933.

The statistics also show how the New York Giants and the Chicago Bears won their play-off positions by leading the Eastern and Western divisions, respectively.

The Bears gained 3,029 yards to lead the league, closely followed by the Giants with 2,970. Chicago scored 133 points to 82 for their opponents and the Giants 244 against 107.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, with Benny Friedman doing the tossing, led in passes completed with 79 successful of 189 attempted, an average of 43 per cent. The Bears completed 92 of 210 attempted for an average of 43 per cent. Harry Newman and the Giants completed 74 of 180 for an average of 41 per cent.

Terp Gridmen List Florida on Oct. 27

University of Maryland will meet the University of Florida next year in Baltimore Stadium, October 27, it was learned yesterday. The contest is the second major game on the Terrapins' schedule. Navy will be met in Washington at Griffith Stadium, October 6.

Florida and Maryland clashed on the gridiron for the first time December 2 at Tampa, Florida winning by a score of 19-0. Next season's game will terminate a home-and-home agreement now in effect.

Catholic University's game with Western Maryland also has been settled. The Cardinals wanted to book the Green Terrors for Thanksgiving Day at Griffith Stadium, but the latter declined the bid. Their game will be played November 3 at the local ball park.

Hitting the Headpin . . .

AN all-time league record was established last night in the Northeast Temple Minor League at the Northeast Temple alleys, by Bob Rebholtz, of the Times-Herald team, who smashed the maples for a 170 high game, clipping 13 pins off the previous mark held by Vernon.

Rebholtz' record-breaking score was made simultaneously with the 160 bowled by Sam DeLisi, of the Tom McCann team, who reeled off three strikes and three spares. Thus the 157 record once held by Vernon was broken twice in one night in the second block of the league matches.

Baptist Christian went wild in sweeping all three games of its match with Presbyterian No. 2, in the Takoma Church League. Charlie Boyle added a new league record for the season, a high 164 game, and "Pop" Herman, who has been bowling around the District for the past 30 years, turned in the highest set of his career with games of 131, 156 and 121 for a 408 total. Aided by this pin busting, Baptist Christian turned in a 601 for a new team-game record and a total pinfall of 1,783.

In the other matches, Catholic Missions took all three from Lutherans; Lady of Sorrows won two from Trinity Men's Club and Trinity took the odd game from Presbyterian No. 1.

Standard Oil No. 1 captured team honors in the Petroleum League at the Columbia drives, rolling a 562 game and 1,573 set. Tony Maley (Chapman Oil & Coal) was the individual star, taking a 137 game and a set of 386.

Ellen Veihmeyer (Joseph Milan) and Mary Hughes (Mount Pleasant) shared high game in the Eastern Star Ladies League at the Lucky Strike drives, each having a 123 game. Lucy Owen (Washington Centennial) annexed high individual set with 320. A 521 game and 1,404 set by Joseph Milan were the best team scores for the night.

One of the most unusual games of the league, or any other league for that matter, was a flat team game of 430 by Lebanon. Not a mark was made in 50 frames.

Kester (Congress Street) starred in matches of the Methodist Protestant Church League at the Arcadia drives, taking both high individual game and set with 128 and 368, respectively.

Rhode Island No. 1's 544 game and 1,587 set led the team feats.

A new league record was hung up in the Federal League at the Arcadia alleys, when Internal Revenue, aided by a 628 game, rolled the highest set of the season, 1,812. Beyer (Internal Revenue) came through with a 151 game and Fredericks (Postoffice) took a 380 set for individual honors.

Bradford (Jumbo Bread) was again the individual star in the rolling of the Sanico League at the Convention Hall drives, pounding out a 352 set to aid his team in turning in a 552 game and 1,597 set.

Mattison (Sanico Bread) had a high individual game of 133.

All of the high-score honors in the Odd Fellows League at the Convention Hall alleys were taken by Columbia. Elossbrener's 145 game and Kettering's 384 set were the team's main support in its rolling a 564 game and 1,617 set.

Not the last round-up, but the first round-up, of most of the star bowling fraternity of the District is under way in the preliminary warm-up for the United States Sweepstakes at the Arcadia alleys. In order that arrangements may be made whereby all the entrants can roll in the preliminary sweepstakes at a time which will be most convenient to them, between Christmas and New Year's, Ralph Frasier, manager of the Arcadia alleys, is desirous of having the following men call him at Columbia 10013 as soon as possible:

Pro Golf Event Considered at Beaver Dam

Members Propose $1,500 Open Tourney to Be Held Next April.

BEAVER DAM COUNTRY CLUB, which was recently sold to Edward S. Brashears to satisfy mortage holders, may sponsor a professional golf tournament in April for a reported purse of $1,500.

Ardent members of the club, it is understood, have expressed a desire to stage a tournament similar to the National Capital Open, which Kenwood has been promoting for the past three years. A meeting of the Beaver Dam golf committee, headed by M. H. Maier, will be held Thursday night, at which time plans for the tournament will be discussed.

Beaver Dam is the third District club that has shown a willingness to back a professional event. Kenwood officials were anxious to put on a tournament in April, and shift the month of the National Capital Open from November to September. Indian Spring Country Club recently indicated that it was interested in a $2,500 pro championship, with Al Houghton, of Kenwood, in the role of promotor.

The proposed Beaver Dam tournament, according to plans, will be a three-day affair of 72 holes medal play, perhaps to be held on April 13-14-15. It is doubtful if it can be staged earlier, since the traditional North and South classic at Pinehurst, N. C., is scheduled for March 27-28-29, with a flock of other tentative tournaments to follow. Tony Manero, pro at the Sedgefield Country Club, Greensboro, N. C., stated while here that his club would put on a tournament shortly after the North and South.

Congressional Delays Naming New Golf Pro

Although the board of governors of the Congressional Country Club met last night, no action relative to the selection of the new golf professional to succeed Sandy Armour was taken, it was stated by Golf Chairman Henry J. Richardson.

The announcement of the new pro will not be made until after the meeting of the board late next January, it is understood.

President John C. Koons, of Congressional, has received more than 75 applications for the job, a number of which includes the names of District pros.

Keppel to Coach J. C. C. Cage Team

Dave Keppel, one of the most outstanding basket ball players ever developed in Washington and a member of the Approved Board of Referees, has signed a contract to coach the Jewish Community Center five, it was learned last night. He will assume his new duties immediately.

Coaching is not new to the diminutive Irishman. Two seasons ago he directed the J. C. C. unlimited team through the most successful campaign in its brief history, hanging up a record of 22 victories against two defeats. The Knights of Columbus and Sholl's Cafe were the only clubs to down Keppel's charges. Later the Caseys were beaten twice by the J. C. C.

The game with Sholl's was a classic. It was for the District A. A. U. championship, and the restaurant men were heavy favorites, but the small, speedy Jewish quintet surprised by holding it on even terms during the regulation game, only to lose by a field goal in an extra five-minute period.

C. U. Courtmen Open Season Tonight

Face Maryland Normal Is Warm-Up Game for Duke Thursday.

ALTHOUGH Catholic University's courtmen have been practicing less than two weeks, they confidently expect to uncover a victory when they roll up the curtain tonight against Maryland State Normal at the big Brookland gym. Hostilities will start at 8 o'clock.

The Cardinals are represented by a veteran array of cagemen. Gene Augusterfer, Babe Gearty, Abe Rosenfield, Bob McVean, Eddie White, Joe Morrissey and Joe Galliher wore varsity uniforms last season. Of the lot, Augusterfer, Rosenfield, White and Gearty have starting roles tonight. Bernie Lieb, center, is a product of Coach Johnny Clark's '32 freshman quintet.

Catholic at this early stage of the season is far from the polished team that it was last season. The men are still a bit ragged around the edges and all have not found their scoring eyes. It takes practice and competition, plenty of both, to acquire the old poise and velvety smoothness that is part and parcel of winning ball clubs. But C. U. potentially is a good ball club and should get over the Teachers without undue exertion.

Tonight's contest will be in the nature of a warm-up for the Duke fray, to be committed at Brookland Thursday night. Duke, too, has a veteran quintet, champion of North Carolina last season, and it has been out since the middle of November.

Are Experienced Crew.

Experience, with the necessary time to unlimber stiff basket ball muscles, are a large item in the Southerner's favor.

The Cards will shoot the works tonight. Coach Cotton wants to see just how far advanced they are, and he may as well know at the start of the season. There are a thousand and one questions to be answered. Can Lieb fill the tap-off assignment acceptably? How will Rosenfield's southpaw goal tossing stand up against a crew of orthodox leather wielders? How will they go as a team? We'll have some idea after tonight.

Md. Indoor Track Fund.

The board of governors of the University of Maryland "M" Club has voted to donate $500 toward the construction of a board track for indoor meets in Ritchie Coliseum. It also has voted to hold a mid-winter banquet, at which time presentation of football letters will be made.

Don Guzman Wins Charles Town Feature Race as Form Players Have Bad Day

Gelding Cops Going Away At $12.40

Chatterfol Falters in Stretch Duel; Loughport Is Third.

Daily Double of Merrie Marie and Bokie B. Pays $174.20.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent)

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 11.—Don Guzman, a son of St. James, given a short suspension in Maryland for running a losing and a winning race in the same time, won the Charles Town, today's feature race. There will not be an investigation. Don Gusman is Mr. Consistency himself and despite his recent fine racing he was allowed to parade postward at substantial odds. So-o-o-o, after the placing numbers were hung, the mutuel board boys gathered the figures necessary to tell the small crowd that Don Gusman was rewarding with a $12.40 mutuel.

But to get away from the feature race for a moment, it would be unfair not to report that the snow came over the mountain last night. Not enough for sleigh riding purposes, but real white snow that spotted the infield and sprinkled over the track at some places.

All a Mistake, Says Mayor.

However, Mayor Russell, of Charles Town, says its all a mistake. The average December temperature hereabout is 46 degrees, we're told. It will take a good warm afternoon to bring up the average after today's blast, but we will string along with the good mayor.

And now more about Don Guzman. The S. T. Greenfield gelding broke with the tailers as Starter Cassidy sent the field away for the mile and sixteenth contest. Chatterfol was first to show in front and exhibited a set of flying hoofs until well into the back stretch. Oral was close by and Lough Port was a factor at this stage. Don Gusman began picking them up at the far end of the back stretch and soon became Chatterfol's chief rival. On the turn for home, he became Chatterfol's master.

The longshot players were in their glory with the running of the first race over the five-furlong course. The mutuel board fairly sagged with Merrie Marie paying $76.40 to win. Grayback supplied a $15.40 place pay-off and Tight Wad was a generous $20.80 third.

Merrie Marie By Head.

Grayback and Broomplait fought it out for half the distance. Broomplait finally gave up the effort, but Grayback was outspeeded in the stretch. Merrie was up in the final strides to take a head decision.

Dornoch, after two straight victories here, bit the dust in the second race, being the runner-up to Energetic Boy. Most Always was third. Energetic Boy and Dornoch became rivals from the start and did their battling far out in front of the others. Dornoch had the advantage in the first part, but Energetic Boy finally collared him and won by a length. Most Always was third after the first turn.

Jim Arthur's Bokie B, given a clever ride by Eddie Watters, scored an easy victory in the third race over the six and a half mile course, having a two-length advantage over The Black, a longshot, which in turn was a length in front of Fair Clark. Watters did not hurry Bookie B going to the first turn, but drove him through the field to come out on top when the group reached the back stretch. From that point on, it was only a question of the winning margin.

Daily Double Pays $174.20.

Bokie B. and Merrie Marie were the winning horses in the daily double and tickets on this combination paid $174.20.

C. J. Wensley's Chrysmute supplied a $17.40 mutuel in the fourth race. The filly drew away from Prize Package and stood off a closing rush by Peedeeque to take the decision. Goofus was cut down in the race and was destroyed.

Wahoo, at $9.80, took the sixth and Westy's Lad, at $10.20, won the final by 12 lengths. Thus the day closed without a favorite scoring.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The mighty Alaskan volcano crater that threatened his life, also proved to be his rescuer when the Rev. Father Bernard R. Hubbard and his companion were trapped, with their airplane fuel supply running low, inside the towering walls of Aniakchak.

It happened when Father Hubbard, who is internationally known as the "glacier priest" and who is a college professor in geology, was exploring by airplane the Aniakchak crater in Alaska—the largest crater in the world. With Frank Dorbrant as the pilot, he landed safely inside the great crater, made some scientific observations, and prepared to take off for the homeward flight—only to discover that the fuel supply was nearly exhausted.

To hike out of the crater meant three weeks of hard going through wilderness—it also meant hunger, and possible death. It was a 30-minute flight over the rim of the crater; there was only a 15-minute fuel supply in the airplane's tanks. To Pilot Dorbrant is due the credit for the fantastic scheme that carried them out of the crater. He flew the plane into an updraft of air near the edge of the cone, which carried them up 2,000 feet; then he flew directly over the active part of the volcano, where the plane was caught in the direct blast of the eruption—and hurled, with its two passengers, out of the crater.

Once clear of the crater walls, Dorbrant headed for the sea where he put down beside a fishing boat and borrowed gasoline to continue the trip back to civilization.

Flashes After Games.

Georgetown Flashes would like to book games with 115-pound basket ball teams. Call Coach Lomax at West 1081.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Charles Town Race Track, Dec. 11.

It might be a good idea to play Jockey Thurber's mounts for the remainder of the meeting. The veteran rider drove up to the course this morning, parked his car, got out and stretched his legs, and started for the jockey room. Someone yelled "fire," and Thurber turned around to see his auto a flaming torch. I believe the rear axle was found after the blaze. It will take many rides to pay for that job—at $5 for losing mounts and $15 for winning mounts.

Two horses went to the post today without a bet attached. They were Mount Leader and Boston Idol, both in the first race. It was just as well, because they ran a nifty last and next to last. Not a bad day for Mrs. Bennings' lovely boy. Wahoo and Chrysmute won at good odds, and Grayback, at 11 to 1, was beaten a head. BILL.

First race—Lodorus has a victory to her credit over a field as good as this and came back to run a bang-up second to Luck-In. Prefers five furlongs and seems ideally suited. Big Dipper is always a threat on the smaller ovals and is dangerous in this field. Mint Mission won over a cheaper lot.

Second race—Niggertoe is strictly a clocker's proposition. My No. 1 watch watcher has given me the word on this one. Breaks from No. 1 post and may surprise. Conflagration must be respected after that recent victory. Ragtown Belle closed like a juvenile ready to be troublesome earlier in the meeting.

Third race—Black Dreams has shown fair form on two occasions here. May find less speed in this test and set the pace all the way. Calgary Kay shapes up well and should take care of the place. Tremendous could wreck this field if in any kind of condition.

Fourth race—Uma failed us miserably the last time out, but got the worst of the getaway. However, we played a fit horse and we would be foolish not to go back. Breaks from the inside and has speed enough to make the most of that position. Barcelona Pete and Hogarty are both heavily weighted.

Fifth race—Renaissance ran consistently in Maryland during the fall. In with 107 pounds here and will give anything the field contains a real battle. General Lejeune for the place and Gloritone to show. The last named needs two scratches to get in but deserves consideration despite recent bad races.

Sixth race—Grand Acre has a lot of speed and will have to be caught before this purse is distributed. Hot Cake will never be better and gets the place call. Nisia may improve on today's effort to take some of the money.

Seventh race—Aella showed a good race that other afternoon and may be ready to take a field of this caliber. Black Patricia gets weight from all members of the field. That last doesn't go. Chief's Troubadour might stage a grand wake-up.

Biltmore Open Winner Seeks British Title

MacFarlane, 1925 U. S. Open Champ, to Make First Bid in England.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Dec. 11 (AP).—The winner of the $10,000 Miami Biltmore Open Tournament here, Willie MacFarlane, lanky Scot, let it be known today he expects to make his first challenge for the British Open championship next season.

Announcement from the 42-year-old Tuckahoe, N. Y., pro, came as a contingent of the country's leading golfers shoved off for California to compete in a series of tournaments there this winter.

Although he was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, MacFarlane, who worked as a plasterer in this country before he became a professional golfer, never has played in the British Open championship.

He won the American Open in 1925 by defeating Bobby Jones in the play-off at Worcester, Mass., and last summer annexed the Metropolitan Open title for the second time.

Wins Despite Neuritis.

With a 288, four over par for the 72-hole route, MacFarlane added the Biltmore championship to his list, despite the fact he was suffering from neuritis in his leg. He dethroned Denny Shute, of Philadelphia, who wears the British Open crown, in the tournament that ended yesterday.

In joining the caravan of golfers leaving here, Shute embarked on his second expedition to the California gold coast. During his first trip there in the winter of 1928-29, the first winter after he turned professional, he won the Los Angeles and Texas Open tournaments.

Among the first contingent to leave here were Horton Smith, Tom Creavy, Paul Runyan, Al Espinosa, Harry Cooper, Ralph Guldahl, Craig Wood, Jimmie Hines, Victor Ghezzi, Johnny Revolta, Frank Walsh, Willie Goggin and Mortie Dutra.

All expect to return here for the Miami Open, January 5-7.

Ohio Center Elected Princeton's Captain

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 11 (AP).—Elwood McGlenn Kalbaugh, of Bellaire, Ohio, center on Princeton's undefeated and untied football team, tonight was elected captain of the 1934 eleven. His election was announced at the annual Nassau football dinner.

R. Kenneth Fairman, of Syracuse, N. Y., was awarded the John Prentiss Poe Cup at tonight's dinner. The cup is given annually to a member of the varsity football team chosen for good moral character and proved player ability.

Jack Westrope Rides Third Triple in 3 Days

Houston, Tex., Dec. 11 (AP).—Jack Westrope, leading jockey of the year, increased his total winners for 1933 to 287 at Epsom Downs track today by scoring his third triple in as many racing days.

Westrope won with Efiore in the first, paying $4.60 for $2; with Fast Move in the third, at $3, and with Good Scout in the seventh, at $4.20.

Fans' Interest at Low Ebb, Louisiana May Drop Racing

JEFFERSON PARK RACE TRACK, New Orleans, Dec. 12 (AP).—Thoroughbred racing in New Orleans is going through the worst stage of its history and when it pulls itself out if it ever does a new era in racing may be the outcome.

The Jefferson Park meeting, which has been in session nine days does not speak any too well for the future of the sport in this State. It is just about washed out, with everyone ready to give it a kick and land it in the gutter.

The people of the Cresent City and the outside world seem to have lost interest in the ponies. The local contingent do not attend the races and there is no alluring way by which they can be enticed to visit the track. The opening day attendance was 8,000, but since then the daily average crowd is less than 1,000. There is only a 25-cent tax to gain admission. It is practically a free gate. There are rumors that this tax will be knocked off and the gate will be "free."

The handle in the mutuels has been very light some days, the handle being less than $20,000, but the opening day and Saturdays have brought the total up to $309,200 for a daily average of $34,355. This is below last winter in the money handled, and indications are that it will fall away down as the meeting advances.

There is no way to stop the downward trend of the game. The Jefferson Park officials have wracked their minds to devise means by which interest can be stimulated. They have put out a "morning" line that far surpasses that of the pool rooms in the City of New Orleans, and they take big money. The handle in this "book" has been very good, and it gives the players an idea of what to expect in the afternoon. Horses played in the "morning" line book usually cop the races, or they are fighting out the finish.

Other attractions are the daily double, which usually pays a long price and the quinella in the last race. All of these devices are put on to make the game alluring and bring out the people, but it is of no avail. It is estimated that the association "takes" approximately 15 per cent.

Scales Plugging Denied by Clerk

Boston, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—Mitchell Hambro, clerk of the Massachusetts State Boxing Commission, today denied charges of having used a 10-pound weight to make Andy Callahan, of Lawrence, appear heavier at the weigh-in for his title bout with Vince Dundee, of Baltimore, world middleweight champion, last Friday night.

After Dundee won a split decision over Callahan, the latter's manager, Johnny Buckley, charged that Callahan actually weighed only 141 for the bout instead of 152½, as officially announced. The charge resulted in an informal hearing today before State Boxing Commissioner Dan Kelly.

Kelly wanted to know where Buckley got the 10-pound weight which he exhibited, and Buckley retorted:

"It's up to you to find out. I've got it now."

Jefferson Race Captured by Flying Don

Nyack Runs Second, Half Length Back; Victor Returns $7.40.

JEFFERSON PARK, New Orleans, Dec. 11 (AP).—Mrs. J. Burks' Flying Don, under a strong ride by Buddy Haas, led home a half dozen shifty sprinters in the fourth race, most attractive offering on the wash day program here today. The gelded son of Master Charlie survived a driving finish to beat Frank Seremba's Nyack, on which Lester Balaski was attempting to gain his third purse in a row, by a half length. L. Thompson's Black Comet was another half length away in third position.

By Product, an impressive winner Saturday, was a disappointing fourth in the role of favorite. The mare was never able to reach the leaders. Flying Don, paying $7.40, ran the three quarters in 1:13 3-5.

Black Comet was hustled to the front after a good start and appeared to have the purse at his mercy until inside the final furlong. Hot Shot forced the early running, but retired and left the task up to Flying Don. The latter challenged through the stretch and Black Comet tossed off a daylight advantage when looked in the eye. Nyack, meanwhile, had come along with a belated rush and steered over to the inside in the last sixteenth, extended Flying Don to the limit.

Stocks Move Up Fraction in Spite of Sales

Profit-Taking Tempers Trading; Turnover Up to 2,453,860 Shares.

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Profit-taking tempered today's stock market but recent leanings toward cheerfulness still seemed to predominate and the close represented a small gain for the averages. Turnover jumped to 2,453,860 shares.

Dollar rates were higher in foreign exchange dealings as the official gold price tarried at $34.01.

There were recurring reports that overtures had been or were to be made to Great Britain for an understanding on monetary matters, but these went unverified; a State Department official denied that conversations had taken place.

Rumors 2 Weeks Old.

Wall Street recalled that similar rumors had been heard a couple of weeks ago and perhaps thought that where there was smoke there must be fire, especially since the gold level had gone unchanged since December 1

Sterling here took an extreme drop of around 9 cents, while French francs gave the dollar an indicated gold value of approximately 64 cents as compared with 60.77 as measured by the R. F. C. yardstick.

The background of security markets continued favorable. Firmness in the bond list, noticeable for more than a week, as well as dollar movements, offer evidence that flight of capital from the country has been halted, while the situation of trade, which has just been through a sharp reaction provides grounds for encouragement.

Help of Pay Checks.

Partly with the help of Government pay checks, retail business seems due for a reasonably satisfactory holiday season, while there are indications that the long dormant heavy industries again may expect improvement.

Steel operations begin the week with a good uplift. American Iron & Steel's operating ratio figure today was 31.5 per cent of capacity, the best in about six weeks and a gain of 11 per cent from a week ago when the rate was 28.3.

This rise, contrary to seasonal expectancy, is attributed to larger specifications against fourth-quarter contracts and to increased takings of automotive steel as car and truck makers prepare for new model production. Incidentally, the code requires that shipments on contracts for the quarter be completed by the year-end, which is presumably accelerating activity.

Rail Stocks Stronger.

Rail stocks gave a good account of themselves in the share trading, although gains were not fully maintained. Delaware & Hudson was up more than 3 net and Baltimore & Ohio about a point. Strength in this important department gave the entire list assistance during the brisk early dealings, but buyers appeared to be in no hurry and realizing transactions were numerous.

Allied Chemical, Chrysler, National Bisbuit, Du Pont, American Can and Union Carbide lost fractions to more than a point, while American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, North American, Bethlehem and U. S. Steels, Auburn, Radio, Loose Wiles, Liquid Carbonic, Santa Fe, Union Pacific and New York Central gained as much. Oils were firm. Alcohols fell back in the late trading.

Oyster Business Seen Decreasing

Rock Hall, Md., Dec. 11 (Spl.). Eastern Shore oystermen and packers assert the market has slowed up considerably and in some packing houses the demand is not sufficient to keep men at work all day. Several thousands of bushels of oysters are being kept to be shucked on demand.

Because the State Conservation Department closed some oyster bars from September 1 to November 1 there have been unusually large supplies of bivalves and though prices were boosted before Thanksgiving they have dropped since then and though dredgers, at one time during the season, were getting 65 cents a bushel and the tongers, 50 cents, prices are now ranging around 30 to 40 cents.

When the closed bars were opened dredgers caught from 75 to 100 bushels each day. Recent warm weather is believed to have aided tongers, though catches have dropped during the last two weeks.

The Sound Money Controversy

Collapse Due Largely to Particular Demands Made

By Ralph West Robey.

THERE is, perhaps, little reason to be surprised by the suddeness with which the so-called sound-money campaign has died out. Nevertheless it probably always will remain one of the interesting episodes of this extraordinary period. For this reason it seems to me worth reviewing before it recedes still further into the background and it becomes even more difficult to recall the elements of strength and weakness of this outburst.

The controversy started in so far as the public was concerned, it will be recalled, with the resignation of Sprague and Acheson from the Treasury Department. Before this, however, a rather large amount of spade work had been done in one way and another. At the time there was nothing to indicate that these sundry developments had any necessary connection, but now it appears that they probably did.

As one looks back now, therefore, it seems there is ample reason for setting as the start of the controversy the statement issued by the 12 or 15 economists from six or eight Middlewestern universities. This statement seemed relatively innocuous at first, for although it was vastly superior to any other academic group utterance since the depression started, it did not appear to make much difference what a group of college professors thought about our monetary policy. At least it did not seem that it could make much difference if they were orthodox in their views, for in that case they would be unable to get the ear of the President.

Cry Taken Up By More Influential Persons

Almost immediately, however, the cry raised by this group of Middle Western economists was taken up by organizations and individuals of sufficient standing to make their views attract attention. In rapid order came the stinging letter of resignation of Sprague, the strong sound-money declarations of an outstanding group of business men in Chicago, the New York State Chamber of Commerce, and the United States Chamber of Commerce. Mixed in with this was the extremely vigorous anti-inflation article of Bernard M. Baruch in the Saturday Evening Post, the open declaration of opposition to the current monetary policy by James P. Warburg, and the "baloney dollar" statement of Alfred Smith.

The net result was that the public at large became aroused to the question of inflation. For a little while, accordingly, it looked like there might be a real battle. Before it got any place, however, a new development took place which seemed to be like a dash of cold water in the face of the sound-money group. This was the simultaneous meetings of the two opposing camps held in New York. At the sound-money meeting, it will be remembered, was only about 1,500, while at the inflation meeting the hall was packed and the total which tried to get in, it was estimated, numbered between 15,000 and 20,000.

It never has seemed to me that this great difference in attendance was a significant indication of the relative strength of the two groups. The sound-money crowd offered nothing but an academic discussion, while the inflationists offered a spellbinder whose ignorance and disregard for both accuracy and logic assured plenty of fireworks. The public, nevertheless, as well as the sound-money camp appear to have taken quite a different view and to have concluded that these meetings did provide evidence of the general attitude on inflation.

Swing of Public Opinion Rests Upon Other Factors.

I still believe, nevertheless, that my original opinion was correct and, further, that the swing of public opinion away from the sound-money campaign rests almost solely upon the arguments they have advanced. These arguments, in brief, have been, first, that to start the printing presses would be ruinous, and, secondly, that as a protection against "greenbacks" we must have an immediate return to the gold standard. Both of these points, it seems to me, have been extremely vulnerable from the point of view of the inflationists.

Thus on the question of the danger of printing-press money it has been possible for the inflationists to reply that obviously the cry of the sound-money group is merely a result of their fear of what may happen. In other words, since there has been no "greenback" issue as yet, there is no basis for complaint on what has been done. Further, it could be argued that this fear is unfounded, for inasmuch as the President has not used the powers along this line given him under the Thomas amendment, it is evident he is not a "greenbacker."

An equally strong case could be made out in answer to the plea for immediate stabilization of our currency and a return to the gold standard. In fact, even better could be done here because through simply failing to drive the price of gold higher the whole case of the sound-money group was wrecked. This was because they merely asked for stabilization instead of a return to the old dollar. This was the line of reply taken by the Administration although there have been two or three advances in the price of gold since the controvery started. Necessarily the Administration did not admit it was backing down, for such an admission was quite unessential in answering the demands of the opposition.

The above, then, in summary is the record of the first scrimmage between the sound-money group and the inflationists. I do not see how any one can doubt that the latter were the victors. I am afraid, too, that the next fight will be even more difficult for the sound-money crowd. In other words, I think that through their having played into the hands of the inflationists this time, instead of making the entire financial program of the Administration the basis of their charge, they have placed a handicap upon themselves for which they will pay heavily when the fight breaks out again some little time hence.

Bond Market Gain Reflects Trade Upturn

Federal Loans Join Rise as Sales Climb to $14,996,000.

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Both prime investment and the more speculative secondary loans reflected improved trading sentiment in the bond market today and prices in most categories were pushed forward vigorously.

Total sales expanded to $14,996,000, par value, from $12,669,000 last Friday, and the average for 60 domestic corporate issues advanced half a point.

The United States Government list, which had been declining for several days, rallied 1-32d to 22-32ds of a point, with activity being centered principally in the lower-yield treasuries.

Business Reports Aid.

While the domestic gold rate was again unchanged, and currency stabilization rumors caused the dollar to advance in foreign exchange dealings, traders and investors apparently were much encouraged by optimstic business reports.

The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated steel operations this week would be around 31.5 per cent of capacity, which compares with 28.3 per cent a week ago and is the highest figure since the week of October 23, when the rate was 31.6.

Rail loans again made the best showing among the corporation groups.

Gainers of Fraction.

Gainers of fractions to 3 or more points here include some issues of Alleghany Corporation, Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Central of Georgia, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Rock Island, Cleveland Union Terminal, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Great Northern, Hudson & Manhattan, Illinois Central, K. C. Southern, Louisville & Nashville, Missouri Pacific, N. Y. Central, Nickel Plate, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Frisco, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific.

Among the better utilities and industrials, up around a point were some bonds of American & Foreign Power, American Smelting, American Telephone, International Telephone, Postal Telegraph, North American, North American Edison, Philadelphia Co., Portland General Electric, Texas Corporation, Trumbull Steel, Vanadium, Warren Bros., Wheeling Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

Foreign obligations were quiet and mixed. Bonds of Argentina, Germany, Switzerland and the United Kingdom sagged a point or more, some of the Belgians improved.

Heavier Wheat Rises Lost in Profit - Taking

Fear of Crop Damages From Cold Wave Aids Price Advance.

Chicago, Dec. 11 (AP).—Stimulated by a sudden cold wave arousing crop damage fears, wheat rose today to 5¼ cents above last week's low, but profit-taking virtually canceled gains.

Almost total absence of snow protection, combined with 40 degrees drop in temperature, gave ground for uneasiness regarding the domestic wheat crop outlook, especially in the Southwest.

Notice was also taken of 3,788,000 bushels decrease of the United States wheat visible supply, with total stocks the smallest since 1927.

Wheat Closes Unsettled.

Wheat closed unsettled at the same as Saturday's finish to ⅜ higher; corn, unchanged to ⅜ lower; oats, ¼ to ¾ up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 5 cents.

An unsteadying influence as to all grain late in the day was word that corn had become about 5 cents out of line for overseas shipment. The reason assigned was erratic fluctuations of British exchange.

Earlier, the course of wheat and other cereals had a decided upward trend much of the day, assisted by strength shown in securities. Decreasing stocks of wheat at domestic primary centers, notably 1,126,000 bushels falling-off at Kansas City, were also given attention, with reports current that holders were reluctant to sell, because of indications of scanty prospects of replacing of supplies except at higher prices.

Buying Support Thin.

Attempts of wheat traders to take profits at the day's peak revealed that new buying support for the market was thin. As a result of ensuing setbacks, enough fresh purchasing then developed to cause a rally at the last.

Some stress was put on the fact that stocks of wheat afloat for importing countries had been reduced to almost a record low level.

In the corn market an increase of 1,743,000 bushels of the corn visible supply had a late bearish influence. Oats were responsive to 692,000 bushels decrease of the stock of oats in sight.

Provisions averaged higher with cereals, despite setbacks of hog values.

Commodities Decline Slightly In November

New York, Dec. 11.—Wholesale commodity prices showed a further slight weakening during November, as measured by the Dun & Bradstreet Monthly Commodity Price Index. The December 1 index was $8.8126, and compared with $8.8480 for November 1. This was a fall of four-tenths of 1 per cent and followed a decline of 2.2 per cent from October 1 to November 1. The present index, however, is 28 per cent higher than on December 1, 1932, and is 38.7 per cent above the low point of March 1 this year, but shows a drop of 2.6 per cent from October 1, which was the high point for 1933.

The slight decline in the latest index was due principally to recessions in prices for foodstuffs, leather and tobacco. Six groups advanced during the past month, while six declined and one, the oils group, remained unchanged. Among the groups that showed decreases were listed breadstuffs, livestock, provisions, fruits, hides and leather and miscellaneous. The textiles and metals groups showed fairly good gains over the month, while moderate increases were recorded in the coal and coke, naval stores, building materials and chemicals and drugs groups. Of the 96 commodities entering the index 27 advanced, 25 declined, and 44 remained unchanged.

The Dun & Bradstreet Monthly Commodity Price Index (the sum total of the price per pound of 96 articles in common use) for December 1 and November 1 of this year, and December 1 a year ago, is given herewith in group form:

Germany Buys More Textile Machinery

Imports of textile machinery into Germany registered a substantial increase in the first nine months of 1933 as compared with the corresponding period of last year, according to Consul J. F. Huddleston, Dresden, in a report made public by the Commerce Department.

This development, the report points out, is noteworthy in that imports of such items have experienced a continued and marked decrease during the last five years.

Total receipts of textile machinery by Germany in the period from January to September, 1933, amounted to 2,043 metric tons valued at 3,018,000 reichsmarks, as against 1,770 metric tons valued at 2,903,000 reichsmarks in the corresponding period of last year.

The principal item of imports in the current year was machines for the preparatory processes in textile manufacture, the bulk of which was supplied by Great Britain.

Imports from the United States, the report shows, fell off sharply in the 1933 period, amounting to 70 metric tons as compared with 78 tons in the first nine months of last year.

(Reichsmark equals 39.38 cents at current quotations.)

Peoples National Bank Opens in Maryland

Hancock, Md., Dec. 11 (Spl.).—The Peoples National Bank of Hancock opened today on a 100 per cent basis.

It is the successor of the First National, which had been in the hands of I. G. Robinson, conservator, since the bank holiday.

The new bank has taken over the assets of the First National and practically all the depositors of the First National are among the 500 stockholders in the new bank, which has a capital of $60,000. The new institution is conducting business in the banking house formerly used by the First National.

Louisiana County Leads In Small Fruit Output

Tangipahoa Parish, Louisiana, led the entire country in the value of small fruits harvested in the United States, according to the census of 1930, principally because of its commanding place in the production of strawberries. Plymouth County, Massachusetts, was second (principally due to cranberries); Pierce County, Washington, third (owing its position chiefly to raspberries; Los Angeles, Calif., and Hillsborough, Fla., fourth and fifth (principally strawberries).

This release gives the 50 leading counties based on the value of all small fruits harvested. Twenty States were represented in the list, Oregon leading with six counties.

China Raises Domestic Made Cigarette Tax

Effective December 5, the Chinese tax on domestically manufactured cigarettes was increased to 160 yuan per case of 50,000 for those selling at wholesale less tax for more than 300 yuan per case, and to 80 yuan per case of 50,000 for cigarettes selling at wholsale less tax for not more than 300 yuan per case, according to a radiogram received in the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache Julean Arnold, Shanghai. This tax is not applied to imported cigarettes, which continue subject to the regular import duties and surtaxes.

Formerly cigarettes selling at wholesale less tax at more than 260 yuan per case in Shanghai, or at more than 270 yuan per case in outports, were taxed at the rate of 95 yuan per case, while cigarettes selling at wholesale less tax at not more than 260 yuan per case in Shanghai, or at not more than 270 yuan per case in outports, were subject to a tax of 55 yuan per case.

(The yuan at present exchange equals approximately United States $0.33.)

Wool Prices Decrease in Past Week

New York, Dec. 9.—Prices of wool top futures on the New York Wool Top Exchange registered a decline of 25 to 27 points during the past week. Trading was much less active than in the previous week and interest seemed to be centered somewhat more in the distant months. Boston spots continued to hold unchanged at 111.5 cents. Business in that market was exceedingly quiet. Topmakers report that mills are taking delivery very slowly and that stocks of tops at commission combing plants are quite large.

Futures abroad closed irregular. While prices at Antwerp advanced five-eighths to one and one-eighth pennies, prices at Roubaix showed a decline of 10 to 20 centimes. Bradford spot quotations were off a full penny on the lower grades and off a half to three-quarters of a penny on the higher grades of tops.

Continental Sugar Plant May Be Reorganized

New York, Dec. 11.—A reorganization plan for the Continental Sugar Co. was announced today by the committee for holders of the first mortgage 7 per cent sinking fund bonds.

The committee is asking for deposits of the bonds not later than next Saturday. The United States District Court for the northern district of Ohio, the committee reports has set December 18 for the sale of the company's properties.

Cotton Gains Slightly Under Trade Buying

December Closes at 10.04 as General Market Rises 3 to 6 Points.

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Cotton was slightly higher today on trade and commission house buying influenced by firm cables and reports of improving business conditions. Partial mid-afternoon reactions under Southern selling and declines from the best in wheat and stocks were followed by a steadier tone later. March which had sold off from 10.22 to 10.16 closed at 10.18, with the general market closing steady at net advances of 3 to 6 points.

Trading was moderately active, but an early advance of 5 to 11 points appeared to bring in a little Southern selling as well as local realizing and prices worked off a few points from the best.

With the Government gold price held at $34.01 traders were more inclined to look to the more favorable reports of business conditions published over the week-end.

Market Rules Steady.

The market ruled relatively steady within a narrow range during the greater part of the morning. Firmness of the dollar in relation to foreign exchange in the early afternoon brought in a little liquidation which was probably most pronounced in the January position.

January eased from 10.06 to 9.98 or a point under Saturday's closing basis, while later positions at the lows were still 1 to 4 points net higher. Renewed commission house buying and covering by early sellers caused rallies of about 1 to 4 points from the lowest in the later trading.

Although spot houses reported the basis firm in the South, spot business was described as quiet and little or no news was received from the South to influence the market.

Exports today, 38,355, making 3,704,483 so far this season. Port receipts, 27,187. U. S. port stocks, 4,080,570.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was steady today on covering and scattered local and commission house buying, promoted by the steadiness of other commodities and stocks. Closing prices were 2 to 5 points net higher. Sales, 12 contracts.

The Census Bureau report, showing the consumption in November, will be issued on Wednesday morning. The trade anticipates a disappearance of 250,000 barrels, compared with 257,000 in October and 245,180 in November last year. Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Electric power output in the Rocky Mountain district continues to show large gains over last year, reflecting, according to power authorities, well sustained activities in the Western mining regions. Since the Edison Electric Institute began to report separately for the Rocky Mountain area last August, the weekly gains have ranged from 22.1 per cent to 30.6 per cent over 1932, being 30.3 per cent higher for the week ended December 2. More active mining operations at the silver and gold properties within the zone are believed to have contributed most heavily to the increased consumption.

Sales of the first 18 chain store systems to report for November reveal the best comparative gain this year, the total being 15.1 per cent ahead of the same month last year. Mail order systems showed the largest group gain, with an increase of 26.4 per cent, and specialty and department stores were next with a 23.1 per cent increase.

New State and municipal financing scheduled for next week amounts to $4,490,101, compared with $49,206,813 this week, the Daily Bond Buyer says. The largest offering will be State highway treasury anticipation debentures of Montana, amounting to $1,250,000, on Friday.

A committee has been appointed from the New York Cotton Exchange to consider plans for forming a futures market dealing in print cloth. No definite conclusion as to the advisability of establishing such a market is expected for several weeks, a member of the committee said, because of the vast amount of work entailed. A similar project was considered several years ago, but was abandoned as impracticable.

The Stock Exchange has ruled that the common stock of Grigsby-Grunow Co. be stricken from the list on December 12 because of failure to maintain transfer facilities.

George K. Sargent, vice president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., stated today that the company will set aside approximately $30,000,000 for dividends in 1934. The sum is slightly less than was paid in 1933, he said, due in part to a decrease in the number of policies on which dividends will apply, and in part to a policy of conservation to further safeguard the company's surplus.

Sales of the Grand Union Co. for four weeks ended December 2 amounted to $2,235,306, contrasted with $2,163,689 in the same period last year, an increase of over 3 per cent.

Heavy melting steel scrap has been advanced 25 cents a ton at Philadelphia and at other principal centers the trend is said to be firmer. When bids on railroad scrap are opened the price situation will be more clearly defined.

Steel Operation Expected to Drop Slightly

Sentiment for Advance in Output Later Is Growing Stronger.

Cleveland, Dec. 11.—After rising fractionally last week to just above 29 per cent, practically double the rate of a year ago, steelworks operations were scheduled to ease off moderately this week, states the magazine Steel.

Regardless of inherent strength, suspension of production over the holidays invariably is pronounced. This year, however, the approach is greatly tempered, and barring unforeseen abrupt curtailment between now and Christmas, December output of steel will approximate that of November.

Excepting in tin plate, consumers of which have stocked heavily prior to the sharp advance in the market, there is no sign of a precipitate year-end reaction. Sentiment generally continues strong, and the outlook for the first quarter is the best since the industry plumbed depression depths.

Scrap Is Stronger.

Scrap, which usually is barometric, is encouragingly stronger. "Key" grades in the more important centers are up 50 cents to $1 per ton. The recent Pennsylvania Railroad list elicited an increase of $2 per ton on melting steel over a month ago.

Dealers are covering their positions, and some are assembling tonnages for steelworks for spring. A sale of 5,000 tons of steel has put the market in Philadelphia up $1. Steel's index of steelworks scrap is up 58 cents to $9.91, first rise since August.

Although structural steel awards last week, at 10,768 tons, were almost 4,000 tons below the weekly average for the year, inquiry is broad and the funds being pushed out by work-creating agencies at Washington are approaching the point where they will mature into steel tonnage. Bids are now in on 12,000 tons for New York Central Railroad grade-crossing elimination in Syracuse, N. Y. Federal engineers are asking bids, January 3 to February 6, on 6,000 tons for Mississippi River locks. Reinforcing concrete market also is being energized by Federal projects.

Orders Are Expected.

Steel orders are expected to follow the P. W. A. loan of $3,500,000 to the New Haven and $2,000,000 to the Lehigh Valley for reconditioning equipment, first of a series of advances for this purpose. The Pennsylvania opens bids December 20 on additional requirements, including wheels, axles, pipe, &c.

It will be March before an appreciable portion of the Pennsylvania's distribution of 100,350 tons of rails is rolled; the Bethlehem company booked 44,350 tons, Carnegie 42,000 tons, Illinois 8,000 tons and Inland 6,000 tons.

Erie will place 30,000 tons of rails and 12,000 to 15,000 tons of track fastenings in January, 6,000 tons more than its releases for 1933. A Federal loan will sanction the Pittsburgh & West Virginia award of 1,000 tons of rails to the Carnegie company. Pennsylvania track fastenings have been distributed over many makers.

Orders for Cars.

Kansas City Southern has awarded 100 box cars to its own shops. General American Transportation Corporation has booked 10 tank cars for Mathieson Alkali Works and 4 for the Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation. More than 800 mine cars are now on inquiry. Northern Pacific is expected daily to close on 12 locomotives. November freight car awards totaled 533, against 2 last November. For 11 months the comparison is 2,144 for this year and 1,689 for last.

Broadening inquiry for oil storage tanks makes the outlook for plate mills in this direction the best since 1930. New York Shipbuilding Co. is figuring on one or two tankers for the Standard Vacuum Transportation Co., each requiring 5,700 tons of plates, shapes and bars, chiefly plates.

Public works demand for construction equipment has also quickened the plate market. The Navy is about to distribute 6,365 tons of plates, 7255 tons of bars and 2,995 tons of shapes.

Auto Releases Broader.

Automotive releases for steel, principally sheets and strip, are somewhat broader, but short of the volume expected later this month for January delivery. Appreciably higher specifications for cold-finished bars, wire rods and wire products reflect approaching higher prices. In the East, the desire to conserve cash for the December 31 showing is restraining specifying. Bolt and nut prices have been extended.

Steelworks operations last week were: Wheeling 41 per cent, off 10 points; Cleveland 54, up 6; Buffalo 24, off 6; Birmingham 52, up 32; Pittsburgh 24, up 2; Chicago 25½, off 2½; Eastern Pennsylvania 18½, up 1½; Youngstown 35, unchanged; New England 81, up 6; Detroit 36, unchanged.

Steel's iron and steel composite was unchanged last week at $32.42 and its finished steel composite at $51.10. As previously noted, the scrap composite rose 58 cents to $9.91.

Tobacco Sales In Bristol Area To Open Today

Southwest Virginia Looks to Markets for Aid of Farm Finances.

Bristol, Va., Dec. 11 (Spl.).—Southwest Virginia farmers will watch with more than usual interest the opening tomorrow of burley tobacco markets throughout the Appalachian region, particularly those of Abingdon, seeing in prices expected to be paid for the weed their one ray of hope for an even financial break for the year.

Sales will get under way tomorrow morning, and on the Abingdon market alone are expected to reach 15,000,000 pounds, or about twice last year's total and half again as much as the total for 1931.

Tobacco sold on the Johnson City, Greenville, Morristown and other East Tennessee and Southwest Virginia markets may boost this figure to almost 100,000,000 pounds.

Tobacco Is Conditioned.

Mild showers in various sections of the southwest last week afforded farmers an excellent opportunity to put their tobacco in condition for market, and hundreds worked feverishly at grading tasks.

Many completed their work during the week and hauled their finished products to market, and many others followed suit over the week-end.

The floors of Abingdon's warehouses today were reported as being practically filled, with many trucks and wagons still in the vicinity of the warehouses, their drivers awaiting an opportunity to unload. There is still room, however, for the accommodation of several thousand pounds at each of the houses, it was stated.

Better Roads Aid.

Expected to be a big factor in facilitating the delivery of the tobacco to the various markets this year is the greatly improved conditions of highways, traversing the burley belt, particularly the new Bristol-Gate City and Abingdon-Hansonville roads, upon which work was but recently completed.

Farmers residing in the Gate City and Hansonville sections can deliver their tobacco to the Abingdon market in but a fraction of the time required last year, when these roads were under construction.

Burley tobacco is one of the leading cash crops produced in the Bristol area, and even though the average price does not run over 15 cents a pound, as confidently expected, the sale of 15,000,000 pounds will mean the placing of more than $2,000,000 in the pockets of the growers, the greater portion of which will be spent immediately in this section. A large part of this money will be expended in the stores of Bristol, it is believed, though stores in other smaller towns of this area will benefit proportionately.

Grocery Trade Continues Rise On Enlarged Volume of Staples

Gains in August, September and October Put at 20 Per Cent; Blanket Code Said to Enable Independent Stores to Record Advances.

New York, Dec. 11.—The grocery trade has shown continued improvement since June, with an unusually good month reported in November.

The volume of wholesale trade, however, decreased during the latter month, due to the overbuying during the months immediately preceding in anticipation of further price advances.

The enlarged volume has been principally in staple goods, although currently more attention is being given to fancy items. For August, September and October the gain over last year's comparative total is placed roughly at 20 to 25 per cent, and for the ten months ended October 31 at approximately 15 per cent.

Although the unseasonably mild weather during the fall months cut down materially the consumption of groceries, which was reduced further by the liberal receipts of farm produce, fruits and like items, higher prices have enabled most divisions of the trade to operate more profitably, in spite of the increased overhead under the NRA code.

Since the adoption of the blanket code, under which stores are operating, pending the approval by the Administration of the master code of the food and grocery trade, sales and profits of the independent stores have been increased, and both wholesalers and retailers consider the present outlook more favorable than at any time since the first half of 1931.

A continued improvement in demand seems certain during the next three or four months, and the new master code is expected to protect both retailers and the public by steadying prices somewhat nearer consumers' income, according to a survey of the grocery trade, which has just been completed by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Sales Total Higher.

The volume of wholesale business is exceeding last year's comparative total by 15 to 30 per cent, depending on the district and the items handled. A certain percentage of this gain can be attributed to the distribution of beer during the summer months, but even the small retail grocers appear to be doing better and are buying regularly in larger quantities than heretofore.

In the last ten years there has been a radical change in the method of operation of wholesale grocers. Each wholesaler continues to function along the usual lines, but in addition has had to adopt methods to enable customers to compete with the large cash-and-carry chains.

To this end each wholesaler or group of wholesalers has organized a voluntary association of retailers, or added a cash-and-carry department in which sales are on a close profit margin. The wholesalers are pushing the cash-and-carry business, and most of them intend ultimately to do a large portion of their business on that plan.

Promotion of Business.

These voluntary associatoins do cooperative advertising in the daily newspapers and conduct other forms of business promotion. This method puts more of the business on a cash basis, reduces the amount of receivables, which wholesalers heretofore have had to carry, and enables the retailers to buy and sell at lower prices.

The best-selling items have been staple goods, flour, sugar, lard, dried beans, peas, and other cheap edibles. There is an enlarged demand currently for holiday merchandise, such as nuts, figs and similar specialties. While fancy groceries have been selling better than last year, the movement has not been unusually large.

Retailers in some of the industrial centers report the trend of demand uneven, due to employment conditions, which although improved, have not been stabilized as yet. Workmen in many cities are taken on for a few weeks only to be laid off again.

Breakfast Food Demand.

The important manufacturers of breakfast cereals are meeting with better demand than a year ago, sales being maintained, in part, by Nation-wide advertising through magazines and the radio. The wider employment resulting from the program of the Civil Works Administration already is being felt by retailers, as the bulk of this money is being spent for foodstuffs and clothing.

Following the trend of other commodities, prices of practically all grocery items rose rapidly during the early summer, but have declined somewhat since that period. Most foodstuffs still can be purchased at moderate prices, although such items as flour have advanced, on account of the processing tax, and imported goods, such as teas, spices, and some of the dried fruits, have advanced on account of the depreciated dollar abroad.

The situation in retail meat prices continues unsettled, as quotations have been forced down to where beef and its products are close to their all-time lows.

Building - Loan Reserves Gain; Realty Revives

Associations Report Turn in Business; Losses Being Trimmed.

Increasing strength behind investments in real etsate and in mortgage institutions of the savings variety is indicated by financial statements of building and loan associations reporting to their National organization, the United States Building and Loan League.

Word has come to local associations from Chicago, headquarters of the league, that these associations now have the savings of 10,000,000 shareholders invested in some $7,000,000,000 of mortgages on homes. Their reports on financial conditions in representative States are most reassuring.

Mounting reserves against real estate losses in the associations and a pick-up in sales of the residential properties which are on their books are also shown. The latter development will tend toward a firming of home prices, Philip Lieber, Shreveport, La., president of the league, holds.

Reserves Built Up.

Associations in the States reporting show for December 1 reserves ranging from 4.6 per cent to nearly 14 per cent of total resources, the average ratio of reserves to resources being around 7 per cent. These figures include contingent reserves and undivided profits accounts.

As of January 1, 1933, they were 4.27 per cent when reports from all associations were in. The comparison, it is explained, shows the strictly conservative policy which has been characteristic of these institutions in the past 11 months.

Decrease of 1 per cent to 3 per cent in November in real estate holdings of the associations indicated that buyers are being found for homes in good condition. More and more building and loan association managers are putting properties in condition by modernization and repairs before they put them on the market.

More Men Employed.

Mr. Lieber indicates that at least a beginning is being made in the direction of reemploying men who used to make their living from the building trades and that financing must be available to maintain or recreate any significant market for home properties.

"In return," he states, "we can not hope to have people put their money into the financing institutions for investment unless conservative, sound management is demonstrated in these associations.

"The procedure which we called conservative a few years ago scarcely comes under that classification today.

New High Levels.

"Therefore, it is noteworthy that in all of the associations from which we have last month's data, the reserves against losses are notably higher than they were in 1932.

"These new high levels have been reached in spite of the writing off of losses which was a natural concomitant of any institution's operations in the real estate loaning field during the past few years.

"When any institution can substantially strengthen its financial position in periods of stress, it will naturally be better able to give its shareholders a fair return along with safety when the depression is passing. By maintaining adequate reserves today, building and loan associations start toward recovery without asking new shareholders to assume depression liabilities."

Canada Moves To Stronger Trade Position

Employment Totals Rise as Business Outlook Brightens.

New York, Dec. 11.—The entire picture of trade conditions in Canada has been changed during the last eight months, with outlook favorable for the gains holding, which will permit most lines of business to close the year in a stronger financial position than at the end of 1932.

While the increase in industrial operations has not been spectacular, the fact that employment totals have risen for seven months in succession over those of the month preceding is indicative of the progress being made in this direction.

A reflection of the widening employment and larger buying power is present in the steady rise in retail distributive totals, which now are starting almost vertically upward again, being bolstered by the heavy demand for winter merchandise in country districts and the expanding purchases of Christmas goods in urban centers.

Retailers Gain Courage.

Retailers this week were particularly encouraged by the sharp increase in sales of novelty and so-called luxury items, in addition to the fuller movement of medium and higher-priced items in household electrical appliances, radios, hosiery, gloves, stationery, and haberdashery.

Sales of men's clothing continue to run in excess of last year's volume by a higher percentage than estimates made at the beginning of the season indicated, while women's heavy coats, fur garments, winter sporting goods, and lumber-camp supplies are going into consumption at an accelerated rate, according to dispatches to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., from branch offices located in the chief commercial and industrial centers of the Dominion. The volume of business thus far recorded is indicative of the largest retail sales total for any December in fully four years, despite the unfavorable situation in some of the Western sections, where crop failures were general. The improvement in wholesale markets during the week was confined chiefly to dry goods, groceries and boots and shoes. The trend of wholesale prices has been steadily upward for the last four weeks.

Liquor Sales to U. S.

While the repeal of prohibition in the United States is expected to enable Canadian distillers to dispose of 40,000,000 gallons of surplus whisky, which now is held in bond, it is doubted that demands on Canada for supplies will be heavy once the American distillers get into production.

In some quarters it is held that tourist traffic may decline, particularly in border cities, now that the arid era in the United States has been brought definitely to an end. The industrial situation, however, particularly in the eastern part of the Dominion, continues to grow brighter, being supported by the good schedules being maintained by textile and shoe factories and the larger output of paper mills.

The heavy industries, such as iron and steel, have not shared noticeably in the upturn, because of the dullness in the building trade. There has been some improvement in the latter, as constructvie awards in November exceeded those of the comparative 1932 period for the second successive month.

Exports Still Improve.

Export trade continues to improve, with movement of live stock of good proportion, although the closing of navigation from the St. Lawrence is expected to curtail shipments. Besides, a flurry in cattle prices has unsettled somewhat the domestic market, which will have its reflection on exports to the British Isles.

Export sales of lumber to Great Britain have not been in such large volume in the past decade or more, and the outlook in the lumber market indicates continued improvement. Stocks of lumber on hand have been reduced to skeleton proportions, and a considerable volume of new cutting would be necessary to restore stocks to normal, even through new orders were not being received in good volume.

Crawford Trial To Open Today In Quiet Scene

No Disorders Expected; Defense to Claim Jury List Is Illegal.

By Frank Getty.

Leesburg, Va., Dec. 11.—Virginia justice, disparaged by the late Federal Judge Lowell, of Boston, but moving in a setting of quiet order unmarked by emotion, will try a Negro fugitive here tomorrow for the murder of two white women.

Closely guarded by State police, George Crawford, the 32-year-old Negro suspect, will be brought from Alexandria to Leesburg's little red brick courthouse to be tried for the slaying of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley, socially prominent matron, and her maid, Miss Mina Buckner.

In addition to Judge Lowell's declaration that the Supreme Court of the United States would find a verdict of guilty unconstitutional because there will be no Negroes on the jury, the defense is prepared to move the challenge to the array and to quash the venire. Judge James L. McLemore, of Suffolk, will be on the bench.

An array of 104 white men will be on hand tomorrow morning, and from the venire of 100 the jury will be selected if the motion of Charles H. Houston, acting dean of Howard University Law School and chief of the defense counsel, is denied.

105 Witnesses Called.

The defense motion will be backed upon a claim that duly qualified Negroes were available but were deliberately left out when the list of 300 names was made up by three jury commissioners. From this list were drawn the 100 veniremen, most of them farmers from the surrounding countryside.

One hundred and five witnesses, including more than 80 Negroes, have been summoned and the preliminary challenges and motions by the defense are expected to occupy a greater part of the first day.

On the eve of the trial, Leesburg was not only calm, but indifferent. The crime which shocked the Nation and stirred Virginians to a great man hunt two years ago, was committed on the estate of Mrs. Ilsley, near Middleburg, about 15 miles away. Crawford, picked up in a Boston suburb a year ago, was extradited after lengthy proceedings.

Commonwealth's Attorney John Galleher has summoned his witnesses for the trial itself, including Lieut. Edward J. Keating, of the Boston Detective Bureau, and Harold Kraus, a Boston police stenographer. Keating and Kraus are to testify to a confession Crawford is alleged to have made while in a Boston jail.

The defense, however, has not summoned any witnesses for the trial itself. The 80-odd witnesses have been called merely to testify regarding the exclusion of Negroes from the array and venire.

Judge Alexander Ill.

Among those summoned by Houston is Judge J. R. H. Alexander, of Loudoun County, who directed the drawing up of the original list of 300 by the jury commissioners. Judge Alexander was ill tonight and will be unable to appear.

Houston said tonight that the first move will be an attempt to prove Negroes were deliberately made unavailable for the petit jury.

If successful, the defense hopes to then have another list of possible jurors made up immediately, with qualified Negroes included.

A sizable crowd is expected at the courthouse tomorrow morning, but there is no suggestion anywhere of possible disorder. Sheriff E. S Adrian said he would have only his customary six deputies on duty at the trial, and that all necessary protection would be afforded the prisoner, who will be escorted to and from Alexandria Jail by heavily armed State police.

Arrangements have been made to limit attendance at the trial to seating capacity of the courtroom, approximately 300. On the opening day veniremen and witnesses will occupy a majority of the seats.

Wealth to Be in Evidence.

Among the State's witnesses and the spectators will be wealthy residents of the Middleburg fox-hunting colony, who, when the women's murdered bodies were found in a lodge on the Ilsley estate, rode through the rolling countryside in Virginia's most unusual man-hunt.

Paul Boeing, brother of Mrs. Ilsley, who discovered the bodies, hacked and brutally beaten, on the morning of January 13, 1932, will be the first witness called by the prosecution. He will tell of finding the door broken in and the women's bodies, clad in night attire, lying in blood. Apparently the women had retired, or were about to, when the intruder broke in. They were slain, it was evident, in a terrific struggle.

An element of mystery was also added, for Mrs. Ilsley's valuable rings had not been taken, nor had the money from her purse. The comparatively insignificant jewelry of Mina Buckner, however, was missing.

Among the immediate suspects was Crawford, formerly employed by Mrs. Ilsley, and for whom she had sworn out a warrant, charging him with breaking and entering on Christmas Eve, 1931. A year after the murder, Crawford was picked up and, according to State's Attorney Galleher, made a confession of the crime, which he refused to sign the next day.

Coroner Investigates McCormick Fire Deaths

Whitchurch, Hampshire, England, Dec. 11 (AP).—A coroner's jury investigating the two deaths in the fire which destroyed the home of Leander J. McCormick, of Chicago, Saturday, today found that the Duke de la Tremoille was accidentally asphyxiated trying to leave the house and that Capt. J. H. B. Rodney died of a heart paralysis while under an anesthetic.

MAN'S imagination is easily captured by a slogan, Ulrey J. Biller, National Federation of Federal Employes' official, points out in the federation fight for restoration of Government pay. "The slogan is a mighty weapon, whether it be true or inherently untrue," he says. "Federal employes have been the victims of slogans, epithets, and misrepresentations during all the years, and especially so since the beginning of the 'economy hysteria.'

BAKER

"Perhaps the most dangerous and devastating slogan ever used against the Federal employes is 'Balance the Budget!' When the organized wealth of the whole country unitedly demanded that the budget be balanced, there was no escape, and the Congress had to pass whatever legislation necessary to this end. The pay cut was incidental to the balancing of the budget; for it was demanded by the inner economic government as one of the essential steps in economic recovery."

Mr. Biller outlines improvements obtained by Government workers through the N. F. F. E. in the past 16 years and pleads for employes to join the organization.

"For anyone to maintain that if the N. F. F. E. had been affiliated with some other organization the pay cut could have been avoided is downright stupid and demonstrates childish ignorance with reference to economic conditions of last year."

The labor leader urges employes to "wake up," declaring that even the merit system, one of the achievements claimed by N. F. F. E., is threatened.

House Group Backs Pay Lift, Delays Action

Committee Puts Off Issue to Jan. 2 as Employes Cite Higher Costs.

House Republican leaders yesterday joined with Democrats in requesting early relief for Federal employes from the 15 per cent pay cut, as the House Independent Offices Appropriations Subcommittee temporarily laid aside the issue until January 2.

In his first statement since returning to Washington, Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, House Republican leader, came out in favor of restoring at least part of the cut in January.

Earlier, the subcommittee, with a clear majority supporting early relief, listened to the pleas of Federal employe groups, then passed over the question until the day before Congress convenes.

Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the subcommittee, who himself favors full salary restoration, explained a decision was postponed to enable the Labor Department to complete its cost of living survey on which salary revision must be based.

At the same time, the Treasury-Postoffice Appropriations Subcommittee opened hearings on 1935 estimates allowing for only a 10 per cent cut in July, instead of the prevailing 15. This subcommittee also must determine whether to provide full salary restoration when it marks up its bill.

Republican Leader Snell told The Post last night he believes it "only fair" to Federal workers that the amount of the cut be scaled down.

"When Congress agreed to a pay slash, administration spokesmen told us as soon as living expenses increased the cut should be restored," Representative Snell said.

"There is no doubt in my mind that living expenses in the Distrcit have materially increased. Based on the statements made to us last session, I think Federal employes are entitled to an adjustment of salaries on January 1."

A similar position was taken by several members of the House Appropriations Committee, regardless of party, including Clarence J. McLeod (Republican), Michigan; John J. Boylan (Democrat), New York.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, led a delegation of workers before the subcommittee. He urged full restoration of salaries, restoration of 30 days annual leave and repeal of the so-called administrative furlough.

Other witnesses asking repeal of the pay-cut included Michael P. Finnan, secretary of the National Association of Letters Carriers, and Mrs. Margaret Worrell, president of the League of the American Civil Service.

Election Probe "Just Politics," Says Overton

Louisiana Senator Calls Report of Committee's Partiality "Aburd."

Senator John H. Overton (Democrat), Louisiana, yesterday charged the Senate subcommittee investigation of his election primaries was "merely another local anti-Long campaign for State political purposes."

In what he said was his first "public utterance" since the investigation was launched, Overton declared that "those who preferred the charges, under which this investigation was made, know that they have no case against me."

"The charge of the opposition that the committee was partial to me is absurd," Overton said in his four-page prepared statement.

"Federal investigators have, for months, honeycombed Louisiana to find witnesses against me, and none for me, and four of the five weeks of the committee's hearings were assigned to the opposition to produce evidence; only one week was given to me for rebuttal."

Overton charged former Senator Broussard, of Louisiana, was "used as a 'dummy' contestant" in the so-called "anti-Long campaign."

"Not a single witness in all the thousands of pages of evidence has testified that I am guilty of any fraud, corruption or irregularity, or that I am in any respect unworthy of membership in the United States Senate," he said.

"The slight and flimsy evidence of a few acts of purported fraud at some of the New Orleans polling precincts was completely refuted, and the most that can be said of this phase of the case is that the record discloses some minor irregularities of a description that generally occur in all the States of the Unoin."

NRA Staff Wins Johnson Smile "Passive Help"

General Pounds Fist, But Finally "It's Ball Game;" Grants Union Pleas.

After a stormy conference with members of the new N. R. A. Employes' Union, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, yesterday indicated he would grant their demands for less overtime work and ruled no one should suffer for joining the organization.

Johnson phoned a subordinate in the presence of the committee and admonished him not to "interfere" with the union, after E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, charged at least one worker had been "coerced" for union activity. The administrator repeatedly pounded his desk with a brawny fist in apparent defiance at the outset of the conference. His attitude soon became friendly, however, and the dozen committee members were smiling when the 20-minute session ended.

Babcock handed Johnson a resolution adopted by Lodge No. 91, A. F. G. E., composed of more than 200 N. R. A workers, requesting the agency to cease working employes overtime except in an emergency

Puffing a cigar, Johnson read the resolution and commented:

"Everything in that seems all right."

"Is it a ball game, General?" Babcock asked.

"Right," he responded.

Earlier, Johnson seemed annoyed by Babcock's blanket request for improvement of working conditions. The administrator contended Congress was responsible for the manner in which the NRA has been operated. The employes' leader insisted the administrator should be able to regulate hours.

"What about my overtime?" Johnson asked.

"You're the brains," Babcock evaded.

Babcock later submitted to Johnson a letter of resignation from a member of the overtime committee, whose name was not divulged. The writer said he had been asked to resign from the delegation by William J. Hoff, compliance division executive, on the grounds that he was an executive and could not properly perform his duties and at the same time be a member of the committee. Mr. Hoff also was represented as advising the man "it would be preferable for me to sever my connection with the union altogether." He has not quit the union, however.

After reading the letter, Johnson phoned Mr. Hoff, indicating his disapproval of the latter's action.

Explaining his position, Johnson declared he would give his "passive help" to the union. He added he would receive any committee of NRA or union workers with a grievance to air. He stressed his belief that all Government employes were entitled to belong to unions.

IndustrialBank Plan to Reopen Wins Approval

65 Per Cent Release by Franklin National Is Forecast.

A plan to reopen the Industrial Savings Bank was said yesterday to have gained the approval of Treasury Department officials.

At the same time, it was predicted that the Franklin National Bank, another restricted institution, soon would release 65 per cent of their money to depositors.

Approval of the plan of the Industrial Savings, the only colored banking institution in the city, was made public by its reorganization committee. The committee reported the office of the Comptroller of the Currency regards the plan to open as "fair and equitable."

Committeemen contemplate procuring a charter under District laws for a new bank with a capital of $50,000 and $15,000 surplus. Shares will be sold at $13 each, $10 for capital and $3 for surplus. Arrangements are to be made through sale of acceptable assets and a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make available to depositors approximately 35 per cent of their balances. W. H. C. Brown, president and conservator of the bank, then will liquidate remaining assets to pay further dividends.

The committee stated it will submit the names of directors and officers to the Treasury Department as soon as details are worked out and a stock-selling campaign will be started.

Although Treasury Department confirmation of the amount was not forthcoming, it was understood that 65 per cent of the deposits of the Franklin National Bank will be made available on its reopening as a part of the new Mechanics-Franklin Savings Bank.

William F. Kelly, counsel for the bank, and Treasury Department representatives are engaged in drafting a form which, when approved by the department, will be mailed to depositors.

On these forms, depositors will agree to the trusteeing of 35 per cent of their deposits for gradual liquidation and to the consolidation of the bank with Mount Vernon and Washington Mechanics Savings Banks. Sale of $200,000 stock as the Franklin Bank's share in the merger also is necessary.

Depositors of the Mount Vernon Savings Bank are now agreeing to the trusteeing of 60 per cent of their deposits so that 40 per cent of them may be freed. This bank is now selling $150,000 stock for the merger and the Washington Mechanics Savings Bank, an unrestricted institution, will sell $50,000 worth.

Bandits Take $61 From Truck Driver

Victim Slugged at Garage; 2 Thugs Flee in Auto.

Two colored bandits cornered James Franklin Howard, 30, Negro, of 921 T street northwest, an employe of the Weyman Ice Cream Co., 3040 Fourteenth street northwest, as he was taking a truck from the firm's garage at 3006 Thirteenth street northwest, slugged him and escaped with $61.50 in cash and a check for $32.50 late yesterday. They escaped in an automobile.

The money was the property of the company. Howard was taking it to deposit in a bank. He told police that as he entered the garage one of the men hit him on the head while the other stuck a revolver in his ribs. They then snatched his wallet and fled.

Police took Howard to Freedman's Hospital, where first aid was administered.

Parking Sites Urged on CWA

Digging Underground Auto Havens Downtown Held Big Need.

Building of underground parking spaces in the downtown section for 50,000 automobiles was proposed as a Civil Warks Administration project yesterday by the National Board of Trade.

The board's plan was outlined in a letter written by Fred A. Berlin, secretary, to the District Commissioners.

The underground parking spaces would be built under public parks and could be operated in a manner to pay cost of construction in a few years, Mr. Berlin said.

Locations proposed were the park between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, between Pennsylvania avenue and the Commerce Building, part of the Ellipse, part of the Mall, Judiciary Square, and Lafayette Square.

Much congestion downtown, Mr. Berlin said, is due to drivers cruising about seeking parking space. The underground spaces would improve conditions, he added.

Department Store Damaged by Fire

Small Blaze at Hecht Firm Causes $1,000 Loss

Flaring up in a large outside display window, a smoldering fire late yesterday brought all downtown fire apparatus on a double alarm to Hecht's Department Store, Seventh and F streets northwest.

Smoke blanketed the first floor of the store, sending hundreds of customers scurrying and causing upper floors to be cleared as a safety precaution. No one was injured.

Harold H. Levy, a vice president of the firm, tentatively estimated damage at $1,000 last night. Workmen started refurnishing the men's furnishing's section, to which the blaze was confined.

New Survey to List Antique Buildings

Four members of a national advisory committee to supervise a survey of the country's antique buildings, was appointed yesterday by the American Institute of Architects. Three others will be named this week by the Office of National Parks, Buildings and Reservations.

The four named yesterday are Dr. Leicester B. Holland, chief of the fine arts division in the Library of Congress; William Graves Perry, of Williamsburg, Va.; Albert Simons, of Charleston, S. C., and John Gaw Meem, of Santa Fe, N. M.

Conceived as a civil works' project to aid 1,000 or more idle persons with architectural training, the plan will embrace every type of antique structure in the United States and Alaska.

City of Wicked Queen Jezebel, Who Painted Her Face, Found Harvard Savants Dig Up Tower Confirming Story in Old Testament.

By Howard W. Blakeslee.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 11 (AP).—The might of wicked Queen Jezebel—she who painted her face—as told in the Old Testament, is confirmed by announcement from Harvard University of a massive granite tower found in her capital city, Samaria.

The tower, buried more than 2,000 years ago, was excavated by an expedition headed by Dr. Kirsopp Lake, professor of history at Harvard. It is made of blocks nearly as long as a man, a yard thick. Its walls are 12 feet thick.

The discovery was made through calculations that one of the four corners of the ancient citadel wall should lie in that place.

Studies of Prof. Lake show that Jezebel's husband, Ahab, king of Northern Israel, maintained a trade route via his capital between India and the Mediterranean. Tyre was the important Mediterranean seaport and Jezebel was one of the princesses.

"Ahab took to wife," says the First Book of Kings, 16:31, "Jezebel, the daughter of Ethbaal, king of the Sidonians, and went and served Baal, and worshiped him—and Ahab did more to provoke the Lord God of Israel to anger than all the kings of Israel before him."

Jezebel brought with her to Samaria 450 priests of Baal. They were slain by the Prophet Elijah, as told in First Kings, 19:40. For this Jezebel notified Elijah she would kill him.

But Elijah fled and prophesied Jezebel's death at the hands of Jehu. Jezebel outlived Ahab, and Ahab's son Joram was king when Jehu, a captain of the host, rebelled.

The Bible tells how Jezebel "painted her face and tied her head" and looked out of a window at Jehu and called him names. Jehu shouted back 'who is on my side?' and there looked out to him two or three eunuchs. And he said, 'throw her down.' And they threw her down."

There Jehu trod her to death under his horses.

Pieces of Eight — A Polite Pirate — By Charles B. Driscoll

As Capt. Teach stepped aboard the pirate ship Eagle on a friendly visit, he was greeted with almost as much ceremony as is required by a United States Navy admiral today on a similar mission. The Eagle's boatswain "piped him aboard."

The two pirate captains made an impressive couple as they shook hands. "Happy to see you aboard, Capt. Teach. I am Richard Worley, captain of the Eagle. Mr. Richards, I'm delighted to have you here with your captain," Blackbeard stared.

"What's all the soft soap for?" queried Blackbeard. "Are you a pirate, Capt. Worley? You talk like a schoolmaster at evensong with the ladies." Worley smiled, "It's the influence of my fair guests, captain. Yes, I'm a pirate, but new at the trade."

"But come, gentlemen," said Worley, "I would have you drink a health with me!" He led Teach and Richards to a little canopy that had been erected on the after-deck. Under this protection were chairs, a table and a barrel of wine.

No Use.

Though my bundle has departed for an unknown, distant bourne, I am blithe and happy-hearted, for it is no use to mourn. It will never help to worry or to wear a tear-wet face, so I just refuse to hurry to the dismal wailing place. I am thinking of the lilies and the daisies and such things, so I do not have the willies that sad contemplation brings. There is always something pleasant to be thinking of, I wot, even though the times, at present, are depressed and badly shot. There is always something cheerful to engage the human mind, and all subjects dark and fearful it is well to leave behind. There are other things than sorrow which deserve a passing look, and a stricken gent may borrow solid comfort from a book. He may herd with cheerful voters on the streets or in their flats, and discuss the latest motors or the styles in Sunday hats. There are countless ways of keeping man's attention from his grief, so he'll have no time for weeping and no chance to kick and beef. If our fortunes proved deluding it is all in vain to yelp, and there is no use in brooding over things we cannot help.

Moorman's Stocked With Brook Trout

Charlotttesville, Va., Dec. 11 (Spl.).—Prospects of excellent fishing next year were given foundation by the arrival here today of a truck load of 1,000 brook trout. Izaak Walton League members accompanied the truck to Moorman's River.

Another truck load scheduled to arrive at 10 a. m. Wednesday will be assigned to Ivy Branch, C. A. Green, former head of the Izaak Walton League, said.

Game officials of this vicinity expect other truck loads for the Moorman's River area and at least three—perhaps four—for Ivy Branch this year.

Judge Places Death Guilt On Lynchers

Missouri Jurist Assails Men Who Took Youth From Jail.

St. Joseph, Mo., Dec. 11 (AP).—In a stern denunciation of lynch law, Circuit Judge J. V. Gaddy told a special grand jury today that every person who was active in the mob that lynched Lloyd Warner, Negro youth, the night of November 18, "is guilty of murder in the first degree."

The jurist called upon the grand jury to return indictments.

"It is necessary to punish guilty members of that mob, if we are to protect ourselves against the danger of the mob," Judge Gaddy said.

"The man who pulled off the jail door, or any man who helped to break into the jail, is just as guilty as the man who placed the rope around Warner's neck."

The Negro, charged with attacking a white woman, was seized after the mob had stormed the county jail for several hours. He was beaten, stabbed, hanged to a tree near the courthouse and his body burned before a crowd of 8,000.

"Every man who was active in that mob is guilty of murder in the first degree and should be indicted," Judge Gaddy charged the grand jury, which is made up of prominent citizens.

"The danger of the mob lies in the letting down of individual responsibility," said the jurist. "It wasn't a desire to administer justice which sent the mob against the jail. It was hate, the passion that engenders any murder.

"When you find the real leaders of that mob, you will find men of not much higher moral standards than the man they murdered. If you had been there that night, I doubt if you could have picked 12 men from that mob who would have had the courage to convict Warner as members of a jury in a court of justice. Their action was an assault on the institutions you pay for to administer justice."

Lanzetta's Status Causes Trial Delay

Representative Barred as Counsel for Defense.

Appearance of Representative James J. Lanzetta, of New York, as attorney for a defendant in a white slave case in District Supreme Court yesterday, caused a postponement of the case until today.

A member of Congress cannot represent a defendant in a criminal action "because the United States is a party to the proceedings." The admonition is statutory.

Christy Lattarulo, an associate of Representative Lanzetta, will take over the defense, it was announced. Three men, Mike Borelli, Louis Rolando and Arthur Biazzi, are charged with bringing girls here from Pennsylvania for alleged immoral purposes.
